WARDEN'S WIFE NOT MURDERED, LATEST THEORY

Alleged Irregularities in Coroner's Inquest Are Pointed Out.

DENIAL FROM OFFICIAL.

Joliet, Ill., June 26.—There is a possibility that Mrs. Edmund Allen, wife of the warden of the Illinois penitentiary, whose body was found in the ruins after fire had destroyed her bed last Sunday, might not have been murdered.

William C. Wunderlich, coroner of Will county, annoyed at reports that the inquest into the death had not been conducted regularly, tonight said Mrs. Allen's body had been removed from the prison to the home of William D. Heise without his official permission.

Not Permitted to See Body.

Dr. Reinhard, physician for Coroner Hoffman of Cook county, was summoned by Wunderlich to examine the body, but was not permitted to see it, the coroner said.

Doubt as to the guilt of Joe Campbell, the negro convict charged with the murder, spread rapidly today. Coroner Wunderlich declared he had been guided through the week largely by the desires of James Allen and other friends of the warden, and the verdict holding Campbell had been reached at their desire, he said.

Dr. Reinhardt's Story.

Dr. Henry G. W. Reinhardt, coroner's physician of Cook county, last night corroborated Coroner Wunderlich's statement to the effect that he was not permitted to see the body.

"I was not called down to Joliet, but went of my own accord," said Dr. Reinhardt. "I know Coroner Wunderlich very well and I went down there on Monday believing that I might be of some assistance to him. It was a great surprise to me when I reached there and offered Mr. Wunderlich my services to learn that he was taking no hand in the inquest.

Different in Cook County.

"Here in Cook county those things seem sort of strange. Mr. Wunderlich is a very intelligent and a very reliable man, and, being an old friend of those affected by the tragedy, I suppose he did not want to interfere against their wishes. He told me the whole investigation was in charge of Mr. Heise, a former state's attorney, and that if I wished I might offer my services to him. I called Mr. Heise up on the phone that night and told him I would like to help out with the medical side, as I had had a great deal of experience.

"In response to my proposal, Mr. Heise replied everything had been done that could be done in a medical way. The next day I met Mr. Heise at the prison. I told him I would like to view the body to see if there was anything I could do to further the investigation. Mr. Heise again informed me they had already done everything necessary."

Never Saw Fractured Skull.

Coroner Wunderlich and his deputy, Coroner Eugene Harris, were found late last night and interviewed by the Joliet correspondent for THE TRIBUNE.

Mr. Wunderlich was asked whether he knew positively that Mrs. Allen's skull had been fractured.

"No," he replied, "I never saw the fracture. I took the testimony of Dr. John P. Benson and Dr. Haldane Cleminson on this point."

"Does your assistant know that her skull was fractured?"

"I do not think he would be competent on that point in the event of trial."

"Then neither of you could go on the stand and testify that you know her skull was fractured?"

"No."

"What gave you the impression that murder had been committed?"

Found "Leakage" in Head.

"When my assistant embalmed the body with Undertaker Frederick M. Chamberlain, he detected a leakage somewhere," replied the coroner. "He examined and found the leakage was in the head. It was then that he and Chamberlain reported the discovery to the physician, Dr. Benson."

Undertaker Chamberlain was then asked this question:

"Did you order Dr. Benson to perform an autopsy?"

"Not exactly," he answered.

He said that Harris, the deputy coroner,

W. P. Harrison to Wed Working Girl on July 3

Bachelor Brother of Former Mayor Met Her at Music Fete.

RUSH THE MARRIAGE

William Preston Harrison, the bachelor of the Harrison family and brother of the former mayor, has succumbed. And it's a pretty romance.

He will marry on July 3, at the Auditorium hotel, Miss Ada M. Sandberg, who has earned her own living for years.

She is 30 years old. He is 45.

Mr. Harrison met her five years ago at Wicker Park hall at a musical festival given by the Norwegian society. She was then a bookkeeper for Stoll & Westerlin, bookbinders.

Romance of Art Institute.

Young Mr. Cupid also got on the job and slipped the tidings to Mr. Harrison, that Miss Sandberg was something of an art student and that she spent many of her leisure hours at the Art institute.

Thereupon Mr. Harrison, so the story goes, got busy with the art catalogues and references and got together quite a vocabulary himself. Then it happened that Mr. Harrison and Miss Sandberg, instead of wasting their spare hours, hied themselves to the Art institute and there compared their ideas as to what real art is, incidentally learning to admire each other's opinions.

So it came about that Mr. Harrison and Miss Sandberg were engaged some eighteen months ago, but they kept it quiet until a few days since, when some of the family friends learned of it.

Living with Niece.

Miss Sandberg has been living with her niece, Mrs. Louis Harrof, 1006 North Drake street.

The marriage was not to have taken place until later in the year, when former County Judge John E. Owens was to have been best man. But the former mayor, who yet exercises the right to order his bachelor brother around, wants to go fishing, and he didn't want to come back here for the wedding in August, so it was arranged to dispense with the best man and all other ceremonials and just get married quietly.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison will make their home at the Auditorium on their return from a six months' honeymoon in the west.

HUERTA HEADS NEW REVOLT, CHIEFS SAY

Leaders to Meet in El Paso and Plan Attack on Mexico, Report.

JUAREZ "BOUGHT UP"?

El Paso, Tex., June 26.—Gen. Victoriano Huerta tonight is headed for the Mexican border and it is believed with trouble in his heart.

Following rumors which began to spread rapidly this afternoon that he would head a new revolution and attack Mexico, his agents tonight declared a meeting of the cientifico-federal faction would be held here tomorrow or Monday. Gen. Huerta is expected to arrive here tomorrow morning.

Gen. Huerta's departure from New York this week was ostensibly for San Francisco, where, he said, he intended to visit the exposition.

Fourteen former Huerta generals, including his son-in-law, Gen. Luis Fuentes, are in El Paso tonight with 300 former federalist officers and 5,000 soldiers.

Monday Date of Invasion?

A Huerta sympathizer said that Monday was the day set for the invasion of Mexico. Juarez will be the first objective point. Pascual Orosoco, a Huerta leader, just returned from New York after conferring with Huerta and American bankers financing the cientificos, claimed to have the Juarez garrison practically bought out.

"We are going to fight this revolution with silver instead of bullets," said Orozoco. "We have already got our missionaries working in the ranks of the different factions."

Quietly the Huerta factionists have been storing arms and ammunition at secret depots along the border and near here, it has been learned. In one local warehouse United States officials have discovered fourteen machine guns and a large quantity of ammunition. United States soldiers are guarding the place to prevent smuggling of the munitions.

Plans Long Under Way.

Plans for the new revolt have been under way in El Paso for weeks, it was learned tonight. The Huerta party has an office in a downtown building.

Delegates from the San Antonio and New Orleans committees of the Cientifico party are expected to arrive in El Paso tonight for the meeting with Huerta. Many prominent Mexican fugitives from other cities in the United States have arrived here during the last two days.

The reported purpose of the meeting is to complete plans for the organization of a counter revolution in Mexico against the Villa and Carranza factions. Because of the weakness of the Villa party, the Huerta invasion would first be directed against Villista territory, from El Paso. The substantial financial backing the Huerta party apparently has, is expected to have a big influence over the other factions whose currency has depreciated to almost no value.

On account of threats made against Huerta's life by Villa and Carranza factionists, the cientificos are arranging to bring the aged dictator into El Paso secretly.

Washington Receives News Coolly.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—State, treasury and war department officials took definite confirmation of reports that Gen. Huerta was on his way to El Paso cooly tonight.

They would not talk, but it was evident that all plans had been made for enforcing neutrality on the border. That there would be nothing done until it was certain an overt act was planned was understood, however.

GEN. FRENCH SLATED FOR RETIREMENT, PARIS RUMOR.

Reported His Health Unfits Him for Service and He Will Be Called Back to England.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, June 17.—Field Marshal Sir John French, commander of the British army around Ypres, is likely soon to find himself kicked upstairs and out of the way, following the recent precedent in Lord Kitchener's case, according to reports from the front.

Following the British custom, it is predicted there will be as little scandal as possible and that it will be postponed till the last possible moment.

But announcement is expected shortly that Sir John's health has given way and that he has received the Order of the Garter, or some similar honor, and retired to England.

NOT A SOUL INJURED.

World's Greatest Auto Derby Sets Five New Records; Receipts $400,000.

GRANT MAKES NOT ONE STOP.

BY FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

He drove an automobile for 500 miles today at a pace faster than it was ever driven before.

He shattered a basketful of world records, won prizes aggregating $23,000, fought his way to supremacy over twenty worthy rivals, and crossed the tape an easy winner of Chicago's first auto derby.

SAFEST, FASTEST TRACK.

The performance opened the fastest, safest automobile racetrack in the world—the Chicago speedway. With the new records established, Chicago steps into first place in the field of international motor racing, bar none.

In his Peugeot French racing car Resta traveled the 500 miles in five hours, seven minutes, and twenty-seven seconds. His average rate of speed throughout the race was 97.6 miles an hour.

Once, in a hair raising spurt that spread the silence of fear over 85,000 spectators, he circled the two mile course at the speed of 107 miles an hour.

ALL BREAK RECORDS.

Every one of the ten winning cars that followed Resta to the finish line made better time than the world's record established at the Indianapolis speedway on Memorial day by Ralph De Palma.

Porporato, another native of the land that once held all the high speed chariot records, finished second. He drove a hard race in his English racing car, the Sunbeam special. Traveling at the rate of 96.5 miles an hour, he devoured the 500 miles in five hours, ten minutes, and fifty seconds. He won the second prize of $10,000.

The first American to receive the checkered flag was Rickenbacher, who sent his American made racer, a Maxwell special, across the line for third place. An average rate of 95.8 miles an hour brought the foremost American racer $5,000 prize money.

GRANT NEVER STOPS.

Grant, in another Sunbeam car, earned fourth place and prize with a wonderfully maintained speed of 95.6 miles per hour. In making his remarkable endurance drive, Grant stopped not once at the pits. This veteran of the speed course stopped neither for gasoline, tires, repairs, water, nor food.

With his gas tanks empty in the last half of the last lap of the long grind, he coasted in across the line and smashed the world's nonstop competitive record. The performance is startling to all motordom.

Earl Cooper and Gill Anderson, in their Stutz bulldogs, finished fifth and sixth with respective averages of 94.9 and 94.4 miles per hour.

Alley in a Duesenberg was seventh, Chevrolet in a Delage was eighth, Burman in a Peugeot was ninth, and J. Cooper in a Sebring was tenth at the finish. The Sebring, which was the last car in the money, traveled the distance at an average speed of 90.3 miles an hour, higher by a mile than the old world's record.

NOT SINGLE ACCIDENT.

No one was killed. No one was injured. Neither death nor injuries to either racers or spectators occurred to interfere with the first day's laurels of the new safe and sane and speedy racecourse. There was not one accident.

Drivers and motor experts had only one observation to make on the events of the day. They were in unison on the point that the Chicago Speedway board track is the fastest and best in the world, and that its records will never be approached on tracks of different construction.

"It's an epoch in motor racing," said the manager of one old racing team. "Today's performance on the Chicago speedway will cast a shadow on all future races on the old style courses. The course of wooden construction has proven itself the speediest and the safest."

WITNESSES GET DIZZY.

The terrific speed of the cars was the subject of comment and computation among the spectators, particularly those owning automobiles. The use of the adjective "dizzy" to describe motion became a reality from the onlooker's point of view.

Two women were brought to the field hospital for treatment on account of spells of dizziness which at first were considered cases of sunstroke. The spectator who would keep his eyes on the track at one of the turns while car after car whirled across his vision, would get the sensation best described by the phrase, "everything's going 'round."

Women standing on the tops of automobiles were forced in many instances to assume more secure perches, for fear of falling to the ground. An elderly man in a large machine parked on the fourth quarter turn analyzed the feeling and remarked on the speed.

OMAHA MAN TELLS FEELING.

"I live in Omaha," he said. "On the Milwaukee railroad Omaha is just 488 miles from Chicago—not quite as far as the distance run in this race. Now, the fastest train between here and Omaha is the Denver Limited. I expect to take it tonight.

"That Denver Limited doesn't hesitate anywhere along the road, and it never blows a tire, but it takes it just thirteen hours to get there. That's its schedule running time, and it's good time, too.

"But here are these lads making that distance and more in only five hours and seven minutes. I don't like to use slang around the young folks, but that's going some."

GRAY MIST, THEN SUNSHINE.

A slight gray mist that bore prospects of a possible rain was hanging over the wooden saucer when the twenty-one cars passed the stands on the flying start. Half an hour later the mist had lifted and the sun was shining.

Instead of mist, a flimsy circlet of pale blue smoke seemed to hang over the course of the speeding motors. It was belched in thundrous overwhelming volleys from the blazing exhaust pipes. From out these clouds, that were the densest on the turns, cars would hurl into the clearer air of the stretch.

All that could be seen above the sloping hoods of the motors were the oil and dust grimed faces of the two human beings that were hanging on to the thing. The daze of the motion made the faces look like death masks.

After the first 200 miles a dark streak began to appear on the yellow wooden flooring of the track. In the pits the assistants called it the "grease strip." On the turns the presence of this oil spelt grave danger for the drivers.

As this peril of skidding increased the drivers began avoiding it by taking the more secure footing higher up the side of the saucer. When the cars would bunch on the third and fourth quarters after a brush down the back stretch the grand stand owners of field glasses would get their share of the thrills, constantly enjoyed by spectators in the parking spaces on the turns.

SMELL OF BURNING RUBBER.

The smell of burning rubber was strong on the curves. The throwing or blowing of a tire at these danger spots looked as though it was being ripped off by some giant invisible hand.

The casings in their final giveway would lose all semblance of circular form as they were hurled through the air, stiff and rigid as iron pipes.

Strips of hard rubber tread would be thrown high. Many of these pieces were caught by those in the parking spaces and held as trophies of the day.

Obstructions of this kind that fell on the track were removed by militiamen, daring and wary enought to dart out after them.

FEW BRAVE "DANGER ZONE."

No complaints were heard concerning the presence of the "danger zones"—the forty foot strip which separated all spectators from the whirling racers. To all appearance it was as uninviting as the ground between two opposing trenches. Its only inhabitants were soldiers and photographers and course officials.

The frequent brushes between Resta in his Peugeot Special and Cooper and Anderson, the remaining members of the Stutz teams, were sources of continual excitement for the spectators. When the blue Peugeot and the white Stutz would roar into the stretch the grand stand would suddenly become alive. Although Resta a number of times gained the first quarter turn in the lead of the Stutz, there was seldom a time when the Italian driver's mechanician could look back and not see the American car pushing close behind him.

DETAILS OF THE RACE; RESULTS OF THE BATTLE.

Bob Burman delayed the race for half an hour when shortly before starting time it was announced his Peugeot had a broken piston rod.

Resta, favorite for the honors, wasted no time and shot off in front with terrific speed. It was certain that if the Italian pilot maintained the pace of his first three laps he would break all world's records. His first six miles were covered at the astonishing speed of 107 miles an hour, but Resta was not without competition. Closely dogging his rear wheels were three Stutz machines.

When the fourth lap opened up Wilcox, in a Stutz, was less than five yards behind the leader. When both flashed by the grandstand at the next lap they were racing neck and neck.

Resta Blows a Tire.

This battle for the lead continued until the twenty-eighth mile, when Resta blew a rear tire and as he pulled up to the pits, Wilcox passed him for the leadership. Within thirty seconds Resta was off again chasing the flying Wilcox.

Up to the thirty mile mark eight machines stopped at the pits, most of the trouble being due to the severe action on rear tires.

During the next 20 minutes the lead changed with amazing rapidity. Even the scoreboard men proved too slow in giving the actual position of the speed demons. For four miles from the twenty-fourth to the twenty-sixth lap, Carlson, in a Maxwell, was in front, but a stop at the pits placed E. Cooper, Stutz pilot, a leader.

Resta, traveling at speed well over the century mark, flew past a half dozen cars as if they were standing still. At the fifty-fourth mile the Italian was in front and still leading at the seventieth mile, when he stopped again at the pits for tire trouble. It took thirty seconds for the change.

For the first time in the race Porporato, driver of an English Sunbeam and regarded as "Dark Horse" of the race, shot to the front at the eightieth mile. His time was 54:09.11

For the next 20 miles there was considerable jockeying for position, Resta, E Cooper and Porporato changing leads often.

At the eightieth mile, Wilcox in a Stutz was forced from the race because of a broken transmission. Shortly before Chandler, in a Chicago made Ogren, dropped from the competition because of a broken crank shaft.

E. Cooper First Prize Winner.

Earl Cooper won the first $1,000 when he finished in the lead at 100 miles. The association offered $1,000 to each driver leading at each 100 miles. In addition to winning the prize Cooper set a world's competitive record of 104 miles an hour, beating De Palma's time at Indianapolis by nearly eleven miles.

Cooper's Stutz retained its lead at the one hundred and twentieth mile, despite one stop for gas. Resta was less than a lap behind, Porporato in a Sunbeam third, and Van Raalte, also in a Sunbeam, fourth.

Resta again assumed the lead at the start of the one hundred and fortieth mile, covering the distance in 1:25:27, or an average of 98.3 miles per hour. Porporato was second in 1:25:49, with a mark of 97.74 miles an hour. E. Cooper's Stutz was third in 1:26:13, or 97.4 miles an hour.

Curves Get Slippery.

Owing to the unusual amount of oil necessary, a considerable amount was spilled on the turns, causing them to become slippery. This naturally was cutting down the speed, as the drivers were cautious on these turns.

Henning, in a Mercer, was removed from the action during his one hundred and thirty-sixth mile, ignition trouble being the cause. He pulled up weak at the pits, tried to remedy the trouble, but quit when he found the case hopeless.

The record for 200 miles went by the boards when De Palma's time, made in a Mercedes at Indianapolis Memorial day, was broken. Ralph's time at the Hoosier speedway was 2:14:29.59, about five miles slower than Resta's time.

Resta added a mile to his speed during the next twenty miles, covering eighty aps in 1:36:44, or at an average of 99.29 miles an hour. This was nearly ten miles an hour faster than the Indianapolis records.

Resta Gets Second.

Resta grabbed off the second $1,000 for leading at 200 miles. The remainder of the leaders followed in this order: Cooper, Stutz; Porporato, Sunbeam; Rickenbacher, Maxwell; Van Raalte, Sunbeam; Chevrolet, Delage; and Anderson, Stutz.

For the double century the Italian demon averaged 97.8, while Cooper hit the trail for a 97.1 mile an hour clip. The remaining ten followers were from one mile to twenty behind the two leading contenders.

At the 220 mile mark Resta boosted his average to 97.95 miles an hour. From this time on the race settled itself to a question of durability of machine and tires.

Within ten miles of the half way mark Resta was comfortably in the lead, with Porporato second, nearly eight miles behind. Up to this time the Italian driver of the French car had been averaging 98.3 miles an hour. The time was 2:26:48. Grant in a Sunbeam crept up to third place, while Earl Cooper was relegated to fourth. The battle for second position was a beautiful one, as less than a lap separated three machines.

Porporato Pushes Hard.

Stops for tires, gas, and oil caused Resta to lose considerable time during the next score of miles. As a result Porporato crept up dangerously close to first place, the figures of the first three machines being: Resta, Peugeot, 2:40:01, average 97:50; Porporato, Sunbeam, 2:41:16, average 96.76; Grant, Sunbeam, 2:42:04, average 96.20.

Again the average speed was cut down and the reason assigned was the appearance of the hot sun. It was found the terrific speed literally burned up the tires, causing too frequent stops. Different tactics were adopted slowing up the speed.

Resta Leads at 300 Miles.

Traveling at record smashing speed, Resta carried off his second $1,000 prize for leading at the end of 300 miles. His average was a few points above ninety-seven miles, beating De Palma's Indianapolis performance by over four miles. At the Hoosier course De Palma went the triple century distance in 3:19:32.87.

At 320 miles Resta continued his mercurial flight, reeling off the miles at an even ninety-eight per hour. His time then was 3:15:00.65, about six miles better than the previous world's record.

In the meantime Harry Grant in a Sunbeam, former Vanderbilt victor, was showing the most consistent performance. Getting off to a bad start due to mishaps to his tires principally, Grant lost considerable ground during the first hundred miles.

After righting his machine Grant chased the leaders with a determination which brought wild cheers from all sides of the park. For 116 laps up to 320 miles he had not made a single stop, being only two and one-half laps behind Resta at that time. After his game fight Grant was forced to stop for oil, and Porporato, also in a Sunbeam, displaced him.

In the meantime Resta turned on extra juice during the next twenty miles and covered 340 miles in 3:28:05 at an average of 98.5 miles an hour. His increased speed forced him far to the front and at that distance was leading Porporato by eight miles, while the English Sunbeam driver was leading Grant, the American Sunbeam pilot, by forty seconds for second place.

The official time for 340 miles was as follows: Resta, Peugeot, 3:28:05, average 98.5; Porporato, Sunbeam 3:32:03, average 96; Grant, Sunbeam, 3:32:25, average 95.99; Rickenbacher, Maxwell, 3:32:47, average 96.62.

The Fast Pace Continues.

Within 140 miles of the finish Resta was 'eading his challengers by 3:22. His time was 3:40:46, with an average 98 miles even. Porporato still remained in second place, but was given considerable worry by Grant, who now cut down his lead to thirteen seconds for second place.

Another special $1,000 prize for leading at 400 miles was won by Resta for the third time, and with it another world's record. Resta covered the distance in 4:04:49, which was nearly twenty-three minutes faster than De Palma's 4:27:17.17 at Indianapolis. Resta's average was increased to 98.03 miles per hour. This increase was due to several brushes in which Resta was engaged. First E. Cooper challenged him, and, after traveling three laps at a terrific speed well over 100 miles, Cooper was forced to quit, as his gas ran out.

Then Porporato took up the issue. At the time the Englishman was 3:40 behind his Italian rival with Grant in third place, still a dangerous contender. All four eaders up to this stage of the grind were far ahead of De Palma's mark of 89.9 miles an hour.

At 420 Miles.

Resta, ever watchful, refused to allow any of his competitors to gain on him, and at 420 miles he was leading by 3:56 over Porporato. The time of the four leaders was: Resta, Peugeot, 4:16:58, average 98.1; Porporato, Sunbeam, 4:20:32, average 96.7; Grant, Sunbeam, 4:23:02, average 95.7; Rickenbacher, Deusenberg, 4:24:19, average 94.2.

With only sixty miles remaining Porporato cut loose at an amazing speed and had cut Resta's lead down to 3:19. The Italian's average was 98.1 miles an hour, which was exactly two miles an hour faster than Porporato's time. Resta's actual running time was 4:29:04 while his rival's time was 4:32:23.

Rickenbacher jumped to third place at this distance with 4:35:13, an average of 95.9 miles, while Grant was shoved into fourth place.

Whatever chance Porporato had went a-glimmering in the last forty miles. The Sunbeam driver blew a front tire and lost a precious minute at the pits. Resta's time at 460 miles was 4:41:12, average 98.2, while Porporato's was 4:44:33, average 96.99.

During the four hundred and sixty-second mile Chevrolet skidded on the turn leading into the home stretch. His car was checked at almost right angles with the fence. Righting it, he went to the pits, fixed the damage, and was away in a little over a minute.

The Race Is Resta's.

Unless an unforeseen accident happened, Resta was assured of a world's record as well as victory for his day's work. At 480 miles, just one score of miles from the finish, Resta covered the distance in 4:53:28, twenty-five minutes faster than the record.

For the last 150 miles he had been going at a steady clip. Ten miles from the finish Resta took on oil and gas, wasting only 28 seconds. Porporato was second twenty miles from the end, in 4:58:43, average 96.4 miles. Rickenbacher was third in 5:00:45, average 95.8 miles.

Cheered by thousands, Resta crossed the finishing line in 5:07:27, with an average of 97.6 miles per hour. The time was 26:28:51 faster than De Palma's former record and nearly 8 miles per hour better.

Porporato finished second in 5:10:50, with an average of 96.5 miles per hour.

The Next in Line.

Grant, in a Sunbeam, was fourth in 5:15:35, average 95.06.

Rickenbacher, in a Maxwell, dashed over the line in third place in 5:14:02, average 95.8 miles per hour.

Cooper, in a Stutz, was fifth in 5:15:59, average 94.9. Anderson, also in the Stutz, carried his machine into sixth place in 5:19:00, with an average of 94.4.

Alley's Duesenberg crossed the line in seventh place in 5:29:04, average 91.7 miles.

Eighth place went to Chevrolet, in a Delage, average 91.5 miles, and ninth honors went to Burman in a Peugeot, time 5:28:55, average 91.3 miles, and J. Cooper finished as the last prize winner in 5:32:10, an average of 90.3 miles.

DOGGED RESOLVE AND HIS NERVE WIN FOR RESTA

Analysis of the Big Auto Race Shows How the Drivers Took Places.

BY REED L. PARKER.

Dario Resta's record smashing victory yesterday may be directly attributed to the stamina and speed of his Peugeot and his own skill and judgment. Like De Palma at Indianapolis weeks ago he ran true to form. He entered the lists favorite and never gave cause for doubting his ability to merit finally the confidence placed in him.

He drove as he had planned. Even his estimate of the probable average iterated two days before the race was accurate. He expected an average of ninety-seven miles an hour or better, and to this pace he drove within six-tenths of a mile.

There was nothing mechanical in his driving. His average always was as elastic as necessity dictated. In the early part of the race, when the Stutz team, abetted by Porporato, attempted either to drive him to destruction or steal an unsurmountable handicap if he attempted to lay back, Resta held his own.

Victory His Goal All the While.

The average had no place in his mind. He was bent on winning, whatever the pace might be, and never except for a few laps following tire changes did he permit any driver a serious advantage.

The pace was weird for the first century. More than a hundred miles was crowded into the first hour by Cooper and Resta. Resta was forced to change three tires. None of these changes required more than thirty-five seconds and the Italian quickly restored his car to its position by averaging, when need called, 107 miles an hour for a lap.

It simply was impossible to run him off his feet. The speed of his car was five miles an hour faster than that of his swiftest competitor. He had the courage to use the excess, wherein lies the explanation of his rivals' failure to lose him.

Porporato His Chief Worry.

He admitted Porporato bothered him more than the Stutz team, with whom he expected his most serious struggle. Porporato's cunning came near undoing his brother Italian at least twice during the afternoon. The Sunbeam pilot, realizing his car was nine miles an hour slower than the Peugeot, tried vainly but persistently to lead his rival into dangerous pockets. Resta was alive to his peril and despite almost continuous efforts on the part of every driver whose car was fast enough to stay in the running for even an instant, he weathered all with rare judgment, levying on his experience and common sense.

The Stutz challenge of the Italian ended about the 300 mile mark when Earl Cooper, who had been pressing him for a hundred miles, stopped at the pits because of heating. He found his radiator leaking. Knowing the game was up, he took no chances against finishing and stopped frequently thereafter for water. Porporato took up the challenge where Cooper left off. Resta set a terrific pace when he discovered Porporato's intentions and gradually shook his challenger off.

Drives at Steady Pace.

After 400 miles he drove at an average of about ninety-seven miles an hour. He evaded pockets and shut off on all the turns. Even in his next to the last lap, when a tire gave way, he showed no inclination towards being drawn into recklessness. The tire was changed slowly. He went away from the pits easily and breezed around his last two circuits, although Porporato, driving as if possessed, was less than three laps behind him.

Porporato, who finished the Sunbeam second, drove a dogged race. In the lead only for a few scattered laps, he fought it out to the end. He came out of the ruck early but tire trouble kept him jockeying from one position to another. In the first hundred miles he stopped four times for right front tires. This kept him continually in a fight with the Stutz cars.

At first he lacked confidence, as he admitted after the race, and as his driving showed. Later he began to take more chances. His brushes with Resta from then were fought to a finish, the speed of the Peugeot alone giving Resta the power to keep his pursuer off.

At times Porporato's efforts were so reckless they assumed the appearance of foul driving. Officials frequently directed eyes to his car as it swirled high around the turns to be shot down the banks into the stretches for the slight advantage that would push him for an instant ahead of the Peugeot. Resta once executed a sharp skid to evade hitting the Sunbeam. For sheer courage and gameness Porporato was the sensation of the race.

Rickenbacher Gets Good Place.

Rickenbacher's Maxwell, the first American car to finish, skipped into third position with so little struggle that it was not until the race was nearly over that other team managers realized their danger.

On the night before the race Rickenbacher wasn't even considered a dark horse. He hasn't finished a race since he won the 300 mile speedway classic at Sioux City a year ago. That he was the man picked to drive Resta to grief was the universal belief. Instead Carlson, his teammate, took up this task, and Rickenbacher conserved his motor until the last hundred miles, when he turned loose all its speed and slipped into third position.

Grant's Record Without Parallel.

Grant's feat of driving 500 miles without stop has no parallel in the annals of motor car racing. With a six cylinder Sunbeam which has been through a disastrous fire and which he had rebuilt he gave a wonderful exibition of consistent driving.

Grant entered into no brushes. He allowed the faster cars to have their way—and tire trouble—and he rolled quietly, steadily on to fourth position, despite the fact his gasoline gave out on the last lap and he was forced to coast across the tape.

Take a Chance and Lose.

Cooper and Anderson, at the direction of their team manager, Harry Stutz, risked all in their challenge of Resta and lost. It was win or nothing with Stutz, and for 300 miles he was a likely contender. With Wilcox to lead his companions at the start, and with Cooper to pick up the battle when Wilcox's hopes collapsed with the breaking of a piston, Stutz looked a possible winner.

At 100 miles Cooper was an even money bet, with the lead in his hand. Tires unable to stand the strain of a 104 mile an hour average first forced him to give up the lead. Tires bothered Anderson also, and when Cooper was compelled to stop for a radiator leak the third Stutz pilot was unable to pick up the gauntlet.

Alley in his Duesenberg and Chevrolet in the Delage never were challengers of the winner. Their ambition was to finish in the money, and it was gratified. Burman, fearing the piston which he was forced to fit immediately before the race would eventually give him trouble did not open his Peugeot until the latter part of the race. "Wild Bob" knew from the beginning victory was not to be his, but gamely fought on until he assured himself his motor would last. Then it was too late, but determined to be up in the money, he finished strong.

Joe Cooper's performance with the unknown Sebring was unlooked for. He nursed his motor throughout the race, content with waiting for the others to come back to him.

Here's the King of Perpetual Motion.

Grant, the veteran driver, and his enduring Sunbeam Special, landed in fourth place through a combination of conservative economical driving and the elimination of all lost time at the pits.

Grant entered the race with full tanks of water and gas. His mechanician carried four oranges, a bottle of drinking water, and four hard boiled eggs, shelled.

Grant's hands never left the wheel of the car throughout the five hours and fifteen minutes that the Sunbeam flitted about the course. Grant felt his way into the curves and gave thought to the strain on his tires.

Grant proved his generalship. He never stopped once. He coasted under the wire with tanks dry and engine hot, but among the winners. Grant had broken the world's nonstop competitive record. He had moved the automobile one notch closer to perpetual motion.

STABBED ON STREET; DIES.

An unidentified man, supposedly a Lithuanian or a Pole, was stabbed twice and fatally wounded last night in a fight with five men in front of 4630 South Paulina street. He staggered to the New City station at Forty-seventh and Halsted streets and fell dead in front of the sta-

ROMANCE LED RESTA TO U. S.

Italian Driver Came to This Country to Wed Sister of Spencer Wishart.

A romance which had its beginning in Europe brought Dario Resta, winner of yesterday's race, to America. The love affair begun abroad led to the marriage in New York last January of the driver to a sister of the late Spencer Wishart, who met his death during the Elgin road races last August.

Following his marriage Resta signed a contract to drive for the Peugeot Import company, which sells Peugeot automobiles in America. His first mount was the car Georges Boillot drove in the 1914 race at Indianapolis. With this he departed for San Francisco, where in February the grand prize and Vanderbilt were to be run. His first victory was in the grand prize, when he startled both Europe and America by outdriving the flower of American talent in a rain storm. A week later he repeated with the same car, winning the Vanderbilt on a dry course. On June 1 he finished second at Indianapolis with the car he drove here yesterday, losing a brilliant fight to Ralph De Palma.

Wins Three Out of Four.

Since January he has started in four of America's greatest racing classics, winning three and finishing second in one.

Resta's agreement with the Peugeot company gives him 50 per cent of his winnings. The total amount of the prize money won by the Italian for Peugeot totals $45,000—Vanderbilt, $6,000; Grand Prize, $6,000; Indianapolis Sweepstakes, $10,000; Chicago Derby, $23,000.

Resta was born at Livosno, Italy, thirty-two years ago. His parents emigrated to England when Dario was 1 year old. He was educated in the public schools of his adopted land. His first experience with automobile motors was in the Panhard shops near Paris. Here he secured the rudimentary knowledge which today makes him recognized as one of the best technicians in the game.

Begins Career in 1907.

Resta began his racing career in England in 1907. His first mount was a privately owned Mercedes, with which he won the Montague cup on the Brooklands track, but was disqualified. Later that year he won three important events on Brooklands and the Prix de la France, which was run over the Boulogne course.

His victory at Boulogne won him a place on the Austin team which was sent to France for the Grand Prix in 1908. Resta finished ninth in a field of forty-eight starters. He then joined the Errol Johnson team, failing to finish in the Isle of Man race. In 1911 he finished third in the Coupé l'Auto. The next year he cast his fortunes with the Sunbeam team. Driving in the small car division of the Grand Prix, he finished one minute behind the winner, his teammate, Rigal. An error in timing cost him the race. Later in the year he averaged seventy-five miles an hour for twelve hours with one of the little Sunbeams. The following summer, with Chassagen as relief driver, he set the twelve hour average to ninety miles an hour.

As a business man, Resta is a buyer of automobiles for members of the nobility. Next to driving racing cars, his favorite pastime is roller skating. He also plays golf to steady his nerves, and boxes.

RIOT OF COLOR, BEAUTY, NOISE, JOY, THRILLS

Speed Mad Throng on Perfect Day Cheers Death Taunting Drivers.

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER.

Spedway Park, June 26.—It was a thrilling spectacle.

Not only on the great boardway, where the dare devil drivers taunted death with smiles on their faces in a smashing grind of five solid hours as they shot around the inverted saucer-like inclines 100 miles an hour, but out over the great inclosure and in the parkways and through the mammoth grand stand there was a heart throb in every foot of the splendid panorama.

Some who felt the thrill of the scenes saw the last Derby at Washington park in the old days when the horse was king.

Today they beheld the larger throng but cheering as of old—cheering the gray and white and black streaks that seemed to be catapulted through space rather than under the superb control of iron nerves—saw the thousands gayly adorned in the boxes and parkways, saw pennants flung from thousands of places, saw all the panoply of the memorable pageants of the horse days—and something more. They heard a mighty road of engines and the thunder of the speed marvels as they burned up the course.

Cheers Are for Men Now.

The applause that swept over the largest assemblage in Chicago's history that came to witness feats of speed was not for the foam flecked horse but for these men of daring and iron hearts who risked death hour after hour.

Time and again thousands leaped to their feet as a driver sped on his hair raising course with tires that looked to be in shreds and ready to give way. That was where chances were taken—chances when death, riding close beside the cars, came a little nearer. But they got out of each tire the last mile with such a chance, and a minute saved at that marvelous speed—100 miles in sixty minutes—might mean victory or defeat.

Instead of the mighty throng becoming wearied after the first two hours with what, to a reader, might seem a monotonous grind, the thrill seemed to heighten with each few minutes.

New Thrill Every Second.

At that terrific and almost uncanny speed, with tires going down and other breaks sending cars to the pits for repairs, the positions of the racers were constantly changing. At times half a dozen would shoot into the stretch bunched together, and the mighty roar of the engines and the cutting of the wind as they streaked by the stands brought cheers and screams and handclapping and yells.

It seemed like a speed mad throng, not frightened at the 100 mile an hour clip but every one pulling for the daredevils to go faster and still faster.

Through the megaphones came the announcements, and as each new message was shot across the way to the stands thousands held their breath a moment. It might mean death to some of the drivers. But as the hours wore on and the worst to be chronicled was tire trouble or a broken engine the crowds laughed and shouted words of encouragement to the drivers temporarily in hard luck.

Like all great assemblages of this sort the onlookers seemed to have their favorites, and Resta, the iron nerved Italian, in his French racer was one of them. Wilcox in his Stutz and Resta got away in the first bunch, crossing the tape nose and nose, and for many laps around the newest and best and biggest of all speedways in America they fought like demons—and almost looked them.

As Resta in his cigar shaped contrivance and Wilcox in the compact white Stutz shot around the turn, leaning far over to maintain the equilibrium, as if rounding the side of a steep hill, and came streaking past the stands the crowds howled their encouragement.

Then Resta came in alone.

"Where's Wilcox?" shouted the stands.

"Where's Wilcox?"

A second or two is like hours in normal conversation when these speed devils are at it. And in a second or so poor Wilcox, as crowds thought, came limping down near the rail, with his hand pointing to his right rear tire.

"Tire trouble," shouted back the official announcer.

One could almost see the thousands straining their muscles as if trying to help the driver as his aids tore the old wheel off and clamped another on. It was the first tire break and the uninitiated did not know what it meant in time to make this change. In just thirty seconds from the moment he pulled up at the pit—thirty seconds! Wilcox was off again with the thunder of the cheers chasing him down the course.

Then Resta Limps In.

The trouble had separated him and Resta. The Italian tore past alone, and he was given another great cheer. In a few minutes things began to happen again. Resta was missed, but Wilcox was cutting the air at a 107 mile clip. A bunch of the streaks passed. The field glasses moved quickly over the panorama and finally located Resta. He, too, was limping in this time, with the right rear tire in shreds.

He was off again in about thirty seconds, and happened to get away just as Wilcox came on. Then for another several minutes the two cars fought like mad things, but a few feet apart, round and round the boardway, while the thousands cheered and cheered.

But tire trouble kept on slowing up their record, and Earl Cooper, in a Stutz, one of Wilcox's teammates, who had got along with little trouble, sent a thrill through the stands and over the field when he clipped off the first 100 miles in the race. He was given a rousing shout as he passed on the next lap.

Then the crowd took up others. They began to get acquainted with the drivers after an hour or so. They picked their favorites, either from scientific knowledge or from impulse, and all the drivers got good hands from then on to the finish.

Crowds Out Early.

With the first gray streaks of the dawn the early arrivals pounded at the entrance gates on the south side of the speedway demanding admittance.

They came in cars bespattered with mud and black with dust and grease—cars that bore license tags of nearly every state from New York to Montana.

The first train on the Illinois Central out from the city at 4:30 o'clock in the morning carried a large number, and after 8 o'clock the long trains were packed to the steps, while immense throngs swayed and fretted and tried to get to the trains at the Van Buren street station.

Along all highways leading to the speedway, soon after sunup, were long lines of automobiles carrying capacity loads.

70,000 See Race Start.

By 9 o'clock 60,000 people had passed through the gates, and still they came in long streams from everywhere and every direction. At 10:30, when the race started, more than 70,000 were on the field and in the stands, and they rose and yelled a mighty yell as the starting gun was heard and the first four racers shot down the road to the 500 mile victory, to immortal fame, to a small fortune or possibly death.

The people kept coming, a steady stream pouring through the gates up to early afternoon. Many of the city folks waited to come out for the finish.

At 1 p. m. the official report from the turnstiles gave the attendance, paid and passes, at a total of 80,000. This figure gives an interesting comparison with the records of the Indianapolis track. The first races on the Indiana saucer, contests of a mixed character, drew an attendance of 18,000 persons, while the first big race —for 500 miles—on that track drew an attendance of 40,000 persons, or one-half of the Chicago crowd today.

The militia guards at the track were the veterans of the Illinois National Guard. They have been in service at every Elgin road race since the opening of that course in 1910. The troops were under the command of Col. Charles B. Greene, Third infantry, I. N. G., Aurora.

About 450 men and officers made up the detail. Seven troops, averaging sixty men each, were on duty. They were troops D and I of Aurora; troops K and H, Rockford; troop M, Belvidere; troop E, Elgin; troop F, Pontiac.

The militiamen had little call for exercise of authority except among the few seeking privileges that their passes did not permit.

"I have never seen a more orderly race crowd," observed Col. Greene.

Speedway Association Pays Men.

The militiamen are paid by the Speedway association. The men in the ranks receive $3 a day each, which includes subsistence and allowance, and the officers were paid at the rate of their grades in the regular army.

When luncheon time came around the air about the stands became filled with fluttering sheets of paper, napkins, and wrappings that whipped about in the wind like playing gulls. The suction of the blazing racing cars caught up the papers and sent them scurrying about the course. Papers caught in radiators and scurried across the vision of drivers, causing perilous confusion.

Luncheons a Picnic Fantasy.

Race track luncheons varied from the humble and standard ham sandwich of commerce sold by a brass voiced hawker to elaborate motor luncheons carried in ice box trunks.

There were folding tables spread with gleaming napery and set with porcelains where pretty women made tea over alcohol lamps taken from the camping deluxe outfits and there was the homely hunk of bologna carried in a pocket miscellany by the kid that came in through the fence. Bottled beer, whisky, and cocktails in chilled thermos bottles, appeared in remarkable array on the field, though the supply did not seem sufficient to overenthuse any considerable number of the race fans.

Two thirsty young men searched long and diligently for a place where alcoholics might be purchased, but received no important encouragement. (They were not reporters.)

The bleacher crowd had the time of their lives. At one time seven games of outdoor and indoor baseball were in progress in the wide field between the sides of the mammoth oval.

A "grand dame" also plied her needle over an embroidery pattern in one of the most expensive parking spots in the inclosure, while some of the younger set divided their time between magazines, novels, and visiting back and forth.

But when Resta, after his tire trouble, set the heart smashing pace and clipped off the first 200 miles of the race, embroidery, novels, and visiting were put aside while the cool headed son of the last war entry was given another ovation.

Mayor's Billiken on the Job.

Mayor Thompson's Billiken got in his good work again just before the race started. It was scheduled to be off at 10 o'clock sharp, but Bob Burman, Resta's teammate, also driving a Peugeot, broke his engine on the early trial spin and they had to wait until 10:30 for the firing gun.

Right up to the start of the race the mists hung over the place following the early morning downpour, and thousands worried themselves into a nervous frenzy trying to guess and hoping it would not rain again.

Resta, saying good-by to his wife in one of the boxes, smiled a faint smile, behind which lurked the daredevil spirit. He said that everything would go all right, that the sun would soon be shining, and that the day would turn out to be great. So it did.

But not until after Mayor Thompson helped out. He reached for his Billiken when Edward Hines, one of the promoters, came up, and, holding it high, offered a little invocation to Billiken that he would cause the leaden clouds to vamoose and the bright, warm sunshine to reappear. And so it did.

Mayor Thompson and his party were among the early arrivals. He was recognized, waving a good sized American flag to his friends, and a good cheer went up for "Big Bill."

While the drivers and their mechanicians were tuning up the cars preparatory for the start, Chris Wiehe, the magic one who converted a 320 acre meadow into the great speedway in six weeks, walked across the course. The craft recognized him and gave him hearty cheers.

Preliminary to starting the race Mr. Wiehe, Mayor Thompson, Edward Hines, Samuel T. A. Loftis, David F. Reid, president of the Speedway Park association; Richard Kendall, chairman of the contest board, and Mayor Wood of Cairo, in two touring cars and waving American flags, were driven once around the course.

They're Off!

This was the final touch to the dedicatory exercises. They quickly got off the course in front of the grandstand and Fred Wagner, the official starter, a moment later, while bands were playing and quartets were singing, sent the first tier over the chalk line. With a great snort and a deafening thunder of exploding gasoline the whole twenty-one were quickly over the tape, and, common looking though they were in repose, they seemed to fairly leap into the air and suddenly to become metamorphosed from iron and steel and rubber into living demons of things.

And so the race began—the most thrilling, the most successful, and the greatest in every aspect known to the automobile industry of the United States.

Five Hours of Thrills.

And for the next five hours 80,000 men, women, and boys witnessed a spectacle they will never forget.

It was a succession of thrills from start to finish, but there were times when the thing seemed to grip a little harder.

When Resta went into his four hundred and fourth mile the crowd got one of the best thrills, and about the nearest approach to the neck and neck idea of a race. Cooper, far behind in point of mileage, came up alongside Resta as they roared past the grandstand.

Then it was nip and tuck between the cars for three sizzling laps. This sort of stuff the crowd, weary of scoreboard statistics, could recognize as a race, although in fact it did not mean Resta's lead was being imperiled.

Wild Crowds See Real Race.

As the cars passed the gayly dressed stands rose in a surge of enthusiasm. Cheers rose in shrill crescendo above the Hotchkiss staccato of the motors.

Hats and scarfs of militant color, handkerchiefs and canes and pop bottles waved above the crowd like the toss of windswept grain fields.

Lap followed lap, with Resta and Cooper shooting their man ridden torpedoes about the turns trying for the pole. Cooper gained the narrow strip of unoiled track at the pole and bid fair to make a real gain. The crowd raved.

Then in the back stretch Cooper's Stutz began to heat and he came trundling up to the pits signaling for water and the crowd groaned. Resta was in his four hundred and twenty-sixth mile when Cooper repeated the performance and bid fair to become a hero with the grandstand.

Winners Praise Speedway and Race

BY DARIO RESTA.

I have never been in such a race as it has been my pleasure to win here today. It is true there never has been a faster race, yet it was so easy. The track here is wonderful for the driver. There is little danger. It is so wide and the turns are so perfectly banked that driving, except when the cars were bunched, was not at all unpleasant.

I confess I started confident as to the result. I feared none of the other cars because of the superior speed of my machine, as evidenced in practice.

May I say one word to Chicago through THE TRIBUNE? It is this: I never have been treated more courteously than during my visit here. I'm a citizen of England, but I jolly well appreciate what Chicago has done for me. May I also be candid and say I am glad all the world records have come to this track?

BY JEAN PORPORATO.

At the very start I knew it was going to be a hard pull, because every car entered and every driver at the wheel was capable of beating me if they got the breaks. I knew I had a chance, though, and I'm satisfied to finish second in a race in which records fell like they did today. I hope to be here next fall to try again. I cannot say enough in praise of the track.

Lardner's "Two Bit" Pool Goes Glimmering, Then He Is Bored Without Deck of Cards.

BY RING W. LARDNER.

Speedway Park, June 26.—The cars made so much noise that you couldn't hear the words or music to the songs sung by the Song Pluggers. This should help the sale of the songs.

Albert and I sat in the grandstand a while and watched the race. Every little while we wondered what car was leading. On such occasions we looked at the score board and then kept on wondering. At length we came over to the press stand, where we couldn't see anything of the race, but where we could tell all that was going on by listening to the announcer.

We regretted our failure to bring along a deck of cards. Shortly after 1 o'clock the announcer announced that No. 21, which was Haupt, in a Duesenberg, was back in the race after being out an hour and a half. This gentleman and his car were the draw I made in a two-bit pool.

Tip for Joe Cooper.

Around 1:30 Joe Cooper stopped his Sebring for a minutes and twenty-eight seconds to get gas and water. You'd think he would know enough by this time to load up before he started. I never leave my garage without seeing that I am well supplied with both.

All the cars had a great deal of tire trouble. I would suggest that after this the buyers buy some of the kinds of tires that are guaranteed for 6,000 miles. Then blowouts would cost them nothing. It is possible, however, that some of these men get a reduction from the regular tire price.

Perhaps the public is curious to know what drivers and mechanicians talk about during the race.

Deep Stuff in Conversation.

We had to go under the track to get from the grand stand to the press stand and while doing so overheard a conversation between Resta and mechanic.

"I thought it was going to rain all day," said Resta as they passed over us.

"It certainly did look like it," said the mechanic as they passed over us again.

"This has been a peculiar spring," remarked Resta the third time round.

"Rotten," said the mechanic on the fourth lap.

"The roads are pretty good today, though." Resta said on No. 5.

"So far, yes," the mechanician replied on lap 6, "but we may run into some sand near Gary."

Ford Story Will Keep.

The press stand is close to the pits and we could hear most of the stuff that was pulled there.

Mr. Rickenbacher stopped at the end of 16? miles.

"Boys," he said to his helpers, "Grant just told me a good story about a Ford."

"We've all heard it," said the boys. So Rickenbasher leaped into his Maxwell and drove on.

Van Raalte's Sunbeam began making terrible noises at the 250 mile mark. He had better take it to the garage tomorrow. It sounded to me as if he was missing on both cylinders. It was probably ignition trouble and may have been caused by dirty spark plugs.

If he will call me up I will tell him how to clean them, but any garage man will know what is the matter and fix it up for him at a nominal fee of $5 an hour. Doubtless he can drive it the way it is as far as church and back, but he will be arrested if he goes into the loop with such a noisy wagon.

How to Get Rid of Cars.

All the cars in the race were roadsters, and not one of them had an extra seat for a possible third passenger. If these boys ever raise large families they will have to invest in larger cars. You can get a pretty good second hand five or seven passenger machine now for around $800, and some dealers will take your roadster as part payment.

The band is now playing "America." We can't hear it, but we can see Walter Eckersall, Parke Brown, and Al Wessling standing up. They are right near the band, so they can distinguish the different melodies.

I will bring a good book with me next time I attend an automobile road race, and write my stuff before I leave home, where there is a typewriter and where Mr. Van Raalte and his noisy Sunbeam are not.

FINDS HUSBAND IN MORGUE.

Wife Who Comes to See Race Learns Mate Was Auto Accident Victim.

Two weeks ago O. W. Franklin came to Chicago from Indianapolis to obtain employment at the speedway. On Friday night his wife arrived in Chicago to join him and view the races. When he failed to meet her at the Polk street station as he had promised she called up the Jackson hotel, where he had been staying. She was informed he had been killed in an automobile accident in South Chicago on Thursday. Yesterday Mrs. Franklin went to the morgue where the body lay and found her father-in-law, Oscar Franklin of Burlington, Ia., already there. The two left for Burlington with the body.

GRAB UP TIRE SOUVENIRS.

Fiends for Race Tokens Wait Long but Finally Get Appeased After Accident.

Speedway Park, June 26.—[Special.]—The souvenir fiends waited long and anxiously for a token of the big race. Round after round, lap after lap the cars hummed past without anything but speed to amuse the hungry throng. Some place near the turn coming into the stretch a car threw a tire. It rose like a smoke ring and flew into a cloud of fragments. There was a small riot among the spectators to snatch up pieces of the burned rubber.

WHAT'S A FINE ON RACE DAY.

Young Pennsylvanians Just Laugh as They Settle on Charge of Flirting.

Two laughing young men—students of the University of Pennsylvania, they said —both well dressed and amply supplied with money, arrived in Chicago in an automobile to attend the races at Speedway park yesterday.

They still were laughing when they were fined $10 each by Judge Caverly, to whom they gave their names as George E. Wiemer and G. B. Andrews—believed to be fictitious—on charges of flirting on the street with Mrs. Fisher and Mrs. Louis, who gave no addresses.

The young men laughed as they paid their fines and went to the races.

KANSAS CITY TO HAVE TRACK.

Mid-Continent Exposition Club Will Build Speedway and Pointers Are Sought in Chicago.

Twenty Kansas City speedway enthusiasts engaged in the promotion of a $1,000,000 speedway in the Missouri city attended the Chicago race yesterday. The expedition was under the auspices of the Mid-Continent Exposition club. It plans to build a speedway at the official stopping place for cross-the-continent balloon races, and at a strategic point on the proposed "Old Trails" motor highway, comprising the Lincoln highway and the government road between Kansas City and the Atlantic, and the Santa Fé trail to California.

DEATH OF PRIVATE CASTS PALL OVER MILITARY CAMP.

Guardman Dies of Tetanus as Result of Stepping on Rusty Nail—One Man Taken to Hospital.

Speedway Park, June 26.—[Special.]—A shadow was cast over the military camp at the race track just as the race was about to start. News was received of the death at the Oak Park hospital of Private Moles of Pontiac, a member of the Third infantry, I. N. G. Death was due to tetanus, which developed from a wound received ten days ago when Moles stepped on a rusty nail.

Moles had forgotten about the wound until Friday, when he became ill and went to his tent. Maj. R. C. Borland, who is a physician, attended the soldier, but he grew worse and was removed to the hospital when he suffered convulsions.

Moles was an express agent. He is survived by a widow and one child. His comrades are planning to bury him with military honors.

John A. Briegel of 6014 Harper avenue was taken to the Emergency hospital after he had fallen from a barn near the speedway and broken his leg and nose and dislocated his hip. Briegel, who is head of the firm of Briegel & Son, sign dealers and erectors, at 20 North Fifth avenue, was removing a sign from the barn roof when he slipped and fell thirty-five feet.

LITTLE BETTING AT RACE.

Bookmakers Lay No Wagers on New Sort of Derby They Don't Know About.

There was little betting at the auto derby. The bookmakers were conspicuously absent. Neither Jim O'Leary nor Mont Tennes took any bets. The wise ones explained the auto racing game is new to the men who devote their attention to the ponies. One of the few recorded bets was made by Andy Craig, who is said to have won $1,000. He bet on Resta against the field.

Police Seeking Missing Boy.

Police of the Town Hall station are searching for Cornelius Juinane Jr., 16 years old, who left his home on Thursday night to go swimming at Wilson beach and has disappeared. The police believe the boy has run away from home.

WINNING CAR MADE IN PARIS FOR GRAND PRIX; NOT USED.

Front Wheel Brakes Which Permit of Quick Stopping Chief Feature of Peugeot, Which Resta Drove.

The winning Peugeot was manufactured by the Peugeot company at Paris for the 1914 Grand Prix. It was not used in that race, as it was supposed to be the least efficient of the four built. The chief feature of the construction is the front wheel brakes, which permit of quick stopping. The chassis carries a four cylinder motor with a cylinder area of 274.6 inches.

The cylinders are set slightly offset relative to the crank shaft. Two cam shafts are arranged so as to operate almost directly on the ends of the valve stems. Each cylinder has four valves and each valve has two springs, one inside the other, the idea being if the outer one breaks the reserve spring will keep the valve operating with but slight loss of efficiency. A long tram of spur gears operates the crank shaft.

For both front and rear axles the frame is underslung, and there are spring checks to minimize the axle movement. Incidentally more play is given the back axle than is given the front. The clutch is a leather cone.

JITNEYS PAY FOR HARVEST.

Village Authorities Hold Up Autos for Hire for $5 License Fee.

Speedway Park, June 26.—Hot on the trail of opportunity, a group of car owners established "two bit" jitney service between the third rail station at Maywood and the track.

But, equally alert to the distant tinkle of gold, the village opportunists stationed a man in uniform on the line of travel and exacted a license fee of $5.

"The fellow told me it was good for the season when he signed a sort of receipt," said one of the jitney men, "but when I got around to look at it I found it was good only for the date of this race and that they demand a fee of $10 for the season."

IN REPAIR PITS UNSEEN HEROES HELP WIN RACE

Changes of Tires, Food for the Drivers, and Fuel for Cars Provided in Record Time.

"That guy's crazy!"

"Say, those two scoreboards ain't alike at all."

"Well, wadda ya expect. Those fellas don't know anythin' about racin'."

There may have been some persons at Speedway park who believed the story of the race as told by the two "official" scoreboards opposite the grand stand, but certainly they were not in the repair and supply pits which lined one side of the track near the judges' stand.

Especially toward the close of the race, when men's nerves were on edge from the long strain and each second meant so much, did the scoreboards come in for many uncomplimentary remarks. Bob Burman's pit men were quite certain that their champion had beaten out the veteran Chevrolet, and when scoreboard officials refused to see the matter in that light they were at loss for words to express their wrath.

Food for Men and Machines.

But most of the pitmen had something to do in addition to watching and censuring the official source of information regarding standings. At least one man in each pit had to keep his eye on the track all the time. Caps of gasoline tanks waved aloft in the hands of mechanicians of the speeding cars meant fuel was short. Arms circled above heads told the story of tires cut to pieces by the terrific speed. The men in the pits had to be on watch for these signals. They were the unseen heroes who helped their drivers win the honor places in the race.

Food for drivers as well as the machines they drove came from the pits. While gasoline, oil, and water was being poured into the smoking monsters grimy visaged drivers, with their goggles shoved up on their foreheads, gulped down sandwiches and fruit.

Grant Goes Hungry.

Harry Grant in his American Sunbeam—his pitmen were quite insistent that the machine should not be confused with the all English Sunbeams—went the 500 miles without food. Covering the distance at the rate of 95.06 miles an hour without a stop and finishing fourth. Toward the end of the contest those pitmen worried for fear that something would happen to mar Grant's record, and when he crossed the line with a clean slate he was received with as much acclaim as if he had won the race.

Drivers, mechanicians, and pitmen alike were on edge during the last laps. When Porporato stopped for two tires and gasoline at the end of his two hundred and twenty-fifth lap, there was much excitement. The Sunbeam driver was only a few minutes behind the flying Resta, and when an assistant pitman consumed several precious seconds in pouring in gasoline which the car would never burn, the man in charge of the pit almost had heart failure.

Resta's Final Halt.

Eight miles from the finish Resta, too, was forced to stop for oil and gasoline. Hurrying hands poured fuel in and over the roaring monster, which leaped away from the pit after a delay of less than thirty seconds.

Gil Anderson stopped his Stutz for tires and gasoline. Thirty seconds were required for the change, and the white racer pulled away as Resta flashed across the finish line and drew up beside his pit.

Reporters, photographers, movie men, and strangers charged the grinning Italian, who fled to a far corner of the pit. There he drank a bottle of charged water, washed his face and hands with the contents of another bottle, and escaped from his admirers to greet Mrs. Resta. Of course he thought it was a fine track. Sure, he was glad he won. But most of all, he wanted to see his wife.

Porporato Likes Applause.

Not so Porporato. He enjoyed the cheers and congratulations. Why not? But questions! Ah, he was overwhelmed with sorrow that he spoke so little English. Through an interpreter he explained that he liked the track and planned to continue racing in the United States.

When Chevrolet coaxed his faltering Delage around the final lap his brother Arthur, who was in charge of the Frenchman's pit, welcomed him enthusiastically. And what was Arthur's first remark?

"Louis, what do you think? Harry did the whole 500 miles without a stop."

NEGRO SLAYS WHITE WOMAN.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 26.—Joseph Thomas, a negro butler in the employ of Frederick E. Hastings, secretary of a Philadelphia manufacturing paper company, today shot and killed Miss Hattie Watson, sister-in-law of his employer, at the Hastings residence at Devon, near here. Thomas then went into a barn back of the Hastings house and hanged himself. The motive for the crime is unknown.

Loop Hounds Yelp Approval, Says Donaghey, Leader of Pack.

BY FREDERICK DONAGHEY.

Such disappointment as may have been felt with the day's attendance at the speedway could not justly be charged against the loop "regulars." They were quite as faithful as if the occasion had been a Sunday night opening of "The Follies" or a show from the Winter garden. They served yesterday as a leaven for a crowd which, on the whole, was otherwise representative of nothing in particular.

The loop delegation was not more than 10 per cent on hand at the 10:30 a. m. start, but then there is no such hour indicated on the clocks and watches by which the set calculates time. That they regarded the event as more or less urgent was clearly shown by their being there—most of 'em, that is—by 1 p. m. They arrived without symptoms of excitement, and comported themselves with the poise and the suave sense of cultural superiority which are the glory of our theater lobbies in the entr'-actes on first nights.

They Knew What Was What!

These men and women of the loop gave the gathering for the remainder of the day the precise touch missing in the morning hours. They seemed by uncanny intuition to know who was who and which was which as to drivers and cars. It was a joy to hear one or another of them camly observe when told that Earl Cooper broke the 100 mile record, "Ah, yes. I felt that he would get some speed out of that new Resta." Not theirs the gaucheries of the citizenry trained in the use of programs. They recognized Stutz as he flew by in his De Palma, and lamented the fact that Deusenberg was handicapped by having to ride in last year's Polarine, owing to a mistake in the assembly plant.

Publicans were on hand, delighted to note the absence of a formal tavern, expressing their joy with their belief that the crowd would be all the thirstier by the time it got back to town. The men who know what to wear were there; so, also, were their tailors, to see that the what was worn, and their haberdashers, to note the occasional faux-pas in the wearing of the soft collar designed for 100 mile races instead of the folded stock which is rigidly good form for the greater distances. Critics of the drama were there, and the precursorial hirelings of actors and managers. The former, of course, had discarded the judicial mask, and were present in their capacity as flaneurs.

Stage Folk Among Them.

And, although it was a matinée day for the players in employment, some of them, too, were a. t. p., taking a chance on getting back to the loop for the afternoon curtain. A toe dancer permitted her associate performers to rush off without her, explaining that she was safe through not having to go on until the second act. A prima donna out of work made it appear that she had forsaken the stage solely that she might devote all her time to the contemplation of the flying cars. The wealthier members of chorus and ballet drove out, took a look, and drove right back again, conscious that they had performed a ritual of duty.

The loop delegation, following its inspection of the arenic addition to the list of Chicago's show places, gave measured approval, qualified with respect to the fact that there is much to be done before anybody can sincerely call the speedway and its oval "class."

Disdained Any But a $25 Box.

Group opinion was that the best place to sit is in the $25 boxes to the right of the band stand. This decision was not dictated by mere snobbery, nor by respect for the price charged. Side betting among those who know concerns itself, in one of its speedway forms, with the time necessary to replace a blown tire, for example. The repair man may be clocked only by those in occupancy of the seats indicated. The $15 parking places, in the oval, were tried and passed up—good enough for those who could be entertained watching the cars as they burr-r-r-red by, but open to the objection that intruding standees and railbirds might perch themselves on engine hoods, and on fenders, and on toolboxes.

Note was made that the grand stand boxes are in too close proximity to the band and put down as a remediable error. The remedy, of course, is to get a better band than yesterday's. It was good enough in the intermissions, the musicians sitting quietly in their seats when not playing and minding their own business. Such periods of rest for the nearby were well nigh offset, however, by the employment of a male quartet, who undertook to make barber shop harmonies while singing through megaphones.

NEW MARRIAGE STATUTE MAKES LAWYERS OF CLERKS.

Must Familiarize Selves with Wedding Code of Every State in the Union.

All kinds of trouble have been piled up for the county clerks in Illinois by the passage of the new marriage law by the recent legislature.

It provides that people from other states cannot be married in Illinois if their marriage should be in violation of the laws of their respective home states.

What the marriage license clerks are up against is familiarizing themselves with the marriage laws of all states of the union.

Frank Pasdeloup, chief clerk in County Clerk Sweitzer's office, sees a lot of confusion ahead.

Senator Morton D. Hull, who championed the measure in the upper house, explained that the county clerks would be safe if they would insist on affidavits from the applicants for licenses that their marriage would not violate any of the marriage laws of their home states.

COURTROOM ON SPEEDWAY.

Man Arrested for Gambling Tried and Convicted Without Law's Usual Delays.

Deputy Sheriff Joseph Pionke descended upon a crowd of about fifty in a field a half mile from Speedway park yesterday. Dice were being rolled when the deputy appeared and arrested Miller Lawrence. The others escaped. Lawrence was taken to the office of the speedway association, which was converted into a temporary courtroom and where he entered a plea of guilty to gambling and was fined $3 and costs, which he paid. Police Magistrate Charles C. Kretz of Broadview held the court.

JAMMED TRAINS CRAWL TO CITY AT SNAIL'S PACE

Many on I. C. Fail to Reach Park Row Station in Three Hours' Time.

After witnessing five hours of record breaking speed on the racecourse a large majority of the 82,000 who attended the Derby yesterday found themselves unenthusiastic witnesses if not victims of a transportation which approached the exact opposite in record smashing.

Apparently unwarranted delays in getting the people back to the city caused much ill feeling among the spectators, whose thrill worn nerves were in no condition to withstand tedious waits when engagements and dinners were waiting at the other end of the trip.

Transportation from the speedway to the city over the Illinois Central railroad was greatly delayed. Many who bought tickets as early as 3:30 p. m. did not reach the downtown station on Park row until after 6 o'clock. The majority of the passengers who boarded the trains outside of the racecourse were delayed from one to two hours.

Crowd Thinks of Dinner.

After the first four machines had crossed the finish line the crowd began to think of dinner and to surge toward the exits. Militiamen patrolled the racecourse and prevented all attempts to cross it until the last racer had been flagged off the track. Those in the infield were made to use the subways at either extremity of the grandstand.

The jams about the ticket booths at the railroad exits were uncontrollable. In securing a ticket or reaching the gate physical force was resorted to by many.

The gala day spirit of the crowd soon changed to a mob feeling which few took occasion to hold back. The first trains were crowded to the doors before they started. The movement of the crowds across the new soft cinder loading platforms did not tend to improve the tempers of those whose feet were trampled in the mêlée.

Spare Trains Half Filled.

To the contrary of the above the spare trains held in waiting at the station made their way slowly back to the city only half filled. There were more delays when the trains began to stop between the lake front and Halsted street. Trainmen tried to explain that track facilities on the lake front were responsible for the wait.

Hundreds of persons, after waiting upwards of an hour, deserted the stalled trains and took to the street cars. Others simply walked. Not a few of them recalled in unpleasant terms the persuasive cries of the ticket venders who in the morning had sold the I. C. tickets with the announcement "Round trip for 50 cents."

A one way fare was half of that amount. Many who had bought the "round trip ticket" under the belief that it offered the customary reduction, considered themselves victims of a misrepresentation, particularly when they had to leave the train and take other means of transportation to their homes.

Get Autos Out.

The work of extricating the sea of sight seeing automobiles from the infield at the end of the race was carried on along systematic lines by the managers of the parking spaces. The cars were formed in lines about the inner periphery of the course and their drivers instructed to advance to the subway exits in order. No collisions were reported.

Many who were unable to penetrate the mobs about the I. C. stations walked six blocks to the elevated station at First avenue and Twelfth street. Jitney busses carried many at "a quarter per head."

ANDERSON'S PERIL GIVES REAL THRILL

GIL ANDERSON, one of the Stutz team, sent the biggest thrill through the mammoth grandstand. Tearing down the stretch like a streak of lightning at ninety-eight miles an hour on his ninety-first lap, a rear tire exploded with the roar of a 42-centimeter gun. The car, that seemed a demon unleashed, lurched and staggered for just the fraction of a second. For just that fraction of time, too, the great crowd gasped, expecting to see the demon thing and its human freight catapulted into the air and a shocking tragedy added to the day.

Anderson's mind worked quicker perhaps than ever before. The wavering of a second might have proved fatal. But in that second he did just the right thing. He threw his wheel over with a lurch and steadied the racer as he shut off power. It halted, leaped, staggered, zigzagged, and finally quieted into a limp. But the momentum was such that he was unable to stop at the pits and had to crawl around the entire two miles before he could grab a new tire.

The Rev. Frank N. Westcott Takes Life Because of Ill Health—In Wisconsin Hospital.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 26.—The literary life of the Rev. Frank Nash Westcott, who hanged himself in his room at Columbia hospital today, was a parallel to that of his famous brother, Edward Noyes Westcott, creator of David Harum.

Edward Noyes Westcott began "David Harum" after his health failed and he could no longer attend to his duties as a banker in a small New York community. He drew his delineation for the famous horse trader from the rural life about him. When the book was nearly completed his health gave way entirely. He died a few days after he had read the proof.

Frank Nash Westcott was an Episcopalian rector at Skaneateles, N. Y. He took time off occasionally to write church treatises until his health failed. Then he, too, turned to the novel. Hepsey Burke, the leading character of his book, is described as a sister of David Harum, and her quaint humor is in many ways identical.

SCHOOL PUPILS SEEK JOBS.

Hundreds Are Applying for Age Certificates—Want to Work During Summer.

Hundreds of graduates of the public schools are applying for age and school certificates at the Jones school at Harrison street and Plymouth court. Many of the children are anxious to go to work during the summer vacation, intending to return to high school in September. Children of the parochial and private schools are applying for age certificates at 538 South Dearborn street.

Wants Stock Shares Transferred.

POLICE NET KEEPS CROOKS OUT OF SPEEDWAY GROUNDS

Capt. Alcock Reports No Arrests and No Complaints of Pickpockets in Race Throng.

Speedway Park, June 26.—When the race neared the finish, Capt. John Alcock of the Woodlawn police station, in command of the city police detailed to the track, said that no arrest had been made and that no complaint of pickpockets had been received at the track police headquarters.

About 500 policemen and twenty-five detectives were assigned to duty on the track and grounds. A private detective agency employed by the association patrolled the grounds with a corps of twenty-five men.

A battery of detectives from the bureau stood on duty at the turnstiles and gates to weed out known pickpockets who might seek admission.

The principal thoroughfares between the track and the city were guarded by members of the mounted police, stationed two blocks apart. This assignment drew practically all of the mounted men from the downtown districts of the city.

ASKS FOR CHICAGO'S FLAG.

New York Girl Writes Mayor, but Mayor Passes Responsibility.

Miss Annie Magan of Syracuse, N. Y., who says she is "only a little girl," has revived the proposal to adopt an official flag for the city of Chicago. Miss Magan wrote Mayor Thompson she was making a collection of municipal flags. She asked him to send her Chicago's emblem.

"Mother says you haven't time to answer because I can't vote," the letter said, but the mayor asked City Clerk Siman to report to him on the status of Chicago's official insignia.

"If Chicago adopts a flag Annie will be the first to get one," Mr. Siman said.

GERMANS CALL OFF BRYAN'S PROPOSED CHICAGO SPEECH.

Former Secretary Rejected Subject Chosen by Teutons—Wanted It to Be "Peace."

Announcement from German-American sources that William Jennings Bryan would speak at a massmeeting at the Coliseum tomorrow night under the auspices of the Sons of Teutons, of which G. F. Hummel is president, was followed last night by authoritative announcement from the same sources that the meeting has been called off. Mr. Bryan had planned to leave Washington today and to arrive in Chicago tomorrow afternoon.

Senator Beveridge of Indiana and Miss Ray Beveridge of Chicago were among those to whom invitations to speak were sent. Horace L. Brand of the Staats Zeitung also was expected to speak. Senator Beveridge was not at home and Mr. Brand was ill.

It was given out last night that conditions imposed by Mr. Bryan could not be met by the promoters of the meeting, which was intended as a protest against exportation by American manufacturers of arms and ammunitions to the allies. It was said, however, that the hitch came because "the Sons of Teutons wanted Mr. Bryan to talk on exportation of arms and Mr. Bryan insisted that his subject be simply 'Peace.'"

TROOPS ON GUARD AT SLATON HOME; MANY ARRESTED

Inauguration of New Governor Marred by Some Hisses for the Retiring Chief.

Atlanta, Ga., June 26.—Artillery, cavalry, and infantry of the state militia stood guard tonight at the home of John M. Slaton, who retired as governor of the state today, surrendering the office to Nat E. Harris.

During the day twenty-six men were arrested by the militia near the Slaton home and were still held in the county jail tonight. Firearms and explosives, it is alleged, were taken from them. Tonight, however, there was no indication of demonstrations against the former governor because of his action in commuting the sentence of Leo M. Frank.

The former governor spent the night at home with his family. He plans to leave with Mrs. Slaton next week for a vacation trip to California.

Slaton Defends His Acts.

At a luncheon given today in honor of the new governor the retiring governor referred to the Frank case.

"Honest people may disagree with me, an honest man," he said, "but we realize that we must be measured by our consciences. Two thousand years ago another governor washed his hands of a case and turned over a Jew to a mob. For 2,000 years that governor's name has been accursed. If today another Jew were lying in his grave because I had failed to do my duty I would all through life find his blood on my hands and would consider myself an assassin through cowardice."

Some Hisses at Inaugural.

During the inaugural ceremonies at the capital there were several tense moments. When Mr. Slaton approached the new governor to deliver the state seal a few hisses were heard.

Presenting the seal, Mr. Slaton said:

"Gov. Harris, I know that during my term of office this great seal of state has not been dishonored."

His words were greeted by a prolonged outburst of applause.

Leaving the capitol the crowd surged in on the former governor and had to be held back by the militia.

INCOME TAX IN SUPREME COURT

Dodge Brothers of Detroit Attack Constitutionality of Law.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—Papers were filed here today in the first attack in the Supreme court on the constitutionality of the federal income tax, which promises to be the most important case before the court next term. Counsel for John F. and Horace E. Dodge of Detroit, Mich., filed a brief of argument attacking the surtax on income of individuals.

Three main reasons were assigned for claiming the surtax provision of the law is invalid. Stockholders in corporations, it is asserted, when computing their surtaxes, are subjected to liability for the gains and profits of the corporations which have not been divided or distributed.

Called Absurdly Funny.

"To tax a stockholder on prospective dividends which he may never receive can only be properly characterized as so utterly absurd as to induce levity," the Dodge counsel say.

It is charged also that the provision vests in the secretary of the treasury an arbitrary power of determining, without a hearing, whether any corporation has accumulated a greater undivided surplus than is reasonable for the needs of the business.

"How can he reach such a decision?" it is asked. "The law makes no provision to aid him."

A third reason is that the provision permits corporations to accumulate and withhold from surtax taxation such part of their profits as may be reasonably necessary for the needs and purposes of the business, and does not accord such business privilege to individuals and partnerships. It is urged that corporations are thus favored by a "most invidious discrimination."

Question Powers of Congress.

The brief urges that the sixteenth amendment to the constitution did not obliterate entirely the provisions of the constitution against "direct taxes," and that congress can only tax income and not real or personal property. It is contended that congress can make no distinctions as to the source of income.

If congress had such power, some very "popular discriminations" are within its reach, the brief asserts.

"It would be very popular in some quarters," it says, "to levy a higher rate on incomes derived from the manufacture of liquors. Another popular discrimination would be to increase the rate on income from oil and steel and automobile corporations. And just before each congressional or presidential election the demand for a lower rate on incomes derived from agricultural pursuits would be irresistible."

The case was begun to prevent the collector of internal revenue at Detroit from collecting a surtax on each of the Dodges of approximately $45,000 for the year 1913. The federal district court in Michigan held the tax valid.

Society Crowds Gay Spectacle.

THREATENING skies early in the day kept many boxes empty, and society's representation was not large. Several who had purchased boxes remained in their automobiles and watched the race from the inside of the track.

One of the early arrivals was Mrs. John A. Stevenson, who brought a party of friends in her car.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour drove a party of friends from Mellody farm in their new black and white car. Mr. and Mrs. Mason Phelps and Mr. and Mrs. Philip D. Armour III. of Lake Forest had box parties.

San Franciscan Spectator.

Col. C. S. McLowrey of San Francisco was in a box with Mr. and Mrs. James Dorsey, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Stewart, James Dorsey Jr., and Miss Marie Dorsey.

A. B. Magnus entertained a party from the South Shore Country club. In his box were Miss Jessie McCarry, Miss Elizabeth Chalmers of Amsterdam, N. Y., and Miss Amy Magnus. Dr. R. R. Duff had as his guests Mrs. M. Palm of San Francisco, and Mrs. Wayne Moore of Hot Springs, Ark.

One of the liviest society parties included Miss Helen Paulding, Miss Sarah Hickox, Miss Helvetia Orr, and John Wentworth. They spread their picnic luncheon on the grass near their automobile and forgot about the racing for an hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reinberg had as guests Mrs. Adam Schillo, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Connell, and Richard Connell Jr.

The wives of several of the drivers entertained parties. Mrs. Dario Resta had as her guests Mr. and Mrs. George Sidwell. Mrs. Harry Stutz had Mrs. E. Maypole and Mr. and Mrs. E. H. McCullock. Mrs. Earl Cooper and Mrs. Harry Grant were together in a box.

Mrs. Howard Linn, who was formerly Miss Lucy Blair, was with Mr. Linn and William McCormick Blair. They watched the race from their car.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan entertained a family party in their automobile. Among their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Logan, Waldo Logan, and Mrs. Monroe, who was formerly Miss Logan.

A number of the Junior league girls were seen at the track. Among them were Miss Margaret Talbot and Miss Ida May Swift.

Mayor Thompson appeared early and deposited the women in his party in a box before taking a spin around the track. He had with him Mrs. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. James Pugh, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pike, Miss Virginia Dale, Miss Helene Dale, and State Senator A. C. Clark.

Gov. Dunne Arrives.

It was about 11 o'clock when Gov. Edward F. Dunne arrived. In the governor's box were Mrs. Dunne, Miss Eileen Dunne and her fiancé, W. J. Corboy, Edward F. Dunne Jr., Richard Dunne, and Miss Frances FitzGerald.

Mr. and Mrs. Christian F. Wiehe and Edward Hines were others who had box parties.

Corporation Counsel Folsom and Mrs. Folsom entertained in their box Maj. Shirley T. High, State Senator Samuel A. Ettelson, and Mrs. E. F. Reese of Baltimore.

SAFETY LIFEBOATS ADOPTED BY GRAHAM & MORTON.

Carries 40 People on One Side Without Listing—Lowered by New Method.

The first complete compliance with the new government law providing for safety of lives on board steamers has been made by the Graham & Morton Transportation company in their new steamer, City of St. Joseph. General Passenger Agent E. A. Happerstead yesterday exhibited to visitors eight new Lundin lifeboats of a pattern which originated in Sweden and which never before have been seen on the great lakes.

Each lifeboat carries forty people and can be swung out, loaded, and lowered in three minutes by the men by means of a new style davit with crank and worm gear. The lifeboats are flat bottomed, with self-bailing valves. They have a superstructure which can be let down at the water line in order to let swimmers get aboard. Compartments in the bottom are filled with compressed air. The boat is said to have stood the test of having forty men stand on one side of it without listing.

Fourteen new life rafts, each carrying twenty-eight people, are part of the equipment. The rafts have huge drums with ten compartments filled with compressed air. A wireless equipment has been installed with a radius of from 300 to 600 miles.

"We were building the boat and considered that we had better anticipate the law as a matter of good sense," explained Mr. Happerstead.

Canadian a Chicago Visitor.

William H. Evanson, city controller of Winnipeg, Canada, is in Chicago on business for his government. Yesterday he was tendered a luncheon at the Auditorium hotel by George Sutherland, editor of the British American, and several Chicago Canadians.

COMPANY PAYS MEN TO SAVE

Consumers' Chief Plans to Add 1 Per Cent to 3 Per Cent Paid by Banks.

President Fred W. Upham of the Consumers company has decided to increase the thrift and wealth of his employés by paying them to put their money in savings banks. The banks pay 3 per cent interest on savings. Mr. Upham proposes to add 1 per cent to this so that a savings deposit made by employés of the Consumers company will draw 4 per cent, instead of 3. The plan will be carried out by means of an arrangement between the company and the banks designated to receive the deposits.

In order to make it easier for employés to put their cash in bank the company itself will, through the cashier, receive deposits intended for the savings bank, give a receipt to the employé for the same, and make the deposit in the name of the depositor.

SISTERS OF PROVIDENCE BUY VISITATION ACADEMY.

Building Will Be Enlarged and Opened for Pupils in the Fall—Campus to Be Extended.

The Sisters of Providence of St. Mary's of the Woods, Ind., yesterday purchased, through their Chicago attorney, Frank A. O'Donnell, the Academy of the Visitation Sisters at Evanston, and the superior general, Mother M. Cleophas, took possession last evening. The Sisters of the Visitation, who founded the academy fifteen years ago, have gone to other houses of the Visitation order in the west. The Sisters of Providence have charge of seventeeen schools in the Chicago diocese.

The academy is surrounded by ten acres of wooded ground, having a frontage on Ridge avenue, from Noyes avenue to Simpson street. While the consideration named in the deed is nominal, it is believed that the amount paid for the property was $150,000. The large brick building, which will accommodate 150 pupils, will be enlarged and opened for classes in September. The sisters will also add to the campus by the purchase of all the property west of the academy and grounds to Asbury avenue, from Simpson street to Leonard place.

The Academy of the Visitation will retain its original title. The cultural arts, music, painting, and oral expression will be included in the curriculum.

BOOMS STARTING WITH OPENING OF PRIMARY BATTLE

Flocks of Candidates Come Out for All Offices and a Great Contest Is Expected.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 26.—[Special.]—The flag falls for the Illinois 1916 campaign next Thursday, the morning after the Illinois legislature makes formal end of its session. It involves the presidency, the nominees for state offices from governor down, the twenty-seven congressmen from the state, and the makeup of the Fiftieth general assembly—the legislature which will celebrate the centennial of the state's admission to the union.

Republicans and Democrats have been waiting for the general assembly to quit before beginning an active campaign. They stopped to see what might be done in changing the primary date or in switching any of the primary or general law provisions..

The presidential primary—with the direct election of delegates from each district, together with eight delegates at large to be chosen from the entire state—will be held on April 11. The primary for the nomination of state officers, congressmen, members of the legislature, and county offices will be held on Sept. 13, the first Wednesday after the second Tuesday.

Greatest Primary Fight.

With these facts established and the general assembly to dissolve, the biggest primary fight in many years in Illinois is ready to open.

Candidates for office have flocked into Springfield during the closing hours of the general assembly. Big deals have been in the making and some of them have gone through. The biggest of all of them—that which contemplated a straightout slate of the apparently strongest kind—has fallen down.

It looks like a clean cut contest without a successful combination, for the present at least, between city and downstate, or between any Cook county faction and any element outside of Chicago.

Sherman for Presidency.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, with or without the support of the congressional crowd responsible for the James R. Mann boom. Sherman's friends are compactly organized and willing to give Mann a second chance at the nomination after a Sherman tryout.

If Mann does not want it that way the Sherman plans are perfected to make a fight for the fifty-eight Illinois delegates, beginning immediately.

Frank O. Lowden is an active aspirant for the Republican nomination for governor, and at the proper time will make his formal announcement. He prefers to hold off for a while, and his friends tried to force an April primary, in concert with such help as Mayor Thompson could give to the project. They failed in the legislature, but Col. Lowden's campaign has been permitted to go so far that there is no chance that he will quit.

Many Want Smaller Places.

Candidates for minor offices on the state ticket will be thick. Representative Homer J. Tice, who has been figured all through as a potential Sherman candidate for governor, is a candidate for state auditor. Howard Jayne of Monmouth, one of the Progressive leaders in the last house, will be a candidate for secretary of state.

The Republicans and the active Progressives of the 1912 campaign will be found working within the Republican ranks.

Gov. Dunne either will be a candidate for renomination or the full force of the state and national administration as far as it can be delivered will center around Henry M. Pindell of Peoria.

In the present figuring Cook county is not given great consideration from a downstate political viewpoint, and barring two or three candidates the downstate politicians are a unit in agreeing that a Chicago man will have a desperate time in landing on either of the state tickets by way of a state-wide primary.

Williams Stirs Up Contest.

The Democratic governorship nomination is getting stirred up, due considerably to the activities of Congressman Elza Williams. Mr. Pindell's boom was opened formally this week after much preliminary discussion.

Senator Sherman will take no part in the state ticket primary contest. His friends have the utmost confidence that he will be nominated for president in the Chicago convention of 1916 and are proceeding upon that theory.

Politicans experienced in state wide affairs who know the downstate situation as well as they do the Cook county affair, are unanimous in the view that Congressman Mann has no chance to get the Illinois delegates in such a primary as will be held on April 11. Sherman's friends want to maintain peace between the two, however, and are willing to do so. The reports that reach Springfield from some of the downstate districts where the old congressional crowd feels itself once more in the Republican saddle are somewhat disquieting to such a theory.

Old Congressmen Want Back.

Most, if not all, of the Republican congressmen who were defeated in 1912, and certainly all of those who were elected in 1914, will be candidates again next year. The biggest change in personnel is likely to be noted in the next legislature. Many of the men of influence in senate and house during the session which dies Wednesday will not seek renomination, and the 1918 general assembly at this juncture seems likely to pass into entirely new hands.

Col. Frank L. Smith, in perfecting his organization for the governorship, has set a fast pace for the other candidates. He was here this week, leaving the word that he has thirty-four counties now organized for himself. The Lowden campaign has been made quietly, but energetically, and no time has been lost, notwithstanding the lack of formal announcement from him. State Treasurer Russel has been running for governor since December.

Bennett of Rockford is the avowed dry candidate. Older politicians are disposed to discredit his campaign, but it is known that substantial and significant progress has been made in his behalf. Former Speaker Adkins is all but an announced candidate and privately boasts political and personal strength which is discounted in other camps. Former Senator Berry has announced his candidacy and seems to have done no more.

DUNNE TO HEAR PROTESTS UPON FOURTEEN BILLS

Will Listen Tomorrow to Arguments on Movie and Other Important Measures.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., June 26.—Gov Dunne has set formal hearings for Monday on fourteen bills that have been passed by both houses of the legislature and which await executive approval. The list comprises all of the bills upon which hearings have been requested aside from strictly appropriation measures.

The schedule of hearings follows:

9 a.m.—S. B. 108 and S. B. 34. The first changes the present law to promote refunding of bond issues of public service corporations without the necessity of paying the fee now required by the public utilities act. The second gives to the public utilities commission the right to fix the amount of capital stock to be issued by any public utility corporation.

10:30 a. m.—S. B. 328 and H. B. 781. The Dare, the Hull and the Rothschild bills intended to perfect arrangements for the south park improvements and involving the Calumet lake harbor proposition and the old Kleeman bill.

2 p. m.—H. B. 143. The Olson antitipping bill, framed to prevent hotels, theaters, etc., leasing space to the so-called "tip trust." Likely to raise a fine row before the governor, during which inner secrets may be revealed.

4 p. m.—S. B. 382. This is the state moving picture consorship bill, creating a state board to be appointed by the secretary of state, Lewis G. Stevenson, which shall have supreme control over all films exhibited in Illinois, and be superior to the Chicago local censorship board. The hearing promises to be the most interesting of the day.

4:30 p. m.—H. B. 268. The Hicks bill, permitting corporations to own real estate for the purpose of constructing buildings with a maximum of 80,000 square feet and the proviso that the cost of the building must be equal to one-half the value of the real estate.

Before Gov. Dunne departed for Chicago this morning to officiate at the automobile races he approved the following bills:

Causing the sanitary district to build bridges at Crawford, Cicero, and Seventy-second avenues.

Giving to the city of Chicago municipal control over "No Man's Land" near Morgan Park.

Permitting county treasurers to retain 2 per cent of collections of inheritance taxes.

SENATOR LEWIS WORTH BUT $500

Statesman's Holdings Dwindle from $6,600 in 1914, Tax Statement Shows.

PACKERS' ASSESSMENTS

James Hamilton Lewis, United States senator from Illinois, is worth $500.

That is the value he has placed on his personal property in a schedule filed with the board of assessors. Last year the assessors placed a valuation of $6,600 on his large wardrobe, his furniture, and paintings in the Virginia hotel.

For the first time since his election to the senate the bewhiskered statesman has voluntarily filed a schedule with the assessors. Whether the state's attorney's prosecution of tax dodgers influenced his decision could not be determined. Two years ago the senator was assessed at $3,000, with a penalty of $1,500 for failure to file a schedule. Last year his assessment was placed at $4,400, with another penalty of $2 200. Senator Lewis' contention when he was first elected was that he was immune from taxation because of his position.

Packing House Property Assessed.

The assessors made public the assessed valuations, one-third of actual values, of the packing house property in Chicago. The figures follow:

Swift & Co.	$3,150,000
Armour & Co.	2,875,000
Morris & Co.	920,000
Sulzberger & Sons company	625,000
Libby, McNeil & Libby	460,000
Anglo-American Provision company	300,000
Hammond company	150,000
Miller & Hart	82,500

Several heirs of estates are found to be paying much larger taxes than did the original owners following the scheduling of the property in the Probate court. In the case of the estate of John J. McDonald, who lived at the Virginia hotel, the heirs are now paying on a valuation of $50,000, while the late Mr. McDonald paid on a $10,000 basis.

"Flirting with a Buzzsaw."

Assistant State's Attorney Henry A Berger issued a statement attacking the assertion of the assessing board that personal property values in Cook county would be about $12,000,000 lower than last year.

"If this is the case," he said, "the assessors are flirting with the buzz saw. There are thousands more of schedules filed this year because of the prosecutions we instituted, and these ought to raise the valuations.

"The assessors have given out figures which are a severe arraignment of themselves and a reflection upon their efficiency. Each of the assessors has testified in court that but from 2 to 10 per cent of the personal property in Cook county was assessed and that there was thirty times the amount of property in the county which was not on the books. Where is this property? Why has it not been assessed?"

First National Tops Bank List.

The First National bank tops the list of valuations of bank properties, its taxable property being placed at $19,400,000

MRS. ALLEN NOT SLAIN, NEW THEORY

had told Dr. Benson that something was wrong and that an investigation should be conducted.

Wunderlich was asked what he did when he first reached the prison Sunday morning, and he said he went right to James Allen, brother of Warden Allen, and to William D. Heist, the attorney.

"Mrs. Allen Died Accidentally."

He was asked which one he talked to first, and Wunderlich said: "I think it was Mr. Allen.

"What did he tell you?"

"He told me that everything was regular, and that he had nothing to say other than Mrs. Allen had died accidentally."

Mr. Wunderlich was asked if Drs. Benson and Clemenson had completed their investigation at that time, and he replied that he thought they had. He was asked if James Allen knew that, and his reply was, "I hardly think he does know it."

Here's Different Story.

Coroner Wunderlich, when communicated with by long distance telephone from THE TRIBUNE office, asserted he had not intimated there was anything irregular with the inquest.

"Did you see the body?" he was asked.

"Certainly I saw the body," he replied. "One of my deputies removed it from the bed."

"Why didn't you conduct the investigation as coroner?"

"I did," he snapped. "I was there at every hearing. I swore in the jurors and swore every witness. It was a case for the state's attorney as well as the coroner. Warden Allen said he was satisfied to have things conducted by Mr. Heise as his representative, and so long as it was his wife who was dead he had a perfect right to do that, didn't he? If Mr. Allen is satisfied nobody else has a kick, has he? There are lots of things in this world we are not satisfied with, but can't help, aren't there? If Joe Campbell isn't the murderer, why, I guess they won't hang him. He hasn't been tried yet."

Dressmaker Tells Story.

While doubt was being raised as to the murder investigation showed there could be no suspicion attached to that part of the evidence which showed Mrs. Allen had been unable to join her husband in Chicago and accompany him to West Baden. The dressmaker asserted she had not finished the garment Mrs. Allen was to wear.

"Mrs. Allen seemed to be greatly disappointed because I had not put the buttons and some trimmings on the garment so she could go with her husband," said the dressmaker. "I told her I would work at night and try to get the buttons on and the dress finished, but she said I need not do that, as she wouldn't get it in time to accompany Mr. Allen anyway."

James Allen, a brother of the warden, expressed surprise when informed of the interview with Coroner Wunderlich. He said he did not see how any one could entertain an idea that death had been due to an accident. He said he did not wish to be quoted further on the matter until he had talked with Coroner Wunderlich himself or had had a chance to read what he had to say.

Find Campbell's White Wife.

While Joliet was disturbed over the new angle of the case, Chicago detectives leaped into the investigation.

The white wife of "Chicken Joe" Campbell, the negro trusty accused of the murder of Warden Allen's wife at Joliet, was interviewed at headquarters yesterday by Lieut. James V. Larkin, detailed to assist in clearing up the penitentiary death mystery. Detectives found her in a rooming house at Twenty-second and South La Salle streets, where she was living as "Mrs. Ellen Garrett."

Through the woman Lieut. Larkin had hoped to get important information, but she proved no more pliable a subject than "Chicken Joe" himself.

Campbell Hoped for Parole.

"I lived with Joe as his common law wife for six months before he was sent to prison," she admitted. "When I visited him at Joliet I always gave my name as Mrs. Cohen. I didn't think it made any difference. The last time I saw Joe—two weeks ago—he said he expected to get out on parole soon. He asked me to pawn a ring so he could pay his lawyer."

Cross questioning of the woman brought forth no information having bearing on the murder, and by Lieut. Larkin's order she was released.

The lieutenant reported to Capt. P. D. O'Brien as a result of his investigation at Joliet that he believed Campbell to be the murderer. Larkin is of the opinion the crime was committed the night before the fire in the warden house bedroom.

Believes Campbell Innocent.

Thomas J. Johnson, former assistant county attorney of Cook county, following a conference with "Chicken Joe" in the Will county jail, said he believed the negro was innocent and is being "jobbed" for the crime.

Johnson, in Joliet on another case, said he was asked by relatives of the prisoner to visit him, and intimated that he might defend him when he was brought to trial in September. The Chicago attorney was Campbell's counsel in Chicago some years ago.

Says Campbell Is Innocent.

"Campbell never could have committed that crime," said Johnson, "his is not the appearance of a man guilty of one of the most heinous crimes in the history of the state. I am sure that the authorities here have not got the right man for this murder."

Johnson refused to discuss the case further and caught a train back to Chicago. Before going he visited the prison where Mrs. Allen was found dead last Sunday morning.

U. S. S. WYOMING IS HIGHEST TYPE OF DREADNAUGHT

Flagship of Admiral Fletcher Carries Complement 1,091 Officers and Men.

A rotogravure picture of the United States battleship Wyoming forms a special part of "The Sunday Tribune" today. This is the third of a series of striking pictures of American battleships that will be a regular part of "The Sunday Tribune."

The battleship Wyoming, which is the flagship of Admiral Fletcher of the Atlantic fleet, represents the highest type of the dreadnaught class carrying 12 inch guns. Mounted in pairs in six turrets amidships the Wyoming, like its sister ship, the Arkansas, has a battery of twelve 12 inch 50 caliber rifles, all of which can be fired in broadside. Its secondary battery consists of twenty-one 5 inch 51 caliber guns. It also has two 21 inch submerged torpedo tubes.

The belt armor of the Wyoming is eleven inches thick for 400 feet amidships and five inches at the ends. On the turrets proper the armor is twelve inches and on the turret bases eleven inches. The smaller guns have six and one-half inch armor casements. The ship has no desk armor.

The Wyoming was laid down at the Cramp yards in February, 1910, launched in May of the next year, and completed in September, 1912.

The general dimensions of the Wyoming are: Normal displacement, 26,000 tons; full load, 27,243 tons; length, 554 feet at the waterline; beam, 93¼ feet; mean draft, 28½ feet; length over all, 562 feet.

Four Parsons turbine engines with a designed horsepower of 28,000 have driven the Wyoming at the rate of 22.45 knots an hour during speed trials.

As a flagship the Wyoming carries a complement of 1,091 officers and men.

Star Spangled Banner Society.

The first meeting of the Star Spangled Banner association of Illinois, local No. 1, will be held in the Hotel La Salle Tuesday night, and the organization of the first society under the national organization will be completed. The national society was organized Sept. 14, 1914, with Mayor James H. Preston of Baltimore as its president.

¶ The location of Portia Manor—thus far a secret, as far as the general public is concerned—will be made known shortly and the date of sale announced. Then people will stand aghast to learn that such wonderfully desirable property is to be sold so cheap—property with 28-minute transportation to the city—property of such matchless location—property with so many advantages as this.

¶ Think of the most favorable spot you can imagine for a suburban home—the prettiest and most desirable location around Chicago, with schools, churches and all city conveniences. And then consider that you will be able to buy a half acre (120x125 feet) for as little as $625 here; a quarter acre (60x125 feet) for as low as $300—all on easy terms, with only 10 per cent down. (No interest for two years.)

CZAR'S MINISTER OF WAR DRIVEN OUT OF OFFICE?

Gen. Sukhomlinoff Is Reported to Have Resigned; Blamed for Galician Defeats.

LONDON, June 26.—Unconfirmed reports were received here tonight from Petrograd that Gen. Sukhomlinoff, who was appointed Russian war minister in 1909, has resigned and that one of his subordinates has been named his successor. Gen. Polivanoff, a former assistant minister of war, is mentioned.

Gen. Sukhomlinoff is a veteran of the Turkish war of 1878, in which he won distinction. He did not see active service in the Russo-Japanese war, but because of his special knowledge of Russia's western frontier and of his organizing ability he was named to the war ministry. He was formerly governor of the Russian province of Kieff.

Reports have been circulated in Berlin of great dissatisfaction in Petrograd over the Russian defeats in Galicia and the failure of administrative heads to provide the army with adequate supplies of ammunition.

Big Guns Sent to Poland.

A Central News dispatch from Amsterdam says several trains loaded with heavy guns have left Essen for the German front on the Bzura river, in Poland, where it is believed they will be used in an advance against Warsaw.

Reports from reliable sources discount rumors that Field Marshal von Mackensen has rushed large bodies of troops westward for an immediate campaign against Warsaw or to hold the German line in France. The Teuton field marshal apparently plans to sweep Galicia free of Russian forces.

A dispatch from Berlin stated that an American military attaché who entered Lemberg with the Austro-German troops returned to the German capital this afternoon with the news that the Galician offensive is continuing.

Germans Attack Warsaw Lines.

BERLIN, June 26.—The war office announced this afternoon that German troops have launched a violent attack against the Russians north of Warsaw. Würtemberg troops have stormed and captured a Russian position at Oglenda, north of Przasnysz.

Oglenda lies fifty-two miles north of Warsaw near the right bank of the Orzec river. The war office statement did not indicate how many troops were in the attacking force.

"In Galicia, Gen. von Linsingen is continuing his attacks on the north bank of the Dniester," said the official statement.

Germans Active in Poland.

PETROGRAD, June 26.—German attacks north of Warsaw are increasing in violence. The war office admitted today that under terrific bombardment by German howitzers the Russians were forced to evacuate a fortification wrecked by the enemy's fire.

Between the Omulew and Orzec rivers considerable enemy artillery reinforcements have arrived, accompanied by fresh bodies of infantry. Whether the new attack launched by the Teutons in the region constitutes the beginning of a new drive on Warsaw is not indicated in official dispatches made public here. The war office, however, reported the fighting between the rivers growing more intense.

Teutons Repulsed Along Dniester.

In southeast Galicia the Slavs continue to beat back all enemy attempts to cross the Dniester. The remnants of Gen. von Linsingen's forces, defeated at Kosary, have been thrown back across the river with heavy losses. In the Martynow-Styr region 715 prisoners have been taken, in addition to those previously reported.

Austrian troops Thursday night launched a new attempt to cross the river south of Bukaczovice. Russian artillery shattered one enemy pontoon after another, and at noon yesterday when the last dispatches were filed to the war office the czar's forces were holding their own.

Only minor clashes have occurred in the last twenty-four hours between the Russians who withdrew from Lemberg and the armies of Field Marshal von Mackensen.

Jap Officers Die in Russia.

TOKIO, June 26.—Maj. Nakajima and Capt. Hashimoto, Japanese officers fighting with the Russian army at Lemberg, killed themselves when the Galician capital fell rather than suffer what they considered the dishonor of being made prisoners of war, according to official advices received from Petrograd.

POLICE OFFICER IN BERLIN SUFFERS FROM "SPY SCARE."

Goes Insane and Holds Up Teamster in Street at Point of Revolver as "Enemy of the Country."

BERLIN, via London, June 26.—A policeman with leveled revolver held up a teamster in the crowded streets today and demanded his surrender "as a spy in the pay of the enemy."

When the astounded teamster clung to his box the policeman shot one of the horses dead. The incident attracted other officers and a great crowd which threatened the driver with violence.

The driver finally was escorted under a heavy guard to a police station, where it was discovered that the policeman had suddenly become insane. The teamster was released immediately.

ITALIANS TAKE MOUNTAIN AFTER DESPERATE BATTLE.

Report from Rome Tells of Capture of Zellfkofel and Several Other Important Positions.

ROME, June 26.—Braving a deadly rain of shrapnel and rifle bullets, Italian Alpinists have stormed and captured several Austrian positions along the Tyrol and Carnia frontier, including the peak of Zellfkofel. The Austrians have again begun their determined attacks upon Freikofel, but have been hurled down the slopes with serious losses.

Along the Isonzo, particularly in the region between Tolmino and Goritz, the Italians continue to make progress.

The Austrians have fortified strongly all their positions in the Carnic and Tyrolian Alps.

THROW OUT OLD FOR NEW IN NAVY, DANIELS URGES.

Appeals to Officers to Take Advantage of Object Lessons in Europe.

Newport, R. I., June 26.—In an address at the opening session of the Navy War college here today Secretary of the Navy Daniels appealed to American naval officers to profit by the lessons that were being taught by the great war in Europe and to discard fearlessly all theories which failed to stand the acid test. He referred briefly to the navy program for the coming year and expressed confidence that congress would authorize any increase recommended.

"In personnel and material the navy is larger than ever before," Mr. Daniels said. "Its men are trained and fit. Its experts in every department are active to remedy any defects of the past and to take advantage of all that has been learned in the only true school in which this knowledge can be obtained by observing through our experts in Europe all that may be learned from actual war.

"We have seen the main fleet of the greatest sea nation in the world withdrawn from the seas to some secluded harbor without having fired a shot during the first year of a mighty conflict.

"My earnest word, my solemn plea today is to urge you fearlessly to discard worship of all things that are old and to adopt courageously everything that is new the moment that some development of the present convinces you that the old way is no longer the right way.

"I hereby pledge myself to spare no effort to assist this onward march. Rest assured that what you plan will find a sympathetic and attentive ear."

MAXIM URGES A BIG ARMY; NEARLY DISRUPTS MEETING.

Delegates to Student Conference on International Relations Leave Hall at Ithaca, N. Y.

Ithaca, N. Y., June 26.—An address by Hudson Maxim, the inventor, today threatened to disrupt the student conference on international relations which is in session here. Mr. Maxim spoke on armament, national preparedness, and neutrality, and after he concluded his remarks thirty delegates, who disagreed with his expressed views, left the hall.

One delegate moved to adjourn, but the motion was lost. An apology was offered the inventor, and harmony was restored.

Mr. Maxim criticized Pontius Pilate as the "arch-typical neutral"; declared modern style guns and armaments are life saving machines, and asserted that it is more dangerous to ride in an automobile than to go into the trenches.

He said that war has never done harm, but always has done good, and asserted that the United States needed an army "strong and skillful enough to defeat any coalition of nations that could possibly stand against us."

PADEREWSKI ON MERCY MISSION

Pianist Returns to Chicago in the Interest of the Polish Sufferers.

Ignace Jan Paderewski, the great pianist, and his wife returned to Chicago yesterday to present to Archbishop Quigley or his aids a copy of a letter sent by the pope pronouncing his apostolic blessing on the work of relief for the Polish sufferers in the war zone.

The noted pianist has contributed his entire private fortune to this relief work in addition to turning over his estate in Switzerland for hospital purposes.

Henryk Sienkiewicz, author of "Quo Vadis" and president of the general committee for the relief of sufferers in Poland, telegraphed the vatican, and in response received a letter from Cardinal Gasparri, a copy of which was brought to Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Paderewski. The letter, in part, says:

> I can really give you the assurance that your committee in rescuing the victims of the war in Poland, and thus doing eminently pious and charitable work, has touched the paternal heart of the august pontiff. In his beloved sons of Poland he not only sees a noble people plunged in terror and desolation but recognizes and loves sons particularly devoted and generous, attached to the holy see.

Paderewski is head of the National American Society for Polish Relief.

GERMANY MUST RULE ALL, VON REVENTLOW DECLARES.

Those Who Refuse to Hate England Must Be Regarded with Disgust, His Article Says.

AMSTERDAM, June 26.—The Berlin Tages Zeitung, which has reappeared after a brief suspension for publishing violent anti-American articles, publishes an article by Count von Reventlow warning Germany not to allow its hatred for the British to abate.

"The war has proved that no understanding is ever possible with England," says the count. "Germany cannot accept the position of ruling the world side by side with England.

"Therefore, it must break the strength of the island without paying any attention to the possibility of future friendship. Those who refuse to hate England may be regarded with contempt and disgust. No other course is possible for true Germans."

ALLIED AIRMEN DESTROY TRAIN OF AMMUNITION.

Fifty German Soldiers Killed When Bombs Are Dropped on Supplies Near Roulers.

LONDON, June 26.—British aviators bombarded and blew up a large German ammunition supply train near Roulers, killing fifty German soldiers, according to Rotterdam dispatches today.

24 RESERVISTS HELD UNDER BOND BY U. S. OFFICIAL

Men Taken from Troop Train Prove to Be Montenegrins Instead of Serbs.

Those twenty-four reservists who were removed with some difficulty from a Canada bound Wabash train Friday night discovered yesterday that it is also a long, long way to Montenegro.

United States Commissioner Mason, before whom the allies interrupted reinforcements were arraigned, continued their cases until Wednesday afternoon and held each in $1,000 bonds. Charges of violation of the neutrality of the United States have been entered against the twenty-four, who are believed either to have enlisted or agreed to enlist in foreign military service, although citizens of the United States.

Must Prove Peaceful Intention.

Unless the Montenegrins are able to prove their journey was planned for strictly peaceful purposes they will not be permitted to continue it.

When federal officers stopped the war train they were under the impression the reservists they were intercepting were Serbians. The authorities were still of that belief when the twenty-four were arraigned. Then came John R. Palendech, editor of the United Serbian and Balkan World.

"These men are Montenegrins," he said. "Montenegro has no regular standing army, but by law every man past 20 must answer a call to arms. That call has gone forth, and the Montenegrins living in the United States feel they are still subject to the old laws."

Serbian Acts as Interpreter.

Stephen T. Mandich, president of the Serbian Turner society, acted as interpreter for the defendants. He wore a uniform of which a scarlet shirt and baggy trousers of khaki were the predominant features—a uniform, he was careful to explain, designed not for the warfare of the trenches but for the gymnastic exercises of the turners.

"The real leader of these men isn't here," Mandich told the commissioner. His name is Tony Katzma, I believe, and he's in Canada."

Lucien C. Wheeler, department of justice investigator, says he expects to arrest two men responsible for most of the recruiting work in the United States within a few days.

WILSON TAKING REAL REST AT VERMONT SUMMER HOME.

President Goes Automobiling Over Countryside — Gets Reassuring Messages from Washington.

Windsor, Vt., June 26.—With members of his family, President Wilson spent a quiet and uneventful day and night. He remained at the "summer White House," working on some correspondence this morning and late this afternoon went automobiling through the Connecticut valley to Hanover, N. H., and White River Junction, Vt. He was accompanied on the ride by Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Miss Margaret Wilson, and Dr. Cary T. Grayson. Miss Helen Woodrow Bones and "Baby" Sayre remained at Harlakenden house.

The president received word from the White House in Washington that everything "was quiet," but his private car is being kept here constantly in case a crisis in the foreign situation arises and the president should be called hurriedly to Washington. At present he has no expectation of leaving before July 4.

While Mr. Wilson was riding three negro employés on his private car put out a fire. The president, himself an honorary member of the Gulfport, Miss., fire department, as a result of his part in extinguishing a fire there in 1913, expressed pleasure when he heard of the work of the men.

It took one full year to catch up with the orders. Before the end of that year the car reached a sale of $900,000 weekly.

Model No. 3—Price $1350

Now—for 1916—comes out Model No. 3. The price is $200 less than last season's model. It is $400 less than 14 months ago. That because this Hudson has come to outsell any other quality car in the world.

In 20 months, 51 improvements have been made in this car. Every detail has received the final touch. And 15,000 owners have found in this Hudson the best car they ever knew.

This new model—just out—brings some radical advances found in no other car as yet.

The graceful "Yacht-Line" Body
The "Lustrous" Finish

After each coat the body goes to an oven. Each coat of finish is baked on. The result is a finish that stays new.

The new tonneau is more roomy, the rear seat is wider, the upholstery is enameled leather.

The sales of this new car are breaking all Hudson records. Please come and see it while early delivery is possible.

DEMAND BRITAIN PERMIT IMPORTS FROM GERMANY

Merchants Urge Lansing to Secure Passage for Goods Waiting in Holland.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Lansing today conferred with a number of importers who came to Washington to seek relief from the British orders in council. They asked the secretary to insist that Britain permit goods which they have purchased in Germany and which now lie on the docks at Rotterdam to come to this country.

Secretary Lansing, following the conference, declined to make any statement as to the course of action which the government will pursue. That some action will be taken was indicated by the presence at the conference of Acting Counselor Anderson, Solicitor Johnson, and Trade Adviser Rose.

The committee of importers, representing more than 1,000 dealers in foreign goods and more than 100,000 stores all over the United States, presented a petition to Secretary Lansing to hand to President Wilson for consideration.

Seek Steady Supply of Goods.

"The British government does not follow any declared and maintained blockade of German territory, but we have been unable to induce any steamship companies to carry our goods, American property, either from unblockaded German ports or from neutral ports to which the goods have been shipped by means of internal land communication," the petition reads. "We are interested in lawfully obtaining an uninterrupted supply of our American owner merchandise, whether the same has been paid for, contracted for, or maybe paid for in the future.

"We are not compensated by a payment for a particular cargo after legal proceedings in the British courts, for we are concerned in maintaining the long established trade of this country and preventing a sacrifice of American capital invested in our commerce."

Status of Goods in Dispute.

Great Britain contends that the goods in dispute, worth about $50,000,000, are still of "enemy character," while the United States asserts that they are not, inasmuch as they are now under a neutral flag at Rotterdam. Great Britain is applying to these goods the doctrine of "continuous voyage," usually applied only to the shipment of contraband into a belligerent country.

Informal negotiations are now in progress with the British trade adviser, Sir Richard Crawford. If these fail to bring about relief, vigorous measures will probably be taken by the administration.

BRITISH LABOR LEADERS TELL WORKERS TO ENLIST.

All Not Engaged in Making War Munitions Are Urged to Show Patriotism.

LONDON, June 26.—Trade union leaders today issued a manifesto addressed to their fellow trade unionists saying:

"We are faced with a great responsibility and at the same time are presented with a magnificent opportunity. We are called upon to assist in saving our nation and its allies who are fighting for civilization and international law as against barbarism and brute force."

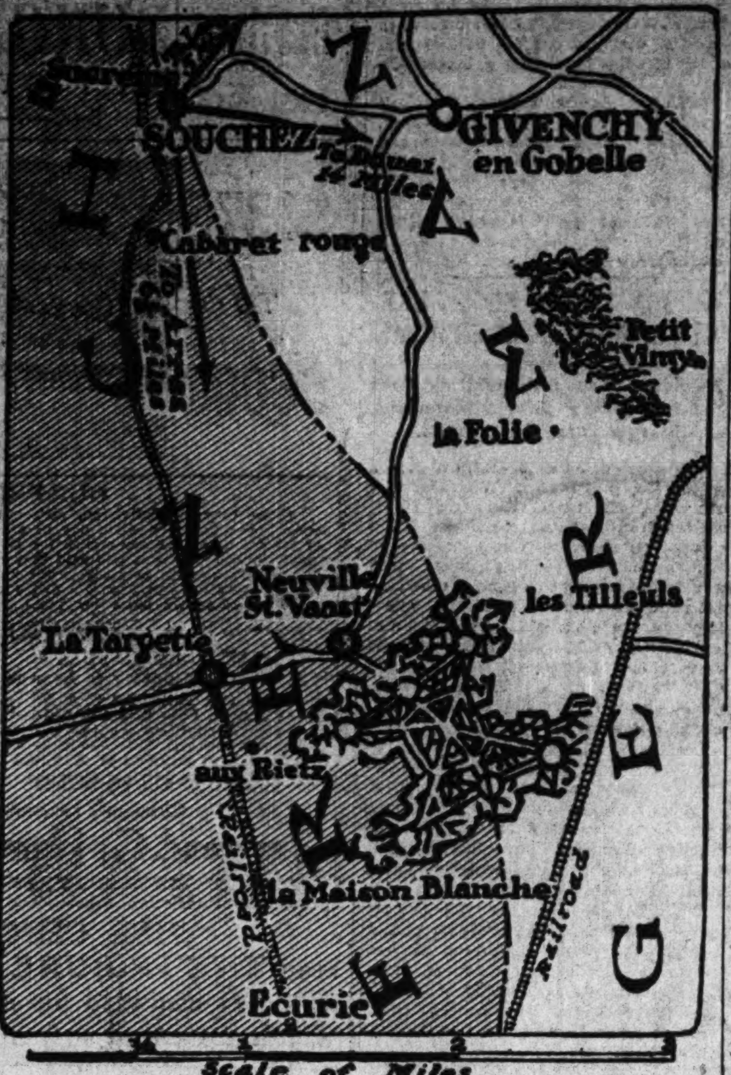
After calling attention to the serious position of the British and Russian armies in the field in consequence of the shortage of munitions the manifesto appeals to "every skilled workman of the engineering and allied trades who is not at present engaged upon war work to enroll himself as a volunteer in this hour of need . . . demonstrate to his comrades in the trenches and to the whole world that British trade unionism stands for all that is best in national life, national freedom and in national security."

SHIP SINKS; CREW RESCUED.

Captain of Dutch Vessel Believes Steamer Was Torpedoed in Gulf of Bothnia.

COPENHAGEN, June 26.—The Dutch steamer Ceres was sunk in the Gulf of Bothnia yesterday, either by a mine or a torpedo. The crew was landed on the Swedish coast late last night. Capt. Buys believes the steamer was torpedoed. He said he saw a torpedo boat nearby half an hour before an explosion wrecked his vessel.

"Labyrinth," Built by Germans Scene of Terrific Fighting.



This map, taken from the Paris Matin, shows the famous "Labyrinth," the strongest German fortification which bars the French advance on Lens, north of Arras. The sketch is based on the reports and sketches of French aviators, together with those of French engineers who have been mining their way through the vast work just southeast of Neuville St. Vaast.

The square mile or more of fortifications is one enormous labyrinth of trenches, intersecting at all angles and connected with communication burrows and fitted with concrete bomb proofs. At almost every angle is a concealed machine gun, and the circles shown are armored cupolas, where field pieces and howitzers are mounted. The whole work contains several miles of trenches.

Reports from Paris assert that the allies have captured the position after weeks of hand-to-hand fighting, but this is contradicted by messages from Berlin, which assert the armies of the kaiser are maintaining their positions at many points.

PAY NOW FOR SINKING BOAT, U. S. DEMAND ON GERMANY.

Ambassador Gerard Presents American Note in Berlin—Further Delay Held Not Justifiable.

BERLIN, June 26.—Ambassador James W. Gerard today called at the German foreign office and presented the American note regarding the American ship William P. Frye, which was sunk by the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich. The note finds the German conditions for delay in the payment of compensation until the case is passed on by a prize court to be unconvincing and asks that payment be made now.

GERMAN SOCIALIST JOURNAL SUSPENDED FOR PEACE PLEA

Vorwaerts Suppressed for Publishing Party Appeal to End War in International Amity.

LONDON, June 26.—For publishing the Socialist appeal for peace the Vorwärts has been suspended, according to a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam.

The appeal, promulgated by the managing committee of the Social Democratic party of Germany, pleads for peace under circumstances which will allow nations to live in harmony and friendship, and flatly opposes any idea of territorial expansion or annexation. The manifesto asserts that the people want peace.

GERMANS REPORT GAINS BY FORCES ON WESTERN LINE

Battle Near Souchez Ended with Driving of French from All Positions Gained.

BERLIN, June 26.—Successes for German arms at three points on the western battle front are reported in the official report issued today.

"The battle north of Souchez and between Souchez and Neuville ended last night," the statement said. "The last Frenchman was ejected from our trenches despite the arrival of reinforcements.

"French attacks in the Meuse hills and also eastward, near Luneville, were beaten off. We captured an advance enemy position east of De Tranchea."

French Admit Losses.

PARIS, June 26.—The war office admitted tonight that violent German attacks on the Meuse heights enabled the enemy to penetrate one of the advanced French trenches. All other attacks in this region were repulsed, the official communique declared.

The Germans have resumed the artillery battle around Arras, shelling French works north of the town. Several artillery engagements occurred between Arras and Souchez.

BULGARIA IN WAR SOON? TROOPS CALLED TO COLORS.

Negotiations in Roumania Near End—Greek Leaders Confer on Conflict.

ROME, June 26.—"Bulgaria's participation in the war is now considered inevitable," wired the Saloniki correspondent of the Tribuna today.

"All Bulgarians in Saloniki and Kavala have been called to the colors."

All Bulgarians in Italy today were ordered to hold themselves in readiness to join the colors at a moment's notice.

The Balkan situation tonight held the closest attention of diplomats here. Dispatches from the Balkan capitals were heavily censored, but it became known here this afternoon that Bulgaria is preparing for hostilities and that important negotiations at Bucharest are about to be concluded.

Former Premier Venizelos is holding a series of conferences with the Greek "war party" leaders in advance of the meeting of the new Greek parliament on July 20.

SUBMARINE BLOWS UP AT SEA

Only Two Members of Crew on German Craft Reported Saved.

AMSTERDAM, June 26.—A German submarine was accidentally blown up in the North sea last Tuesday, according to advices from the Borkum islands tonight. Only two members of the crew are reported saved.

REVIEW OF THE WAR FOR THE WEEK.

Following is a general survey of the operations of the European armies during last week in the various war zones:

ON THE EASTERN FRONT.

The capture of Lemberg by the Austro-German armies was the one big development of the week along the European battle fronts. That Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander in chief, has managed to keep his lines intact and inflict severe losses on the enemy is indicated by reports since last Tuesday, when the Galician capital was retaken.

Vienna and Berlin announced that as a result of the fighting from June 12 to the entry of the city the Austro-Germans had taken 60,000 prisoners. Comparatively few cannon were lost by the Russians in their 150 mile retreat from the Dunajec-Carpathian front to Lemberg and the Dniester. Dispatches from Petrograd carry the claim that the Russians have captured 130,000 Austro-Germans and many guns in the seven weeks' campaign.

The week closed with the Russians on the offensive from east of Lemberg to Zolkiew and along the Dniester from Kalicz to Zurawno. Along the latter front they forced the Teutons to fall back to the south bank of the river.

The Galician battle line now extends along the Dniester from the Bukowina-Bessarabia frontier northwest to the Swica river, southeast of Lemberg. Thence it follows the railway northward and swings around east of Lemberg and Zolkiew to Rawa Ruska. From there it swerves to the west and northwest, following the line of the Tanew river to its junction with the San and thence northwest into Poland east of Kielce.

Aside from its strategic importance, the capture of Lemberg has had a tremendous effect on the fighting spirit of the Teuton armies and a correspondingly depressing effect on the allies. The gloom in London was particularly marked during the week because of the Russian reverses in Galicia. This depression was deepened by the inability of the Franco-British expedition to make any progress along the Dardanelles. Until this entrance to the Russian Black sea ports is opened to admit arms and ammunition, little progress can be made toward reorganizing the czar's depleted armies so that they can hope to start a counter drive.

It is not the fate of Grand Duke Nicholas' armies that is worrying London, however, but rather their own frontiers, the battle front in Belgium and France being in reality Britain's first line of defense. This gloomy view is based on the opinion that Germany and Austria will be able to release a million and perhaps more men to throw into the western front to pound their way to the channel ports of France. With Russia beaten back and more or less demoralized, a large percentage of the 4,000,000 men can be spared for service on other fronts.

Since the fall of Lemberg there has been no definite information to indicate what the next big step is to be in the kaiser's general plan of campaign. He may decide to keep up the hammering along the Russian lines with the hope of crushing the czar's armies before they can reorganize or their western allies can get new guns and ammunition to them. A new move against Warsaw along the Bzura-Rawka line also has been predicted, as well as a heavy flanking move along the Shavli-Niemen river front. By pressing home the present offensive in the south and moving to the rear of Warsaw from the north the Russian center at Warsaw will be in grave danger.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

The sector north of Arras continued to be the main area of hostilities on the western front during the week, with the French pounding away in their effort to reach Lens. Gen. Joffre's armies also made slight gains along the Fecht river in Alsace, on the heights of the Meuse at Calonne, and in Lorraine near Reillon.

This activity in the west, however, did not assume the importance of a general attack calculated to relieve the pressure on the Russians in Galicia.

That the Germans have not given up hope of pounding their way through to Calais and the channel ports was indicated by a renewal of fierce artillery attacks on the extreme left of the allies' line. Added to this was the bombardment of Dunkirk with the heavy siege guns back of the German lines.

London again showed it was firmly convinced that the supreme aim of the entire German campaign is to reach across the channel and strike a staggering blow at Great Britain. On this belief is based England's policy of maintaining the larger share of her new army at home.

England's troubles with her munitions supply reached a crisis during the week. David Lloyd-George, minister of munitions, issued a warning Wednesday in the house of commons that unless labor voluntarily and to the limit of its power entered the munition factories and kept the armies in the field supplied, the government would enforce compulsory service. The labor leaders at their own request were given a week in which to meet the demand for workmen. Unless they bring their followers in line the British government "will act." England will have conscription or service in its arms factories if not for actual service at the front.

ON THE AUSTRO-ITALIAN FRONT.

It became evident during the week that the Austrians had succeeded in throwing heavier forces along the Italian frontier than had been anticipated when Rome decided to enter the war a month ago. The Teuton successes in Galicia and the elimination of the danger of invasion across the Carpathians have made this possible.

The general Italian advance along the Isonzo front did not materialize, Goritz and Tolmino (Tolmein) still being successfully defended by the Austrians.

The week closed with the Italians claiming to be in position to dominate the entire upper Isonzo river with their artillery. Rome also announced that the Austrians had gathered a force of 200,000 around Triest.

In Trentino and on the Carnic front the progress of Emmanuel's forces has been growing gradually slower owing to the difficulties of the mountainous region in which the operations are being carried on. The reports of the last week also indicate that the Austrians are gradually checking the invaders. This was particularly true along the northern Isonzo front in the region of Monte Nero.

On the northeast the Italians continued to hammer away at the forts defending Malborget, while their army has pushed slowly from the east along the Fella valley and from the south through Predil pass toward Tarvis.

ALONG THE DARDANELLES.

What little news came from the Gallipoli peninsula during the week showed that the Franco-British allies and the Turks were still deadlocked. All the official reports given out during the week deal with operations of an earlier period. A Paris report recorded terrific fighting June 4 on the hill at Krithia, in which the French and British joined in carrying a number of the enemy's trenches. Constantinople reported a heavy engagement June 1 lasting from morning until midnight, in which the allies' attacks south of Sed-el-Bahr were repulsed with loss.

From Athens came a report that the Turks had lost 143,000 in killed and wounded in the Gallipoli peninsula in the fighting so far.

Cadillac
Standard of the World

Yes, and the standard up to which other makers are now trying to build their cars.

Every maker who announces a car with V-type motor announces the leadership of the Cadillac—announces that Cadillac engineering genius exceeds his own—announces that the standard he aims at is the Cadillac Standard.

And since practically every maker of worthwhile cars has already made this announcement, you have the word of the entire industry that the Cadillac is the standard of their world—the car by whose perfection all other cars are to be judged.

Today the Cadillac is not only the leading car. It leads by a year. It is the only car of its type with any history behind it—the only car of which enough have been sold to really prove its perfection. And how wonderfully it has been proved!

Today no car without a V-type motor is considered by the well informed. And among V-type motored cars there is but one of verified efficiency and durability, the Cadillac "Eight." Now as always you are safe when you buy a Cadillac.

Foster Service—

How easy it is to say "Service!" And how few really know what it means to give full measure of it! We know. We are constantly planning to give better service. Any suggestions our customers can offer will be appreciated.

AMERICANS FACE ARREST AS SPIES BY WAR NATIONS

Citizens Advised to Stay Away from Europe by the State Department.

BY EX-ATTACHE.

[Copyright: 1915: By the Brentwood Co.]

Americans should keep away from Europe this year and devote the leisure and the money which in former years they spent abroad to visiting their own country. They are not wanted just at present on the other side of the Atlantic.

Not a week passes without their ambassadors in France, in England, and in Italy urging them to keep away, these requests being reiterated and emphasized from Washington, D. C., by the state department. Moreover, their admittance to the territories of the now numerous belligerent powers is made difficult by the ever increasing severity of the passport regulations.

Americans on arriving in England are turned back unless their United States passport bears the visa and stamp of British diplomatic or consular officials in the United States, and no foreigner is permitted to land in France or to enter French territory by way of Spain, Switzerland, or Italy without his passport having been duly viséd by the French consul in the city from which he has started on his journey.

France to Take Action.

Cable dispatches from France during the last week have intimated that the French government has virtually decided to instruct its diplomatic and consular representatives in America to refuse from henceforth to accord their visé to the United States passports of German born citizens of this country, owing to the number of persons of Teutonic origin who have used the prerogatives of citizenship of the land of their adoption to work for the land of their birth.

So many of those who have been arrested in Great Britain, in France, and more recently in Italy on charges of espionage have been found to be provided with United States passports, guaranteeing them to be American citizens by virtue of naturalization, although originally from Germany, that objections are now being raised to the continued admittance of foreigners of this character.

It is highly probable that the English and Italian governments will follow the example of France in the matter, and that as the war progresses restrictive measures of this nature will be largely increased in severity rather than diminished.

Spy Mania Prevalent.

Among the reasons which prompt the state department at Washington and its representatives abroad to discourage Americans from visiting Europe at the present moment, save in cases of absolute necessity and urgency, is the prevalence of the so-called spy mania, which is at its height in every one of the countries now engaged in war.

To begin with, every foreigner is regarded with suspicion, not alone by the authorities but also by the people.

The foreign visitor is also at the mercy of every petty spite and private vengeance. A discharged servant, a disgruntled tradesman, a false friend has only to send in some anonymous denunciation to insure unpleasant surveillance and probably expulsion or arrest.

Get Short Shrift.

On the other hand, if the aspersions prove to be well founded, conviction speedily follows, and the shrift is short. Two German-Americans, duly provided with United States passports, viséd by English consular officials in this country, have already been shot in the moat in the tower of London since the beginning of the present war, the second execution of this kind taking place on Wednesday last. No other capital punishment has been inflicted within the precincts of the thousand year old tower of London since the peers engaged in the Jacobite rebellion in the early part of the eighteenth century lost their heads on Tower hill.

Numbers of other German-Americans, convicted of espionage, have been sentenced to long terms of penal servitude, and there have been so many cases of the same kind in France that its government has decided from henceforth to bar all German-American citizens from its soil.

Holland May Fight.

Holland seems to be on the point of joining in the war on the side of the triple entente. It was but the other day that Gottlieb von Jagow, the German minister of foreign affairs, announced in the reichstag at Berlin that "Germany cannot annex Belgium without annexing Holland also."

It is true that he delivered himself of this utterance by way of an indirect denial that the kaiser had any designs upon the Netherlands.

However, since then steps have been taken by Germany to proclaim the annexation of Belgium, which is reported from Germany and from Belgium alike, to be imminent, so much so that Handelsblad of Amsterdam, one of the most important organs of the press of Holland, and which is regarded as the mouthpiece of the Dutch government, has just declared in a very outspoken and obviously inspired article that "a proclamation by Germany of the annexation of Belgium during this war can and must be interpreted by Holland as a deadly threat and, consequently, as a casus belli."

TULSA GIRLS SEE CHICAGO SIGHTS

Marvel at "L," Steamboats, Cabarets, and Other Things in City.

ENJOY EVERY MINUTE.

Six Oklahoma girls had the time of their young lives in Chicago yesterday, "seeing things."

Here are some of the things they did:

Rode on an "elevated" train.

Boarded a lake steamer—the first time they had ever been on anything that floated.

Took tea at a cabaret and saw public dancing.

Went bathing in Lake Michigan.

See Chicago as "Summer Resort."

These things they did under the direction of the Chicago Association of Commerce, which as a compliment to the Tulsa Commercial club, undertook to show Chicago summer resort features to the visitors who are en route to Chautauqua, N. Y.

The day's greatest excitement for the girls, who are students at Kendall college, Tulsa, was divided between a ride on the "tracks that run up in the air" and an inspection of the steamer City of Grand Rapids, under the personal direction of William H. Morton, one of the owners of the Graham & Morton line.

Fire Drill Staged on Boat.

A fire drill was staged, lifeboats lowered, and a short trip made out to the new municipal pier. A motor trip through the parks was followed by a swim at Wilson beach.

The girls in the party included Misses Marguerite Henry, Pauline Layman, Alpha Bievens, Mildred Witcraft, Ada Wright, and their chaperon, Mrs. Harriet Henry. Mr. and Mrs. Spearman Lewis acted as escorts.

State Sends Out Subpœna Servers to Locate Her at Summer Camp Near Malone, N. Y.

New York, June 26.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, who is in a summer camp near Malone, N. Y., is to be an important witness for the state in the Harry K. Thaw sanity trial. Deputy Attorney General Frank Cook announced today. The state's attorney has detectives and subpœna servers searching for her.

Orient Suspects Japan of Seeking Pact with Germany Against England.

BY OSCAR KING DAVIS.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, China, May 20.—An exceptionally interesting line of speculation is running through the discussion of the Sino-Japanese situation, which forms the chief subject of conversation everywhere in this city just now.

The Japanese are pressing the Chinese for immediate action on the new treaty, in which the concessions yielded by China under duress of the Japanese ultimatum are to be formally embodied.

It is evident from the first preliminaries that Japan means to go considerably beyond the letter as well as the spirit of the terms exacted by threat of force from China.

This fact has already lent added interest to the speculation that is so rife in Peking as to the ultimate action of Great Britain regarding the doings of her ally while her own attention is so thoroughly occupied in Europe.

Japan on the Job.

It is perfectly clear that Japan realizes this is her day to make hay. The sun is shining for her just now, and there is no telling what it will be doing when the trouble in Europe is settled, and England is set free to look after interests to which she cannot attend at present.

It is also clear that Japan is determined to exact the last ounce that she can compel China to give, and will exert herself to the utmost and employ every form of terrorization that her ingenuity can devise to secure the desired result.

As to these statements there is so much proof, and so much has been made public already, that it is a waste of time and space to give more.

But while Japan's course regarding China is quite clear, it is not so clear what she is contemplating regarding her alliance with Great Britain, and regarding the possibility of forming a new alliance with Germany. Britishers in China are firmly convinced that Japan believes she has obtained all the benefit from the Anglo-Japanese alliance that she can possibly derive. They are satisfied that she is ready to terminate the alliance whenever it suits her pleasure.

Profit for Nippon.

It is easy to see how Japan might profit enormously by a sudden rupture of the alliance while England is involved in the European war—always provided Japan effected a new alliance with Germany and that Germany, possibly through this new alliance, came out victorious in Europe.

The persistence of the talk here regarding the possibility of such a remaking of alliances has been both interesting and curious. Every slightest scrap of information that can have any bearing at all upon such a possibility is most eagerly discussed.

For instance, every visit of the German minister here to the Japanese legation—and there have been several of them—is canvassed with the utmost interest within a very few hours after it takes place.

Home of Intrigue.

It should be remembered that Peking is the old ancestral home of intrigue. Everybody is involved in n more or less. Business men are as deep and crafty as diplomatists, and the air is surcharged with mystery all the time.

Under such circumstances everybody knows when the German minister goes to visit the Japanese minister, or vice versa, and as the two countries are still at war, it has occasioned some surprise in Peking to observe these signs of intimacy, especially as the two men are not old friends, the German having arrived in Peking since the outbreak of the European war.

Moreover, we have numerous intimations from outside sources that "something is doing" in this direction. Of course we know that no love is lost between the Germans and the Japanese. We remember the well expressed opinion of the German emperor about the Japanese and the "yellow peril."

But then we also know that just now Germany is desperate, and we have seen enough of Japanese diplomacy to be ready to believe it is guided solely by the principle of self-interest. Japan has just now shown herself to be a very apt pupil of the "scrap of paper" doctrine regarding the sanctity of treaties and international agreements.

London Gets Tips.

What Peking knows about such a matter London also surely knows. Downing street has efficient means of information. In fact, London probably knows a great deal better than Peking just how far the Japanese have gone in their flirtation with the Germans, and just what substance there is to the whole affair. It may easily be that such knowledge furnishes the clew to the British action—or nonaction—during the pendency of the recent Japanese negotiations with China.

So far as Peking is concerned we have had so many assurances, and from so many different quarters, that no foreign government extended any assistance or support to the Chinese that we must believe at least that nothing substantial was done along that line.

Russia, we are told, did a very little. And at the very last Great Britain may have expressed some surprise at Tokio over the extent to which Japan had gone without full consultation with her ally. But all that was not as much as two drops of rain to a man dying of thirst in a desert.

Needs Good Pretext.

The point is that, if Japan is in earnest with Germany—and if she is England knows it—she is in great need of a pretext for breaking her British alliance. It must be a good pretext, one that will enable her to claim substantial justification. She must have that to keep face with her own people and retain their wholehearted support. She has demonstrated in this Chinese business that she is quite indifferent to the opinion of the rest of the world.

Vigorous British interference with Japanese plans in China would furnish exactly that pretext. If Japan were convinced that with her assistance Germany could win decisively in Europe, so that after the war England would not be able to come out here all alone and compel her to disgorge the plunder she might easily take from such a partnership, what a stupendous prize she could take by such perfidy! The enormous British interests on the China coast would all fall to her, Hongkong, vast shipping and commercial business, and even Australia if she dared go so far. And Japan cherishes a very lively feeling of resentment and injured pride over Australian refusal to admit her people.

Nobody in Peking puts the perfidy of such a course beyond Japan. The only question is as to her conviction that she could retain the prize after once seizing it. There's the only rub.

Power of England.

What will England be able to do after the close of the war in Europe? Japan is entitled to figure that all Europe will be so exhausted and so sickened of war that no government will dare suggest war again for years.

But that may not apply to England. If she comes out with her navy not greatly impaired, it alone will be able to handle Japan for a long time to come. And both Japan and Great Britain know that. It would not be much of a job for Great Britain to come out here and put all the Japanese back in their islands and make them stay there indefinitely.

Pierce-Arrow
Announcement of Policy

THE Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company announces that no radical change in its present six-cylinder power plant will be made during the next eighteen months.

"Series Three" models will be continued without change during the balance of 1915, after which such minor refinements as experience may dictate will be incorporated in a new series of six-cylinder models.

Pierce-Arrow engineers are convinced that complete satisfaction to the owner, from the point of view of service and investment, is reached in the Pierce-Arrow six-cylinder motor. No further step is warranted by the present development of engineering thought, ingenuity and invention, and the policy of this company is averse to the introduction of novelties for the purpose of securing a more spectacular selling argument.

A Cheerful Day.

A cheerful or a dark day may come in the very start.

Do you have your breakfast in your regular dining room? Is it the most cheerful spot in your home in the early morning?

Is there not a place where the sun shines through the windows where a small table might be placed?

The family dining room is usually large enough for dinner parties, etc. It is likely to be too formal and a bit lonely for breakfast for one, two or three persons.

A suggestion like the one below is all that is necessary. The Revell Co. have the small tables, which, in the absence of space, might be folded and put away.

Try it.

BOTH SIDES LAY PLANS FOR BITTER CARPENTER WAR

Twelve Carloads of Horses Sent Out Into Country by Millmen.

Both sides in the building construction war laid plans yesterday for a long drawn out struggle. Employers asserted the shutdown decided upon by the allied building contractors and material interests in retaliation against the striking carpenters will be complete all over the city and suburbs within a week.

They asserted their determination to continue the lockout all summer if that be necessary to bring the carpenters to terms. Arbitration of all the differences with the Carpenter Contractors' association, they said, will be the only basis upon which peace terms will be considered.

May Call on World Union.

Officials of the carpenters' district council said the men are preparing for a finish fight. Before the war is much older the strikers probably will appeal to the officials of the international union for help to combat the lockout edict of the allied material men.

Such an appeal may bring the executive council of the American Federation of Labor into the struggle, with the possibility that President Samuel Gompers may be called to Chicago in an effort to disentangle the knotty situation.

The first signs of the effect of the shutdown order were seen during the day, when twelve carloads of horses were shipped over the Northwestern railroad to points near Delavan, Wis. The horses will be turned out to pasture pending a settlement of the building trades strikes. They are the property of team owners and material interests whose plants already have closed down.

Cleaning Up Business.

This throws several thousand teamsters out of work. Many mills and material plants will not reopen tomorrow in obedience to the shutdown edict. Other plants will close from day to day as the mill owners complete contracts already under way. All the pending work, however, will be finished within a few days and the shutdown will be airtight within a week, the employers said.

With the shutdown of all lumber yards, stone, lime, and cement works, brick yards, sash, door, and blind mills, and all other sources of building construction supplies complete more than 200,000 men will be idle. Deprived of material, the independent contractors who have signed individual agreements with the carpenters at 70 cents an hour will be unable to continue work and the 10,000 of the 16,000 carpenters back at work also will be forced into the ranks of the idle, it is said.

Hope to Force Carpenters.

By this means the employers hope to force the carpenters to submit their strike differences to arbitration. The carpenters said they would arbitrate only the question of wages.

The shutdown order is directed not only against the carpenters but against the sheet metal workers, painters, iron workers, lathers, and other trades on strike. The employers are determined to carry on the present warfare against what they term "intolerable abuses of unionism" and to force the acceptance by the unions of a uniform form of agreement for the entire building trades industry.

Mayor Thompson again was appealed to during the day to get into the building trades conflict with a view to bringing teh warring sides to accept arbitration. The appeal was made in resolutions adopted by the United Employers' Association of Wood Industries and the Lumbermen's association, at a meeting in the Lumbermen's exchange.

Resolutions Sent to Mayor.

Here are the resolutions sent to Mayor Thompson:

Resolved, By the United Employers' Association of Wood Industries of Chicago, that we hereby express our thanks and appreciation to the mayor and city council of Chicago for all their efforts to bring about industrial peace in this city, and particularly in the settlement of the street car difficulties, and also for their efforts to bring about arbitration in the present strike of the carpenter contractors and joiners' union; be it further

Resolved, That this association heartily favors a fair and impartial arbitration of the present difficulties between the carpenters and their employers, and expresses its confidence in Mayor William Hale Thompson successfully to conclude such an arbitration, in order to prevent general business stagnation and a general closing down of all building industries of this citiy, and the consequent suffering on the part of 200,000 or more employés; and hereby respectfully requests that his honor, the mayor, use his good offices to bring about a speedy arbitration.

John A. Metz, president of the Carpenters' District council, said the men do not fear the shutdown order.

"There is plenty of material to get outside of Chicago," he said. "But when it comes to a showdown you'll see the Chicago mill men scrambling over each other to sell their products for fear of losing their markets to outsiders.

"The men are standing solid in their determination to fight this thing out. If it comes to a real fight we will get support from every union man in the United States."

Carpenters Stand Pat.

The Carpenters' District council at a meeting at night took no action beyond agreeing to stand pat on the proposition to continue the strike. The overwhelming adverse vote on the question of giving President James Kirby full power to arbitrate was read to the delegates. There was no demonstration because the result was pretty well known in advance.

"There is nothing for us to do," said Secretary Galvin. "The employers have declared for a general shutdown. Let them go ahead and see how far they will get with it.

"So far as the bankers are concerned, the carpenters have as much money in the banks as some of the contractors. Three-quarters of our membership are buying their own homes and doing their best to pay for them. Sneers from the financial interests don't affect us."

Edward Hines of the Edward Hines Lumber company pronounced untenable a story to the effect that the Chicago lumbermen plan restrictions on the importations of building material from Pacific coast and other outside points.

"Such a proceeding would be impracticable as well as illegal," said Mr. Hines. "Dressing of lumber at the mills effects an immense saving in freight charges which otherwise the consumer would be forced to pay. On oak flooring, for example, the difference in freight would amount to $50 a car.

"It is preferable from the public's point of view that the market be left absolutely open to the operation of the natural economic laws which govern trade.

"Of course, I know that the carpenters do not go so far as to ask that an embargo clause be inserted in the agreement. They simply want nothing said about it.

"What would be the result of leaving this vital question open to varying interpretations? Simply this: Any business agent who chose could declare a strike on a building at his own sweet will on the ground that the material was not manufactured locally."

SOMETHING NEW AT RAVINIA? YES, EACH ONE DANCES

North Side Resort Maintains Reputation for Modernity at Its Reopening.

BY RONALD WEBSTER.

Modernity—within limits, of course—has always found its way into the gates of Ravinia park. Here, for instance, residents of the north shore have witnessed hopefully a modern campaign against mosquitoes conducted after the manner of Col. Gorgas at Panama. The better mannered of the modern dances found their way last season to the concert stage in the pavilion, and this summer, tutored by the exhibitions of the agile ladies and gentlemen of last year, the audiences are to retire during intermissions for practice themselves.

Oil of Citronella and Joss Sticks.

In another respect, too, Ravinia is grown modern. Last winter the east was set agog by the association of colored lights with music, and looked forward to a work by Scriabine, the Russian, in which scent would also collaborate. Ravinia has, perhaps unwittingly, associated the two. For on entering the park one's nostrils are tickled alternately with the odors of oil of citronella and of joss sticks.

With the exceptions above noted, of which the out of door dancing pavilion is the most important, Ravinia remains much the same as of old.

There is the Chicago Symphony orchestra, with Mr. Stock conducting—enough in itself for any one who is not greedy for grosser amusements. He began his program with Dvorak's "Carneval" overture, thrilling and loud enough to crown out the advance of tardy listeners. Godard's "Adagio Pathetique," a standby, sweet and serious, and three numbers in which Bruno Steindel, the cellist, was the soloist, cleared the way for Joan Sawyer, "the high priestess of the modern dance."

Sawyer Is Ardently Received.

Nothing of religious significance or emotional exaltation crept into her performance, and I am sure that her former title, "the queen of the modern dance," is more fitting. I thought also that her "aeroplane waltz" was misnamed. It should have been dangerous, thrilling. Instead it seemed to be a kind of conventionalized courtship, pretty and graceful. Two of her new dances, a "Congo Trot" and a "Zurmaxka" (the word, it will be noticed, is made up of mazurka and maxixe), were interesting, complicated things which would defy imitation. She was ardently received by a large crowd.

In the pavilion during the intermission every one who could dance, danced. The place is circular, surrounded by two tiers of tables, and is decorated in black and white.

HENRY K. URION TAKES BRIDE

Young Chicagoan Weds Miss Katharine Paul of Boston at Fitzwilliam, N. H.

Henry K. Urion, oldest son of Alfred R. Urion, attorney for Armour & Co., was married yesterday to Miss Katharine Paul in Fitzwilliam, N. H. Miss Paul is a daughter of Isaac Paul of Boston. The wedding was an outdoor one at the country home of the Pauls.

Alfred R. Urion Jr. was best man and John Field of Chicago was an usher. Members of Mr. Urion's class at Dartmouth, who had been attending a reunion at the college, were at the wedding.

Mr. Urion graduated last week from Armour law school. He will bring his bride to Chicago, where he expects to practice law. They will spend their honeymoon in the White mountains.

SOCIETY RAFFLES BLAMED FOR DINNER-DANCE THEFT.

Miss Elizabeth Goodrich's $500 Pin Stolen at Function Attended by 60 Guests—Police Seek Thief.

An unsuccessful search of the pawnshops for a circular pin valued at $500 has been made by the police during the last two weeks. Detectives hardly hoped to find it in a pawnshop for it is believed it was stolen by a "society raffles."

The pin belonged to Miss Elizabeth Goodrich of 920 Lincoln Parkway. Miss Goodrich is the daughter of A. W. Goodrich, president of the Goodrich line of steamers. The pin was a present to her from her parents. It contains twelve diamonds and twelve pearls set alternately in a circle.

On June 9 Mrs. Goodrich gave a dinner dance. About sixty guests were present. Miss Goodrich wore the pin. When the guests had departed the pin was missed. The loss was reported to the police, who were asked to keep the theft secret. Mrs. Goodrich and her daughter are now at their summer home at Harbor Point, Harbor Springs, Mich. The Lincoln parkway residence is in charge of a housekeeper.

"I wasn't here when the pin was lost, so I don't know much about it," said the housekeeper.

"There was a reception on the day it disappeared, wasn't there?" she was asked.

"No, it wasn't a reception. It was a dinner dance—a late afternoon affair. I suppose there were more than sixty guests present. Miss Goodrich missed the pin that evening or the next day. It was a beautiful pin and she treasured it as a keepsake."

CHILD KILLED IN STREET.

Boy of 3 Tries to Recover Apple He Drops and Is Run Down by Wagon.

Joseph Maddy, 3 years old, 1303 West Huron street, dropped an apple while playing on the street in front of his home yesterday. It rolled into the gutter and in attempting to recover it the boy ran in front of a wagon owned and driven by John Zozalke, a real estate agent, and was killed instantly.

Drink or Drug Users Are Sick Persons

Hon. J. E. Bruce, the former Iowa Senator and Banker, who is now devoting his entire time to the "Neal Way" for drink or drug users, says:

"The false and pernicious claim that continued excessive indulgence is caused by 'only a vicious habit' has been the CAUSE of more misery, disgrace, suffering and deaths than all the wars of the world."

Modern medical science has demonstrated that the cause of continued indulgence is the diseased condition resulting from the poison of alcoholic liquors or narcotic drugs "stored-up" in the system.

The Neal Three-Day Treatment acts as an "ANTIDOTE" for drink or drug poison and "drives it out" of the system, thereby removing the CAUSE of continued indulgence. It quickly overcomes the diseased condition, creates a loathing for liquor or drugs and soon restores the sick and diseased person to that healthy and normal condition they enjoyed prior to their first excessive indulgence.

The secret of the great world-wide success of the "Neal Way" is that it DOES MORE for drink and drug users in a FEW DAYS than can be done by the "old way" in SEVERAL WEEKS. It effects a PERMANENT cure quicker, easier and at less expense than the TEMPORARY relief of mineral springs and baths and PREVENTS high class men from becoming "wrecks" and RESCUES those considered "almost beyond all earthly help."

ARCHIBALD'S
STONY ISLAND MANOR

Located at 87th Street and Stony Island Avenue—a Double Section Transfer Corner Six Miles Within South
City Limits—Direct Rapid Transportation to the Loop

This Great Subdivision Is Within a Few Minutes' Ride of Jackson Park, With Its Golf Links and Tennis Courts. The New $600,000 Bathing Beach at 79th and the Lake, Manhattan Beach at 75th and the Lake, and the South Shore Country Club Are Easily Accessible to the Residents of Stony Island Manor.

Nowhere in the whole city of Chicago has there been such a rapid and substantial growth of values during the last six months as in that part which lies along Stony Island Avenue south of Jackson Park.

We are, therefore, confident that we are offering the choicest, most fruitful and well-seasoned investment on the market today. The fact that we are offeringthis property CHEAPER THAN ACREAGE has been purchased in the same district within the last few weeks is proof positive that STONY ISLAND MANOR IS AN INVESTMENT THAT WILL YIELD TO THOSE WHO PURCHASE BEFORE WE RAISE THE PRICES A HANDSOME PROFIT IN A VERY SHORT TIME.

A New Business Center—87th Street and Stony Island Avenue

STONY ISLAND MANOR is situated at the intersection of two full section line streets, both of which have street car lines RUNNING NOW. This means that this property will be another NEW BUSINESS CENTER. Do you realize what this means to the INVESTOR? It means that here we have the assurance of another such development as took place at 63d and Halsted Streets, at 79th and Halsted Streets, at 63d Street and Cottage Grove, and at other outlying transfer corners.

Transfer corners and the property in the first block from the transfer corner are worth three to six times as much as property two and three blocks away. This is true in every outlying section in Chicago, and particularly is it true on the South Side. We are NOW offering lots within a block from this coming great transfer corner at ONLY 3% of WHAT LOTS LOCATED A SIMILAR DISTANCE FROM 63d and Halsted Streets ARE WORTH TODAY. The same elements of value are present in our property that 63d and Halsted possessed a few years ago—only it will take a shorter time for development, because of the more rapid growth of Chicago at this time and in the future.

"Now I HEAR Clearly"

No matter how deaf you are, unless born deaf or stone deaf, the famous "Acousticon"—the world's only universally successful hearing device for the deaf—will positively enable you to HEAR EVERY SOUND, LOW OR LOUD, NEAR OR DISTANT, INDOORS OR OUTDOORS, UNDER VARIED CONDITIONS.

By a remarkable patented feature the "Acousticon" transmits to the deaf ear every sound not only clearly but naturally—not a single word is blurred.

Covers all degrees of deafness

This is the most remarkable result ever achieved—it actually and positively covers all degrees of deafness. We have fitted over 100,000 deaf persons with the famous "Acousticon." In all our vast experience we have unquestionably met with every known kind of deafness.

It makes absolutely no difference what caused your deafness, how severe it is, or of how long standing, the "Acousticon" will enable you to hear more clearly than any other hearing device in the world.

The Original—The World's Most Scientific Invention—The Famous

"Acousticon"

Over 100,000 in Use—3 Times More Than All Others Combined

There is absolutely no other hearing instrument constructed like the "Acousticon"—all its features are patented. Several are made to look like the "Acousticon" but all other electrical hearing devices are simple, unguaranteed microphones.

NO DEPOSIT
10 Days' Trial

If you do not live here and cannot visit our office, we let you take and use the "Acousticon" without a deposit for ten days to prove absolutely that you must use the "Acousticon" if you want perfect hearing under all conditions.

The "Acousticon" is the hearing device for the deaf that gives you an absolutely legal guarantee which protects you against loss. Ask us about this special feature.

Deafness grows worse yearly, if neglected, until eventually you become stone deaf, and when deafness is beyond Medical or Surgical treatment the "Acousticon" will be a powerful help. The delicate exercise given by the "Acousticon" to the hardened, inactive muscles and tissues of the deaf ear gives these deadened parts elasticity and vitality, which stays the progress of the disease. Don't pay any attention to any hearing device which promises to cure deafness, because deafness cannot be cured, except in its very earliest stages.

EASY TERMS

We make it easy for anybody to own a famous "Acousticon." Now nobody need be deprived of the wonderful joy and advantage of hearing every sound clearly.

Call or Write

If you live here, call at our office for free demonstration—if you live out of town, write for free copy of our great book and special free trial offer.

Don't think because you have been disappointed in all the other hearing devices that the "Acousticon" is like them. Don't judge it until you have made the free test we offer you.

LAYMEN BRING MEETING HERE

Decide to Hold First Convention of Series in Chicago in October.

ASK FOR NO DONATIONS.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Chicago will hold the first convention of a series of 100 to be held in leading cities of the United States for the purpose of promoting a new missionary campaign. Oct. 14 to 17 is the date decided on, according to word received yesterday from the laymen's missionery headquarters at New York.

New Orleans, La.; Butte, Mont.; San Francisco, Cal., and Boston, Mass., are the extreme points in which conventions will be held, indicating the thorough way in which the country will be covered. Decatur will be another Illinois city in which a convention will be held. It is a representative of the smaller sized cities which will be included in the tour.

Protestants Join in Movement.

The series will culminate in a missionary congress April 26 to 30 at Washington, D. C. All leading Protestant denominations are coöperating in the campaign.

The plan includes devoting two months to special missionary education of the laymen of each city under the direction of the executive secretary of the laymen's missionary movement. The convention will be held midway in the educational campaign, so that there will be preparation for the convention and a continuance of its spirit.

No Money to Be Asked.

One characteristic of the conventions will be the absence of all appeals for money for missionary purposes.

There will be three teams of speakers, so that more than one convention can be held on the same date. Some of the best speakers among the missionaries will be recalled from their work to devote their time to the conventions.

ABORTION "ADS" SMALL CITY EVIL

Tribune's Crusade Against Murder "Pills" Extends Out Into State.

WOMEN MADE INVALIDS

Stirred by THE TRIBUNE's crusade against "abortion parlors," citizens of other towns in Illinois are taking up the fight to protect the women and girls in their own localities. As a rule, the small town houses few "parlors," but it is subject to other evils almost as grave. These are the advertisements of concerns which manufacture "pills for women." These ads are invitations to the "parlors," or to sanitariums where wrecked constitutions are patched together.

The turn of sentiment against this type of advertising is evidenced by a letter received yesterday from Dr. Harold M. Camp of Monmouth, Ill. Dr. Camp incloses a copy of a Monmouth newspaper which carries an ad urging the "ladies" to ask their druggists for a certain brand of pills.

Refuses to Cancel "Ads."

"I have repeatedly gone to the publisher and asked him to cancel the advertising contract," says Dr. Camp, "but he insists there is nothing harmful in it and will not do it. Likewise they have the advertisements of various advertising 'quacks,' who come here once a month, several of them being men who were exposed by THE TRIBUNE in its crusade a year or two ago. The laws of our state specifically prohibit advertisements of anything to produce abortions, and we have national laws for the same purpose. Still there are thousands of boxes of these preparations sold.

Thousands Made Invalids.

"Every drug store sells dozens of proprietary preparations recommended to relieve 'delayed menstruation,' or 'suppression,' and any woman who sees them or hears of them is willing to try them. Any physician knows the harmful effects of these preparations, even though they do not produce abortion.

"Thousands of women have been made invalids on account of them. I believe a crusade against preparations of this sort and an article on this subject published in your paper will bring light to country editors who are striving to make their papers more like yours. They then will not renew advertising contracts with firms that could not pass a rigid censorship of public approval."

The newspaper which Dr. Camp incloses also contains the information through the paid advertising columns that "Prof. Leonard, Clairvoyant," is doing business at the old stand at the "special low fee of 50 cents." For this figure the "professor" agrees to take you into his "quiet parlors" and "confidentially" tell you anything you wish to know about your past, present, or future.

Held as Tire Thief.

Robert Thomas, colored, living at 2906 South State street, yesterday was bound over to the grand jury under bonds of $3,000 on a petty larceny charge. He was captured early Wednesday morning by a special policeman, T. H. Naughton, who saw him leaving a garage on Fiftieth street carrying automobile tires, which it is alleged he stole.

This year the Studebaker announcement is more significant than ever before. It demonstrates more conclusively than ever Studebaker's leadership in the industry. For once again, Studebaker is announcing new cars at prices that completely recast all standards of value in the automobile industry. And never before has a dollar bought so much as it buys in these new Studebakers. They are the best cars in every detail that Studebaker ever built.

But while the prices are remarkably low, Studebaker has made no effort to manufacture a small, low-price car, to compete purely on a price basis.

THE PRICES ARE LOW SOLELY:

1—Because of largely increased volume of production:
2—Unrivaled manufacturing resources:
3—The Studebaker policy of manufacturing our cars complete in our own factories and thus eliminating parts-makers' profits:
4—The greatly increased efficiency resulting from 4 years study and concentration on the manufacture of two chassis:
5—The high percentage of interchangeability of parts in the two chassis.

And Studebaker is merely passing along to buyers of the new cars the FULL benefits of these notable economies. You may question in your own mind the quality of these cars, considering the remarkable reductions in price when compared with our last year's models.

But we simply invite you to make any comparisons you like with last year's cars or with this year's models of other makers to see what resources and manufacturing experience such as Studebaker has at its command can accomplish.

A whole Book of Specifications couldn't begin to convey the impression that your first glimpse of the cars will give—you must see the cars to appreciate them.

This new book unfolds many prophecies relating to modern Christianity. It clearly shows from Bible proof how, when and why the power of healing as taught and practiced by Jesus was lost for centuries. It also clearly shows from Bible proof how, when and why this divine healing power was restored to the world through Christian Science.
The evidence is so fairly and convincingly presented that readers who believe the Bible cannot doubt its truth.
Any buyer of this remarkable book can return it postpaid if not pleased, and $1.50 will be refunded.

ACCIDENTS STIR SOCIETY CROWD AT HORSE SHOW

MISS CONOVER IS THROWN.

With two exciting accidents to its credit, a final day of glorious sunshine, and 800 reservations for the dinner-dance that ended the festivities, the South Shore Country club horse went into history with a blue ribbon pasted on every page.

At 4 o'clock, with the circle of boxes well filled and enthusiastically attentive, Miss Loula Long of Kansas City, driving Illustration past the northeast turn of the tanbark, struck the inside curbing of the ring with her left wheel and overturned.

There was a gasp and a sudden rise in all the boxes, for the horse was thrown and rolling in the harness; Miss Long, after two complete rolls in the tan bark, was still holding the reins, and the gig was tottering wildly on a flat wheel. Miss Long brought Illustration to his feet and kept his head turned toward the ring's center, until she could struggle to her feet and climb into the gig after it had been righted by a groom.

Miss Helen Conover Thrown.

Earlier in the day Miss Helen Conover, daughter of Mrs. Luther Conover, who has been active on the various committees for the show, was thrown from her horse Duke, who saw a steam roller seemingly for the first time.

Miss Conover was uninjured.

Another accident happened Friday night to the members of Edward Morris Jr.'s jaunting car party. The axle of the car broke and spilled the four occupants onto the roadway, but with no serious results.

In Mrs. Everett C. Brown's box—87—which was just opposite the judges' bench, were Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Leicht, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Faker, and Mrs. William Hale Thompson, with a vacant chair saved for the mayor, who was presumably en route from the Speedway to the horse show. Mrs. Thompson wore a white hat, a soft rose coat, and a gown of blue chiffon. Mrs. Leicht was in white corduroy with black pipings and a wide white hat.

"From the viewpoint of both class and receipts it was the greatest horse show the South Shore Country club ever had," exclaimed President Everett C. Brown. "It was the biggest ever held in Chicago. There was a better showing than at most eastern shows."

Two British army officers, who attended the show, asserted it ranked with any they had seen at Madison Square garden.

SURFACE CARS TO BE SPEEDIER

"Skip Stop" Plan to Be Tried Out on Broadway and Clark Lines.

City officials and the traction companies have agreed on a "skip stop" scheme, which will be tried on the Broadway and Clark surface lines. If the plan is successful it eventually will be extended to all through cars.

Out of a possible 118 stops on the Broadway line it is the intention to eliminate about fifty. The schedule time for the run is fifty-five minutes, and it is estimated this can be cut down to forty or forty-five minutes by the skip stop system. The scheme will be put into effect on Broadway between Diversey and Devon avenue and on Clark street between Illinois and Howard streets.

Plan Gets Indorsement.

The proposal to install express service on the surface lines was made some time ago, but it is only recently that the city has made a study of its possibilities. The plan for a tryout has received the indorsement of President Leonard A. Busby of the Chicago Surface lines, Chairman Bion J. Arnold of the board of supervising engineers, and Ald. Henry D. Capitain, chairman of the council transportation committee.

The details have been worked out by R. F. Kelker, city traction supervisor. The Broadway and Clark street routes have been investigated, and stops are to be eliminated wherever several short blocks come together. The skip stop plan has long been in successful operation in Kansas City.

Will Mark Each Corner.

"Some of the patrons of these lines will have to walk a block or two farther to get a car, or to go home," said Mr. Kelker, "but the saving in time for the majority of the passengers will more than counterbalance the inconvenience for the few. Each corner where the cars stop will be plainly marked by a black and white sign. Detroit and other cities have worked out the plan successfully. It will mean a big improvement in service."

Within a few days a trial trip will be made for the benefit of north side aldermen. A special car will be run over the Broadway and Clark street lines to illustrate the "skip stop" system.

POLICE EYE CADDY STRIKE, BUT ONE MAN SETTLES IT.

Shouts for 20 Cents an Hour Rouse Sleeping Onwentsia Club Members.

A riot call to the Lake Forest police was turned in yesterday morning by Henry Rhoade, assistant manager of the Onwentsia club, to quell a caddy strike. Members of the club who slept in the building were awakened early by cries of "Twenty cents or no caddies." Looking out, they saw an army of nearly a hundred caddies shouting and waving golf sticks. They demanded:

1. An increase in wages from 17½ cents to 20 cents an hour.
2. Privilege of playing golf every day excepting Sundays and holidays, instead of three days in the week, which is the rule in force.
3. Recognition of the "Order of Caddies."
4. Prohibition of rain which kills the caddy business, or else a rainy day tip.

While Mr. Rhoade and the officer were arbitrating a big automobile drove up and said:

"You rascals get to work at once or I'll have every one of you fired, and we will caddy ourselves. When the other clubs raise the caddy fee Onwentsia will, too. Now, what are you going to do, come!"

HURT IN DEATH TRAP WRECK

Mrs. Clifford Williams Caught in Auto Collision at Dangerous Viaduct.

"Death trap," a name given by residents of Glencoe to the viaduct under the Chicago and Milwaukee Electric railroad at Hazel avenue and Green Bay road, yesterday added another victim to its list when Mrs. Clifford Williams was severely injured in an automobile smashup.

EAT WITH DOGS AT JUNGLE FETE

Guests of Douglas Cranes at La Salle Get Mice, Chameleons, Turtle Favors.

A wriggling baby alligator, a crawling turtle the size of a quarter, a gaudy chameleon, or a white mouse—any one of these boons was open to the choice of each of seventeen human guests of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Crane when it came time for the distribution of favors at an "animal dinner" given by the Cranes last night at the Hotel La Salle.

"Michael," an Irish terrier, said to be the best trained stage dog in the world, was the guest of honor, eating with the human guests. Guests of lesser degree than Michael, but still important, were Toto and Popo, live monkeys, who cavorted in the center of the table, vying with Dodo, a pet toucan with a green bill and a black body, who also occupied a place of conspicuous favor.

Dinner in "Jungle."

The investiture of the dinner was that of the jungle. Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Williams of Highland Park furnished flowers and real decorations from the woods to get the proper "jungle" effect. They also furnished the pigeons for a live pigeon pie, three of the pigeons being homers who sped away from the roof garden after freedom from the crust, and presumably directed their flight to the home roost north of the city.

The live crabs were another feature of the dinner. The menu throughout conformed to the animal scheme.

Here Is Menu.

This is the menu:

Canape a la Michael (in honor of dog Michael, guest of honor).
Celery, olives, almonds.
Sweetbreads and guinea hen.
Virginia ham in chafing dish.
Cold asparagus vinagrette.
Ice cream surprise.
Live crabs.
A pigeon pie (three live homing pigeons)
Mrs. Crane's menagerie.
Petit fours.
Demitasse.

The guests were: "Michael," Irish terrier, guest of honor; Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Williams of Highland Park, Hiram Foster, Mrs. C. Sheldon, W. W. Faulkner, Miss Auriel Frost, daughter of A. C. Frost; Mr. and Mrs. Perle Smith of Lake Forest, Peggy O'Neil, Hassard Short, Miss Marie Louise Russell, Joseph Kelliher, Joseph Blackburn, Theodore Amberg, Miss Lillian Cooper.

Every guest was to have come to the dinner with an animal, but so many guests intended bringing dogs that Mrs. Crane changed the plan.

SPEEDING OFFICER TRAPS NEW AUTO OWNER AT CLUB.

Fred C. Aldrich, president of the Onwentsia club, is the owner of a new automobile. Yesterday he took a trial spin out to the Onwentsia club with a party of friends.

"My, she has speed!" said one of the occupants in the car.

"Yes, too much speed," panted Motorcycle Policeman Spradling of the Lake Forest force, who had followed the automobile clear into the club's grounds. "What is your name, sir?" continued the policeman.

"None of your business!" stormed Mr. Aldrich.

"But I am an officer," said Spradling.

Mr. Aldrich will be arrested tomorrow on a state warrant, according to the Lake Forest police.

WOMAN TRAPS IMMUNE JOHNNY

Was Taking "Sucker" from Depot to See "German Submarine."

For twenty years, according to the records of the bureau of identification, "Johnny" Roach has been a police offender. During that time he has been arrested in Chicago ten times for various offenses, but he always escaped punishment. "Not guilty," "discharged," or "nolle prossed" are written in the records opposite Roach's name. Among the fraternal order of dips and "con" men Roach is known as "Johnny, the Immune."

JOHN ROACH

In thieves' parlance, Roach "tumbled" yesterday. And it was a woman who achieved what was thought to be the impossible. Roach was arrested in the La Salle street station by Policewoman Florence Van Ambe while he was "steering a sucker" away from the depot. Roach was taking the stranger to the lake front to show him a German submarine that had just arrived in Chicago.

Overhears His "Come On."

"I just came from there," the policewoman overheard Roach say to the man, who was an Iowa farmer. "It is the greatest boat I ever saw. Goes down to the bottom of the lake and up again like a duck."

The policewoman waited to hear no more. Grabbing Roach by the coat collar, she told him he was under arrest. One of her hands gripped the handle of a revolver in the pocket of her skirt.

Roach attempted to shake his captor off, but she clung to him with a grip of steel.

Telephones for Wagon.

Turning the prisoner over to the depot policeman, Mrs. Van Amber telephoned the South Clark street station for a wagon. She handcuffed herself to Roach and took him to the bureau of identification. When Capt. Michael Evans laid eyes on the man he recognized him as Roach.

"Hello, Johnny," was the captain's greeting. "It has been some time since you were in before. How is the 'con' business?"

Capt. Evans went to the records and found that Roach was first arrested in Chicago twenty years ago. He has been arrested several times for confidence games, but always was discharged.

Mrs. Van Amber took the prisoner into court, then in session at the station, and after hearing the policewoman's testimony Judge Caverly fined Roach $200 and costs. He was sent to the bridewell after being shown to the sleuths at the detective bureau.

MR. SPEED BUG, THIS IS FOR YOU

Law Abiding Auto Owners Association Will Get You if You Don't Look Out.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON.

I'm president of something. When I was a kid Miss Betty said I'd be president, and I am. I'm president of the Law Abiding Automobile Owners' association.

The Law Abiding Automobile Owners' association has two purposes:

First—Obey all laws governing the operation of automobiles.

Second—Self-defense against automobilists who refuse to obey the laws.

We are not a reform body; we are organized for self-protection alone, for self-defense, and for the right to ride in an automobile without risking our lives.

We now have nine members and we are confident that with the growing desire to obey the laws we can recruit our membership to twenty-five out of the 28,000 auto owners in Chicago.

Officers—Including the President.

Our officers are:

President—HUGH S. FULLERTON.
Vice president—Dr. A. J. Buchheit.
Secretary-treasurer—George N. Middendorf.
Recording secretary—Dr. Seymour Woodworth.
Attorney—Howard C. Rumery of Evanston.

This organization has been completed and it will file incorporation papers at Springfield. After that it will insist upon the right to obey the laws of the city and the state and attempt to compel other owners of automobiles to do the same whenever through their refusal to obey laws they endanger the life or property of any member of the law abiding association.

98 Per Cent Violate Law.

We have now been receiving reports from members for about ten days. They indicate that about 85 per cent of the drivers of automobiles violate the laws at practically all times, that protection by the police or the park authorities practically is nil, that 98 per cent of all persons who drive automobiles violate a law at least once in every mile they drive, that the speed limit is a joke, and that those who refuse to disobey laws are looked upon as "road lice" and obstructors of traffic.

On two occasions I have traveled from Wilson avenue to the turn of Sheridan road holding my car at the exact legal limit of eighteen miles an hour and been passed by almost every vehicle on the boulevard.

Driven Off Road.

On two occasions I have been driven off the road by speeders, crowded against the curbing, and cursed for refusing to go faster. On another occasion a member of the association, trying to turn from the boulevard and giving the signal as prescribed, was driven onto the parkway by a machine traveling forty-five miles an hour and ignoring all signals.

It is our object to defend ourselves against persons who drive in that manner, and Attorney Rumery will be furnished with the evidence in each case.

1,000,000 CITY POSTERS SOLD

William Wrigley Says He Wants 2,000,000 Stickers to Advertise Chicago.

The posterettes are going like hot cakes. One million of the fancy little stickers comprised the first day's orders yesterday in THE TRIBUNE'S "Chicago, the Summer Resort," campaign. In addition to this number two heads of firms announced they want 3,000,000 more. One of them, William Wrigley Jr., the chewing gum manufacturer, wants 2,000,000 of the stamps.

Chicago, unanimous for the posterette, seems to be started on its way toward sending out a total of 100,000,000 of the stickers instead of 10,000,000 as was originally estimated. The question of supply was a formidable one at first, but has been solved.

Phone Rings All Day.

Some of the orders were sent to THE TRIBUNE direct, but most of them were telephoned to Wabash 265. The bell of that telephone was ringing almost constantly from 8 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the evening, despite the fact that it was a half holiday.

Among the heaviest orders received were those placed by the State street stores. These orders came from Marshall Field & Co., Mandel Bros., Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., and Siegel, Cooper & Co. In addition orders were received from the Kaiserhoff hotel, the Kabo Corset company, the Onyx Hosiery company, Trumbull Electric Manufacturing company, Carruthers & Co., Jackson & Semmerlmeyer, A. Kroch & Co., Evans Manufacturing company, and I. W. Durfee.

Mr. Carruthers' Opinion.

A special delivery letter brought the order from Carruthers & Co., signed by A. S. Carruthers.

"This order is being hurried along to insure against any delay through inability to fill orders due to the demand which is sure to be made," wrote Mr. Carruthers. "There is certainly no business which could have greater use for them than real estate."

When the deluge of orders began the problem of supply facilities at once protruded. A visit to the Coliseum resulted in the requisitioning of three automatic presses to be at the disposal of the posterette printers as soon as the exposition of graphic arts should close.

50,000 Sets a Day.

The presses, which have a capacity of 50,000 complete sets of twelve posterettes each every twenty-four hours, will be set up at 123 North Wabash avenue. At midnight a force began moving and setting up the presses. They will be in operation Monday morning. Three eight hour shifts will keep them going continuously until the 3,000,000 are run off.

Chicagoans are invited to the pressroom to view the work of printing these little boosters of Chicago, which will be run off in six colors.

FALLS OFF LAUNCH; DROWNS

Fatal Ending to Lake Trip by Two Men in a Gasoline Craft.

William J. Rockstahler, 1926 South Racine avenue, was drowned in the lake two miles off North avenue late yesterday afternoon. When he fell from a gasoline launch owned by W. W. Nugent, 1258 Ardmore avenue, the latter seized a life preserver, but before he could throw it to Rockstahler the man had disappeared. Nugent steered the boat to shore and called the Hudson avenue police.

Chicago Hoosiers Once Again Visit Banks of Wabash

Indiana Society Holds Its Annual Picnic on Tippecanoe Field.

ORATORY AND EATING

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Battle Ground, Ind., June 26.—[Special.]—The Indiana society of Chicago was met by the Silver Cornet band, ate an Indiana fried chicken dinner, heard Indiana political speeches by vice presidents, and would have dropped down to the station to watch No. 306 go through but for the fact that its members were too busy watching a band of more or less wild Indians fighting the battle of Tippecanoe all over again.

It was a grand picnic from the moment the 300 Chicagoans boarded the Monon train until that train started back from Lafayette. It was a typical tired out picnic crowd, only too eager to get back home, even though home be in Illinois.

Augmented by hundreds of native sons and daughters who came up from all sections of the state for the event, the crowd numbered close to 1,000 by the time the speechmaking began.

Marshall Begins the Oratory.

There was no Wabash river breeze to reduce the effects of an Indiana sun when President Edward Rector of the society stood on the shady side of the monument commemorating the battle of Tippecanoe. He introduced Vice President Marshall, who praised the home folks and paid doubtful compliments to his friends the Republicans.

But the Republicans squared things when former Vice President Fairbanks and Uncle Joe Cannon praised the Hoosier and showered equally doubtful compliments on their friends the Democrats.

Mayor Thompson was unable to attend, but sent Lincoln Pfaff in his place. George Ade was in the crowd which beat the Chicagoans to the picnic grounds. Everybody, even the vice president, wanted to shake George's hand. John T. McCutcheon was a rival in popularity.

Hoosiers Parade Through Train.

Coming down on the train the Chicago Hoosiers amused themselves by parading through the coaches and attempted to play games. Donald De Freese, Ernest Quantrell, Hoyt King, and Charles McGuire donned blue hats bearing the legend "Noise Boys," and peddled papers vociferously. Particular interest attached to the result of the contest for a model Studebaker wagon to be awarded to the father bringing the "largest number of children of his own get." The result of the contest was not announced because the children would not stay together long enough for a fair and impartial count.

George Ade was awarded the live pig in the drawings for prizes after three others had declined it. Uncle Joe Cannon won a pair of checked pants after proving to the judges that he was the best horse shoe tosser over 70 years old in the state of Indiana. The second prize, a pair of spats, went to Mr. Fairbanks. J. M. Studebaker took a green necktie as third prize.

McCutcheon Hero of Poem.

Mrs Le Roy Goddard won the prize for the best poem on "The Discovery of the Wabash." It ran:

'Twas in the eighties near Perdue,
McCutcheon roamed the campus through,
His head bowed down with priceless thought
Which later on "The Tribune" bought.

His footstep slipped on Hoosier mud
And plunged him headlong in that flood
Beneath whose waves the nation's hope
Submerged save only periscope.

Thus was the Wabash river found
By genius great on slipping ground,
And he who skidded on its banks,
Deserves the world's undying thanks.

Because that river's peaceful flow
Is through a land where all men know
The nation's wit and wisdom seem
To thrive beside that beauteous stream.

The moon was just coming up over the Wabash when the train, carrying a tired crowd, slipped out of Lafayette while the silver cornet band spotted the air with "The Banks of the Wabash."

Chase Alleged Pickpockets.

The picnic was thrown into a flurry of excitement late in the afternoon when three supposed pickpockets, who said they came up from Chicago to attend the festivities, were captured after a chase of two miles. Two others of the gang are believed to have escaped. Chief Powell of the Lafayette police force had three men on the Tippecanoe battleground, where the picnic was held.

Just as the last of the crowd was boarding the trolley to Lafayette, Michael Duffy, a farmer living near Oxford, cried "I'm robbed." The police, joined by townsmen, at once gave chase as five men started running. The three men captured had in their possession $80. They denied the charges of the police.

HAWKEYE CLUB PICNICS: 2,500 AT JACKSON PARK.

Oratory and Athletics Feature Annual Gathering of Iowans on the South Side.

The Hawkeye club—Iowa's contribution in part to Chicago's population—held its annual picnic yesterday in Jackson park. A speaking program and a schedule of athletic contests with numerous prizes for the winners, and picnic lunches for midday and evening meals were the entertainments of the day. About 2,500 men, women, and children attended.

The assemblage was divided into county delegations, each erecting a standard bearing the name of an Iowa county.

M. F. Healy of Fort Dodge, the "silver tongued orator of Iowa"; P. Emory Lyon, superintendent of the Howard Movement association, an Iowa organization, and Attorney Quin O'Brien of Chicago were the speakers.

Guy Guernsey is president of the club. J. G. Schaefer was chairman of the picnic committee.

BANK PAYS OFF ALL DEPOSITORS; QUITS BUSINESS

State Italian Institution Stacks Money from Loop Backers in Windows for Rush.

HARD HIT BY THE WAR.

Chicago, accustomed to the occasional exploding of one or another of its irresponsible and unregulated private banks, had a new experience in the banking line yesterday.

The State Bank of Italy, hard hit by the war and at the end of its rope, began to liquidate—and immediately invited all depositors in to be paid off dollar for dollar. Promises of dollar for dollar payment are familiar features of the sort of bank suspensions Chicago knows best, but behind the Italian bank's promise are realities—the assets of six of the biggest downtown institutions.

News Causes Panic.

Despite the great resources which have been thrown back of the State Bank of Italy and its frank admission it has been losing money, news of its impending disintegration caused a panic in the Italian colonies of the city.

Before the bank, which is at 925 South Halsted street, had opened for the day a great crowd of depositors, their relatives, their friends, and equally excited onlookers had gathered outside its doors. Even the sight of the extra staff of clerks and tellers supplied to meet the rush did not allay the fears of the depositors.

Money in Window.

The stage had been carefully set with great stacks of money piled in the cages as an earnest of the bank's ability to meet all liabilities, but the effect was lost on the frenzied mob. A riot call was sent to the Maxwell street station, bringing the reserves to the bank. At the same time Assistant Chief Schuettler rushed out his Italian squad in an automobile.

The Italian detectives—Bernacchi, De Vito, Riccio, Parodi, and De Mar—harangued the depositors, and finally succeeded, with the uniformed police at their back, in restoring a semblance of order.

But at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, when James B. Forgan arrived in person to superintend the work of liquidation, there was still excitement.

Banks Back of Pledge.

The First National bank, of which Mr. Forgan is president, is one of the six which have guaranteed payment in full by the State Bank of Italy. The others are the Continental and Commercial National, the Illinois Trust and Savings, the Corn Exchange National, the Merchants Loan and Trust, and the National City.

A committee representing these banks and the Clearing House association had met with officers of the State Bank of Italy and had been satisfied the assets of the Italian institution were in excess of its $375,000 deposits. Thereupon, it being agreed the bank could not continue and remain solvent, money was advanced to pay off depositors in full. Mr. Forgan was chosen as the head of the committee.

The State Bank of Italy, an outgrowth of the private bank of Pasquale Schiavone, was organized three years ago with a capital of $200,000. Schiavone was made president and E. C. Dapples cashier. Schiavone says he intends to establish another private bank, in the conduct of which he will not have to bear the expenses incident to a clearing house membership and state supervision.

Augmented by Newcomers.

The news was slow to penetrate all parts of the Italian district and notice of the decision to liquidate did not reach all the depositors rapidly. As the hours passed the crowd about the bank did not diminish rapidly. As fast as the line thinned it was augmented by newcomers, who streamed toward the bank from all directions, many of them breathless and excited, nearly every one carrying a bank book gripped in one hand.

Cashier Dapples said there was about $500,000 in savings accounts alone, that the bank had plenty of cash and all the necessary help, and that the situation required only that every one move rapidly and payment would be made as quickly as possible.

Statement by Forgan.

The following statement was issued by James B. Forgan, chairman of the clearing house committee:

"The State Bank of Italy has for some time back had rather a hard experience, aggravated by the general business depression and the situation produced by the European war.

"During the past year they have been called upon to liquidate over 50 per cent of their deposits, and the withdrawals have been more marked recently, since Italy entered the war. Facing the interest payment date on July 1, when normally a considerable withdrawal of savings deposits would take place, and anticipating that such withdrawals would be largely increased owing to present conditions, the directors of the bank decided that the bank should discontinue business.

Enough Assets to Liquidate.

"The matter was taken up with the clearing house committee, and, finding that the bank had sufficient assets to liquidate the remainder of its deposits, the six banks represented on the clearing house committee agreed to advance the amount necessary to pay off the depositors against the security of the bank's assets, which are to be liquidated by the First Trust and Savings bank for the purpose of paying back the amount thus borrowed and thereafter distributing whatever is left among the stockholders of the bank."

Twenty-four hundred of the bank's 4,000 depositors had been paid off at 5 o'clock, when the doors were closed for the night.

ALL DISSENSION IN NEW BRITISH CABINET FADES

Rumors of Lloyd-George Intriguing Against Asquith Are Groundless, Says O'Connor.

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.
[FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1915: By Central News.]

LONDON.—[Special.]—All political centers are schools for scandal and no legislative body in the world is more so than the house of commons. All politicians, too, are surrounded by a cynical atmosphere wherein a certain number of men always place the most malignant interpretations on words and motives.

Never was there such an opportunity for revelation of these elementary and inevitable parliamentary tendencies than during the weeks which followed immediately upon the creation of the coalition government. In addition to all other factors making for disquieting and cynical rumors there were a number of men displaced—men of disappointed hopes and strong party men honestly regarding the future of their political ideals.

From all these factors there grew up a great legend of Lloyd-George and an intrigue to displace Asquith and put the brilliant Welshman in his place. The rumors advanced into the region of prophecy, manufacturing a brilliant future for Lloyd-George. He was to be a new Joseph Chamberlain and build up a new political party wherein the Tories would participate and all Liberal principles be abandoned, especially free trade, which would be replaced by a tariff against Germany, made easier by the fierce hatred which will certainly last for a generation.

Lloyd-George Exasperated.

No man was more exasperated or distressed by these ingenious rumors than Lloyd-George himself, for he has an intense affection for Asquith and feels a gratitude for the consistent support which Asquith gave him even in the dark hours of the Marconi scandal.

Rumors of this kind die slowly, once they are started, and at the same time some incautious words of Lloyd-George, uttered during his brilliant oratorial campaign in munition centers, added new wings to the report. Some of his words were misunderstood as meaning an immediate demand for military conscription and labor compulsion.

The Liberals, Laborites, and Irish, already peevish because of the substitution of the coalition for the Liberal government, became dangerously restive. Thus it was such a small incident as the proposal to appoint James Campbell the Irish lord chancellor which created a grave ministerial crisis and, if persisted in, would undoubtedly have destroyed the new ministry.

It is evidence of this atmosphere of alarming and senseless rumor that the proposal to appoint Campbell was described by parliamentary cynics as a deliberate trick to procure Asquith's resignation and Lloyd-George's premiership.

Dillon Brought Things to Head.

John Dillon brought things to a head by an impassioned speech denouncing both military conscription of labor compulsion. The speech, which was resoundingly cheered, revealed the abyss of violent and hitherto unexpressed hostility by the Liberals and the Irish. In the meantime there were ominous warnings from the Labor leaders that any attempt to apply compulsion to workingmen would bring disastrous results and would defeat Lloyd-George's patriotic desire to speed up ammunition making.

I describe this most recent approach to a ministerial crisis to bring into greater relief the extraordinary transformation which this week shows in atmosphere and temper. The Lloyd-George myth has vanished in unsubstantial air and the debate on the new war credit of £250,000,000 gave Asquith an opportunity for explaining the genesis of the coalition government. He seized the opportunity by delivering a magnificent speech which not only convinced but deeply moved the house of commons.

There were several passages of an intimate personal note which brought out his sense of his enormous responsibilities and revealed his torture at parting from his old friends. Once even he almost broke down as he spoke mournfully of his ambition, more than satisfied, and replaced by a weariness at his burden.

Asquith Saves Situation.

Once more Asquith's superb oratory saved the situation and conquered the entire house with the exception of one or two members who uttered carping criticisms regarding the past. Dillon, intervening happily for the second time during these momentous days, seized upon the occasion to declare the perfect confidence of the Irish party in Asquith.

He announced that as much as he and every member of the Irish party objected to the disappearance of the old ministry and the creation of the new—especially with Sir Edward Carson as one of the members—the entire Irish party was determined to give the ministry its full support to carry the war to a successful issue.

His declaration was received with universal applause. Even Bonar Law, his most ardent enemy in the old days of the home rule fight, joined in the cheer.

The net result was that Asquith was again supreme, and the whole house determined to stand by him as the one man whose tact and intellect can maintain the unity of the house and nation.

The period of difficult probation is over for the new ministry. All trace of dissension has disappeared, and in the meantime all talk of compulsion in any shape, either of labor or recruits, has ended in smoke. Lloyd-George, with his characteristic common sense, is negotiating with the trade union leaders and finding common ground for action whereby the working men will give a maximum of labor to the production of ammunition with unforced good will.

Confidence in Lloyd-George.

There is also the feeling that Lloyd-George's tremendous energy and power is inspiring the people with his contempt for red tape and that he will se.. our troops shells and ammunition in such abundance as will make it possible to drive the Germans out of France.

This mission of Lloyd-George's marks a new epoch in the war from many points of view. It comes also at a time when there is evidently a deeper feeling of the difficulties of the gigantic task of beating Germany. John Bull is not more resolute than he was, but is more serious. All the easy optimism of the early days of the war has disappeared and has been replaced by the deeper realization of what war demands.

There is a cry for more news, whether good or bad. Everybody has nerved himself to hearing the worst and unpleasant news brings only the comment that the war will be longer, but that the result will be the same.

Quotations from German newspapers show the creation in the German mind of an imaginary England trembling under the terror of the Zeppelins.

No Dread of Zeppelins.

As a matter of fact, London was never calmer than it is today. It pursues its steady way in perfect oblivion to the Zeppelins. To us it is clear that England must destroy Prussian militarism or abdicate from any claim of being a great nation.

Great Britain and her peoples will shrink from no sacrifice rather than see Germany triumph over her free civilization. She has been able already to begin to count the cost, both in lives and in money, but realizes that the task is but begun, and that the cost will mount steadily until the final overwhelming blow which will crush Prussia.

It is a curious fact that the house of commons cannot honor its members who have died in battle as does the French chamber of deputies. When I was in Paris recently I was taken, of course, to the meeting place of the chamber, where, around the seats of more than one deputy there was a garland of the tricolor with crêpe intertwined, marking the death on the field of battle of the deputy who had turned soldier.

Two members of our house of commons have been killed at the front, nine have been wounded, and two others are prisoners in the hands of the Germans. It is impossible, however, to follow the example of the French in honoring them, even if British national characteristics permitted such public demonstration of our innermost feelings.

House Seats Not Allotted.

The difficulty is that it is hard to say what particular seat in the house belongs to any member. The house of commons is perhaps the only legislative chamber in the world which does not make an allotment of seats.

Aside from the matter of honoring the members who have fallen in their country's service, the question has come up in another form. Owing to the fact that there are, roughly, only two seats for every three members, the house has in the past established the rule that presence at prayers preëmpts a seat for the rest of that day. The member, however, has to repeat the process every afternoon unless he happens to be one of those ancient parliamentary figures to whom respect allots unusual privileges.

There is one class of member who does get a lease on his seat—the members of the existing or of the preceding government. They are entitled to sit on what are called the front benches. The distinction is valued highly. When you speak of a front bench man you indicate that he is a man who has "arrived."

Apart from the advantage of having a fairly secure seat without the trouble of attending prayers at the early hour when they are said, he has the greater advantage of being more certain of being called by the speaker.

Bank Messenger Routs Robber.

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—Orris Stanfield, bank messenger for the Van Vleet Mansfield Drug company of Memphis, by a plucky fight in a crowded street today routed a holdup man and saved $3,500 cash which he was carrying in a satchel. The bandit leaped into an automobile and escaped.

U. S. WAR SALES TO THE ALLIES $1,500,000,000

America Becomes Biggest Market in World for Military Equipment.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 26.—[Special.]—Is America keeping the war going?

With the sales of war supplies to Great Britain and its allies totaling more tha. $1,500,000,000 and with a foreign trade balance for the expiring fiscal year approximating $1,000,000,000, the United States has become in a period of eleven months the greatest market for military equipment in the history of the world.

American manufacturers and producers not only are reaping tremendous profits from the war trade but are preparing to supply an enormously increased demand for their wares. Prodigious as the volume of war business appears now, it is puny compared with the American traffic in arms and munitions which will be developed if the great struggle continues a year or two longer.

Allies Need U. S. Products.

If America should shut up shop for the remainder of the war, as many people advocate, the allies would be hard put to it to feed, clothe, and serve their armies and to provide sufficient arms and ammunition to match the seemingly inexhaustible supply of death dealing agencies possessed by Germany.

In a constantly accelerated volume, American exporters are pouring out cartridges, shells, and small arms, uniforms, boots, stockings, automobiles, trucks, and motorcycles, saddles, bridles, and other leather equipment, wheat, oats, and corn, flour, meats, and manufactured foods, copper, steel, barbed wire, gasoline, lubricating oil, cotton, rubber, and the countless accessories of twentieth century warfare. Horses and mules are also being exported in large numbers.

In addition, America is beginning to finance the war for the allies on a large scale. Morgan and other great banking houses have arranged credits aggregating several hundred millions of dollars for the purchase of supplies in the United States and are loaning millions more directly to England and France.

Argument of Wilson.

The United States government suspects that American producers, exporters, and bankers are keeping the war going, but professes itself helpless to prevent it so long as the nation remains neutral. To shut off the exportation of war munitions now, President Wilson says, would be an unneutral act, for in that way the United States would aid Germany and injure the allies.

As the British parliament has voted a credit of $5,000,000,000, it is unlikely that the war will end this year. By the time snow flies the production of arms and ammunition in this country for the allies will be organized on a vast scale. By the time congress meets in December America will be in the midst of a war traffic which it is estimated will net the country a foreign trade balance of approximately $1,500,000,000 for the next fiscal year.

Records of Government.

So far the output of arms and ammunition is only a drop in the bucket of war supplies. The records of the department of commerce show that up to May 1 only $27,000,000 worth of such munitions had been exported. The firearms figures for the first nine months of the war follow:

Month. 1914.	Firearms value.	Month 1915.	Firearms value.
August	$208,664	January	$2,156,747
September	201,856	February	564,084
October	682,146	March	545,716
November	1,194,810	April	486,814
December	1,008,158
		Total	$1,142,094

In the first nine months of the war America furnished the allies with less than a week's supply of ammunition. That the amount was not larger has occasioned much surprise. The following explanation is given by an army ordnance officer:

"When the war broke out in Europe there was not a single manufacturer of army rifles in this country, other than the government of the United States, making magazine rifles such as all armies use today. To make such rifles requires more or less special equipment. A factory that is making the ordinary sporting rifle or shotgun cannot start in at once to turn out magazine army rifles. New tools have to be installed, new processes of manufacture must be employed.

"Today the Westinghouse company, the Remington Arms company, and the Winchester Arms company are making army rifles, and I am told that their total capacity is nearly 4,000 guns a day.

Purchases Auto Plant.

"The Westinghouse company has never been heard of in army circles as a manufacturer of arms or ammunition. Recently, however, it purchased the Stevens Arms company of Chicopee Falls, Mass., and the plant of the Stevens-Duryea Automobile company. I learn that both have been enlarged and both are to be used for the manufacture of army rifles, shells, shrapnel, and war automobiles. But it will be several months before these plants can turn out army rifles or shells.

"The Westinghouse company has started in to enlarge these newly purchased plants and has added approximately 12,000 men to the pay roll.

"The manufacture of cartridges has increased enormously. The Remington, the Winchester, the Union Metallic, and the Peters companies have all increased their output by plant enlargements and working day and night. If I were to be very conservative, I should say that the increase in the manufactured cartridges is six times what it was before the war, and I verily believe it is ten times that.

"The export figures show this. The exports have jumped from $154,000 in August, the first month of the war, to $2,600,000 in April, and I would be willing to bet they will be $5, 0,000 a month before the end of the year. It is easier to increase the manufacture of cartridges than almost anything else that is used in war, except, of course, clothing."

JURY GIVES WOMAN $17,000.

Verdict Returned Against Street Railway Company in Favor of Mrs. Katie Sieger.

A jury before Judge Mangan in the Circuit court yesterday returned a verdict finding the Chicago Railways company responsible for injuries sustained by Mrs Katie Sieger, 1128 Diversey parkway, on April 17, 1911, while she was a passenger on a North avenue car. The verdict by the jury is for $17,000.

OFFICE OF SMOKE INSPECTOR —REPORT— NOTHING TO REPORT SINCE THE ADOPTION OF KEWANEE SMOKE INSPECTOR

Good Night, Smoke Inspector!

This is what would happen to the smoke inspector if he had nothing to inspect but Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers. He would dwindle into "inocuous desuetude" and experience a decided cessation of "pernicious activity." Because Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers are smokeless, and being smokeless, they save you money that usually goes up the chimney in smoke. Smoke, you know, is nothing but unconsumed fuel and you can't afford to have smoke. It's about as expensive a luxury as we know of.

Doesn't it appeal to you thunderously to know that you can burn the cheapest grades of soft coal in this particular boiler without smoke? Doesn't it interest you owners of buildings to know that you don't have to buy expensive smokeless coal if you have this boiler in use? And that the difference in cost between the cheap and expensive grades goes into the thousands if you are a big coal user?

Ask us what buildings in this city use Kewanee Smokeless Firebox Boilers. And when you get the names, call up the people and ask them what their experience has been—how much they have saved—whether the cheap soft coal they are using is burned without smoke. You can say what you please but the TESTIMONIAL, when it is on the square, is the grandest and only convincing advertising in the world.

Write personally to The Old Man Behind the Boiler and ask him how he makes a boiler that will burn cheap soft coal without smoke.

Another Big Scoop For The Tribune

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S Animated Weekly, released tomorrow (Monday), will contain Moving Pictures of Warden Edmund M. Allen, in the Joliet Prison!

This remarkable film, by the sheerest coincidence, was obtained shortly before the recent tragedy occurred in the penitentiary.

The pictures show Warden Edmund M. Allen in his office at Joliet Penitentiary, busy with his daily work for the benefit of the inmates. Mr. Allen instituted the Honor System at Joliet. The pictures show the honor men at Camp Hope and depict the ramifications of the system. They also show scenes within the prison—the inmates leaving their cells and marching to dinner; they show 1500 of them at dinner and then show them returning to their cells. An armed guard on the prison wall is another feature of the film.

There is no psychology that can explain how THE TRIBUNE came to get these pictures at the time that makes them invaluable. It's another case of the long arm of coincidence. The fact remains that the pictures WERE MADE and that they are pictures of historical merit, even in the quick history of the present day.

Seeing Chicago from a hydro-aeroplane.

Dynamiting a sinking vessel in Lake Michigan.

Scenes from the horse show at South Shore Country Club.

Mrs. A. B. Hazard, winner of the first $50 prize for an idea for a Doc Yak moving picture.

And Old Doc Yak's Adventures in the Navy

COLONIAL THEATRE—Randolph and State.
PINE GROVE THEATRE—Sheridan Road and Broadway.

BOLOGNA MOST WARLIKE CITY IN ALL ITALY

Streets Thronged with Soldiers, Awaiting Turn to Go to the Front.

BY CAROLYN WILSON.

[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BOLOGNA, May 30.—As far as I can judge, this is the most warlike city of Italy. Warlike? Why, the town is green with soldiers. That is honestly no exaggeration.

You start up one of the streets, and at the far end is a mist, dull and green, like that which settles over a meadow toward evening, and as you come nearer it resolves itself into hundreds of soldiers, squatting on the curbstones, seated at tables placed way out into the streets, lounging in front of shops.

It seems that Bologna is the concentrating place of all soldiers from the south, west, and east, and besides I have heard it cautiously whispered that the general staff is not far north and the king himself is only an hour away by automobile.

Looks Like Real War.

This at last begins to look like the real thing—like France has looked for many months. For up to now, except the stray soldier or the territorials left to the particular cities, I have seen scarcely a sign of the army.

I asked the old lady where I bought my cherries how many soldiers there were in Bologna. Keeping a careful eye on the stacks of fruit outside her shop, she said, resignedly:

"All there are in Italy, I think. It keeps me busy watching them that they don't take all the fruit that is on the stand outside."

"Why don't you bring it inside?" I asked her.

She looked at me vaguely a minute.

"O, one doesn't," she said. "And, anyway," philosophically, "what does a cherry or two matter when one is on one's way to get killed. Besides, it gives me a chance to scold them, and I like to scold," and she laughed at me out of her funny, wrinkled old face.

Arcades Filled with Soldiers.

It is impossible to walk under the arcades which go to make up the entire shopping district of the town, because they are filled with soldiers. So one hobbles along complainingly over the huge, uneven stones of the street.

There is evidently fear of the enemy's aeroplanes, for there are about forty men at work on the big Neptune statue in the square and they have built a huge staging or box around it which they are laboriously filling in with sand.

They are careful of spies here, too. One has to conform to a thousand regulations to stay the night at the hotel. I suppose they think that with so many soldiers around it would be easy for a spy to slip in among those leaving for the front.

Italy is being strict in the observance of rules which have been tried in the other countries during the war. She has had ten months to study in and she intends to profit by other countries' experiences.

Any one coming into any city must register personally with the police inside of twelve hours; any one coming into the country must go to the health department for examination. Letters are held up practically everywhere, even ordinary ones going to Rome or through the proving ten days to get letters through to France.

Few Outside Newspapers.

Few newspapers have come through from any outside country since Italy declared war, and we never see one of less than six days before.

As far as the newspapers here go, they are effectually muzzled. They cannot have correspondents at the front. They cannot print anything which has happened at or near the front, even if it is of no military importance.

The curtains are pulled down in railway trains all over the kingdom, which, of course, makes it pleasant traveling in the hot weather, and there are plenty of carabiniers on the trains to enforce the orders. These same men settle any difficulty which may arise from time to time about spies or suspects on the trains. For just now Italy is filled with a marvelous zeal for informing, and any one who is not an Italian is probably a German.

Coming from Milan, one man in my compartment took exception to my Italian accent—a fact in itself not at all remarkable—and called in the guard to examine my papers, saying I was a German. When, however, it was definitely settled that I was an American he had the last word by saying:

"I told you she was a German—German-American, of course."

And all that trouble and complaint, although I made him definitely state before the guard that he spoke neither French, German, nor English, so, of course, couldn't recognize an accent if he heard it.

There seems to be considerable uneasiness here about the Swiss attitude. It is believed everywhere, I don't know with how much ground, that the Swiss are friendly to the Germans and had an understanding about letting them through their territory in case Italy should come in.

Opinion of Prominent Swiss.

I talked to a prominent Swiss on the way from Milan coming here, and he said:

"Of course, it may become serious and Germany may try to force a way, but I don't believe that that will ever happen, for two reasons: Switzerland is not the easy country to cross that Belgium was. It would be almost impossible to get their heavy guns over our mountains.

"And, secondly, if Switzerland is really in earnest about preserving her neutrality she can get all the troops she needs from France and England to help her back up her word and hold the Germans off."

On the southern border the Swiss are friendly. An English correspondent sent back from Chiasso tells the story of Otto Kahn, correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung at Milan.

He got safely across the barrier at Chiasso into Swiss territory, and as soon as he was over he began cursing the Italians, mocking them and telling what the Germans would do to them.

The soldiers on the other side were furious, but could do nothing. So the Swiss soldiers crowded around him and quite without touching him at all simply pushed him over onto Italian soil, where he was arrested with great glee and will serve the rest of the war in prison.

Scientists Erect Memorial to Mrs. Eddy.

Boston, Mass., June 26.—Announcement of the completion of plans for a memorial monument at the grave of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, founder of the Christian Science church, in Mount Auburn cemetery, Cambridge, was made today. The memorial, designed by Egerton Swartmout of New York, will consist of a circular open colonnade of eight columns, resting on a base of three steps and surrounded on the front by a circular platform, from which a double flight of steps will lead to the edge of a small lake. The material will be white granite, with inscriptions in white bronze. The detail will be floral. A fund of $110,000 has been raised for the erection and maintenance of the memorial.

CANNON SLAUGHTER BEGINS.

Sioux City Boy Loses His Life While Loading an Improvised Weapon.

Sioux City, Ia., June 26.—[Special.]—An improvised cannon he was loading this morning exploded and fatally injured Earl Wilkins, the 17 year old son of Ernest H. Wilkins of this place. Young Wilkins died this afternoon in a hospital. His brother, Fred, 15 years old, suffered a badly burned hand.

AGED CHICAGO NATIVE DIES.

Elijah Kent Hubbard, one of the oldest native Chicagoans, died yesterday in Middletown, Conn., at the age of 80 years. Although Mr. Hubbard moved away from Chicago soon after the civil war, he paid visits to the city of his birth at intervals of every two or three years and claimed to be the oldest living white person born in this city. His father, who bore the same name, came to Chicago in 1834 and was one of the builders of the Galena and Chicago Union railroad, the first railroad running out of the city. Mr. Hubbard was born here in 1835. He retired some time ago as president of the Russell Manufacturing company in Middletown. He is survived by three sons and two daughters.

FITCH PUTS POLO IN USEFUL CLASS

Tells Fellow Authors Game Helps Digest Champagne and Likewise Cheese.

"Polo," soliloquized George Fitch, one of a party of the Midland Authors club, entertained yesterday at the Onwentsia club by Mr. and Mrs. Hobart-Chatfield Taylor, "is a sport for the rich, useful as an aid in the digestion of champagne, caviar, and certain varieties of cheese. There are four objects in the game, a horse, a man, a mallet, and a ball somewhat larger than a baseball and smaller than a cabbage head. A score is made by riding the ball between two posts arranged like goal posts for football. But the principal object of the game is to stick on the horse so as not to fall in disgrace before the ladies who compose the audience.

"The game affords me great relief, for I see now that the horse will always be useful. Horses are no good any more in war or in peace, but in polo they are indispensable. The players might use Missouri mules if they made the beasts move backwards, but then there would be no need for mallets."

Watch Practice Game.

The members of the Authors' club spent the afternoon in watching the "Blues" and the "Whites" of the Onwentsia club in a practice game. The Blues won, 11 to 3½.

After the game the authors were entertained at a dinner party at the home of Mr. Taylor and in the evening they were the guests of the Lake Forest players at the playhouse of Mrs. Arthur Aldis, where a cast of Lake Forest society people staged the "Fourflushers" and "The Riders to the Sea."

Mr. Taylor is president of the Midland Authors' club and George Ade is vice president. Mr. Ade wrote that he would give a thousand dollars to be there and observe "tall grass authors watching a polo game," but he had to stick to the Indiana picnic at Tippecanoe "because the Lord knew he was a Hoosier before he was an author."

Toast to Riley.

At 6:30 as the the guests sat down to dinner in the Taylor home a toast was drunk to the honor of James Whitcomb Riley, honorary president of the organization.

The authors in the party were Miss Alice French (Octave Thanet), Mr. Fitch, Arthur Davidson Ficke, Mr. and Mrs. Randall Parrish, Henry Kitchell Webster, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Leston Taylor, Miss Clare E. Laughlin, Miss Caroline Kirkland, Miss Lillian Bell, Dr. William Barton, Dr. H. S. Spaulding, William B. McHarg, Wallace Rice, Miss Edith Huntington Mason, Miss Alice Gurstenberg, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Stahl, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Peattie, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Krauss, Mr. and Mrs. William N. Clute, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Taylor Field, Miss Harriet Monroe, and Mr. and Mrs. William Donnahey.

"SANE FOURTH" CRUSADERS EXTEND SCOPE THIS YEAR.

"Tribune's" Life Saving Plan for Independence Day Taken Up by Most Big Cities of the Nation.

Exponents of the sane Fourth are preparing to make this coming Independence day the sanest and the most nearly noiseless of any anniversary of the nation's birth since THE TRIBUNE opened its celebrated campaign for the saving of eyes, limbs, and lives.

In the majority of cities and towns of the country the principle of the sane Fourth has been accepted so generally and has worked out so well in recent years that extraordinary precautions are deemed unnecessary. All the features of the traditional Fourth will be observed, minus only those which furnished the burns, wounds, and death lists.

One of yesterday's announcers of the enforcement of sane Fourth regulations was Oscar W. Schmidt, president of the village board of Wilmette. President Schmidt issued a proclamation prohibiting the "discharge of cannons, guns, pistols, revolvers, or other firearms" and forbidding the use of dynamite within the village limits.

Lake Forest will hold an official celebration on July 5. The city council and the mayor will oversee the program. United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis will be the orator of the day. Mayor William Mather Lewis appointed a committee composed of Mrs. Arthur Aldis, Charles P. Atkinson, and Father F. J. Barry to arrange the events of the day. A bugle corps from the United States naval training station will lead the Independence day parade.

OBITUARY.

BURIED WITH HER DIPLOMA.

Dorothy M. Dornseif, 15 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Frederic J. Dornseif of 4848 North Irving avenue, was buried yesterday and with her was buried the grammar school diploma which was conferred on her the day after her death by the Grover Cleveland school. The girl died on Wednesday following an operation for appendicitis. Many of her schoolmates attended the funeral. L. W. Colwell, principal of the school, whose daughter, Charlotte, was her chum, also was present.

THE REV. THEODORE L. FLOOD, one of the best known men in the Methodist Episcopal church, died at his home in Meadville, Pa., last night. He was associated with Bishop John H. Vincent in founding the Chautauqua institution more than forty years ago. He was founder and for twenty-five years editor of the Chautauquan Magazine. He was 74 years old.

OBITUARY.

FUNERAL OF J. F. STEWARD TO BE HELD AT PLANO TODAY

John F. Steward, whose death on Friday closed a career of fifty years as an inventor, patent attorney, and patent expert, will be buried today. Mr. Steward was 75 years old. On Aug. 15 he would have celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his entry into the harvester business. He was connected for many years with the Deering Harvester company and later with the International Harvester company.

He was a brother of Lewis Steward, Democratic candidate for governor in the Tilden campaign and later a congressman. Besides being the inventor of many of the improvements in modern harvesting machinery, Mr. Steward found time to become one of the foremost authorities of the country on early explorations of the middle west as well as an amateur astronomer and geologist. The active pallbearers will be:

B. A. Kennedy,	A. L. Johnson,
C. H. Haney,	Christopher Berg,
George L. Rice,	J. H. Pitkin,
George W. Lincoln,	John W. Latimer.

The following will act as honorary pall bearers:

O. S. Ellithorp,	M. E. Holton,
John F. Appleby,	W. W. Marsh.

The funeral will be held from the late residence in Plano at 1:30.

ALEXANDER KENEALY, editor of the London Daily Mirror, died yesterday, aged 51 years. He was born in Sussex, England. He joined the staff of the New York Herald in 1882 and represented that paper on Rear Admiral Peary's first arctic expedition. He became a member of the New York World staff in 1895 and was its correspondent with the American fleet in the Spanish war. He began newspaper work in London as news editor of the Daily Express in 1901. Three years later he went with the Daily Mirror.

FRANK B. PEASE of the law firm of Atwood, Pease & Loucks died yesterday at his residence, 3342 Oak Park avenue, Berwyn, at the age of 50. He had lived in the vicinity of Chicago all his life. Mr. Pease leaves a widow and five children. He was a member of the Union League club and the Chicago and Illinois Bar associations.

JOHN T. KEATING, former member of the board of education, who died on Thursday, will be buried today at Mount Olivet. Funeral services will be held at St. Thomas' Roman Catholic church. The Seventh infantry, commanded by Col. Daniel Moriarity, will head the procession.

ARTHUR MARSHALL MORGAN, a hydraulic engineer, died yesterday at his residence in Evanston, after a long illness. He had lived in Evanston nearly thirty years. He is survived by a widow and three children. The funeral will be held tomorrow. Burial in Rosehill.

L. L. LOSEY of 2322 Calumet avenue, a veteran of the civil war and for twenty years head of the claim department of the Illinois Central railroad, died Friday. The funeral will be held from the residence this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Twin Tires?—No

One Is a Goodyear as It Might Be

One as It Is—Costing Us $1,635,000 More

This is to prove that you can't judge tires by looks.

Here are two Goodyear tires, seemingly identical. Not one man in ten could tell the tires apart.

But one is built like many of its rivals. Goodyear extras are omitted. It lacks in hidden values. And those unseen lacks are bound to show in service.

The other has those extras. It embodies Goodyear standards. This year's output, built in this way, will cost us $1,635,000 more than if built the other way.

No Price Apology

This is no price apology.

Goodyear prices have been fairly racing down. Our late big reduction made the third in two years, totaling 45 per cent.

Tires can be built, of course, to undersell the Goodyear. But equal tires could not compete, because of our matchless output. There is no other tire like Goodyear, in five important ways.

$500,000 This Year

This year's betterments alone will add to our cost $500,000 yearly. These are added in our 16th year. They are added to tires which, on sheer merit, have long held topmost place. They are added in spite of a price reduction which saves our users some five million dollars this year.

And we spend on experts this year $100,000 more to find new improvements for next year.

You Deserve Them

When you buy tires you deserve the Goodyear quality. You deserve Fortified Tires, with the No-Rim-Cut feature. You deserve the "On-Air" cure. You deserve our extra-strong fabric, our number of plies.

In anti-skids you deserve our All-Weather tread, tough, double-thick and resistless.

These things have brought Goodyear the largest sale in the world. They are saving our users millions of dollars yearly. They are at your service, wherever you are.

Any dealer, if you ask him, will supply you Goodyear tires.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

A VICIOUS PROPAGANDA.

When the president of Princeton university, Dr. Hibben, made his striking protest against peace-at-any-price pacifism at the Mohonk conference on international arbitration, he said: "I am not in sympathy with the peace propaganda which is being prosecuted in many of our schools, so far, at least, as it endeavors to quicken the peace sentiment by impressing upon the minds of the young children the horrors or the economic losses of war."

Very few Americans who read these words as they appeared in newspapers throughout the country got their significance. In fact, probably no one knows to what extent currency is being given in the schools to the pacifist theories of the Carnegie-Jordan school, which President Hibben had in mind, but new light is thrown upon this movement by an astonishing though characteristic document being distributed by the "Division of Intercourse and Education of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace." It is entitled "Problems About War," "for classes in arithmetic," and is "designed to lay before young people in the elementary schools, at the most impressionable age, the fact of the wastefulness of war." Here are specimens of the problems:

WAR EXPENSES AND OUR PLEASURES.
Problems Involving Long Division.

1. There are 300,000 Boy Scouts in America, and $30 on an average would give each of them a camping trip and a scout suit this year. We spent on our war department $173,522,804 last year. This amount would pay these expenses of the Boy Scouts for how many years?

2. Most boys would like to go to a ball game every week. If a boy went to a game every week for a season of twenty weeks, and took a 50 cent seat, how much would it cost for the season? The amount which we spent on our navy last year, $139,682,186, would pay for tickets for how many boys?

4. A good tennis racket can be bought for $1.50. The battleship Vermont cost $7,563,963. This amount would buy rackets for how many boys and girls?

9. During the year preceding the great war the five great European powers spent $898,921,000 on their armies. At 10 cents per ticket, how many tickets to some good moving picture plays would such an amount buy for each of the 450,000,000 people in these countries? Answer to the nearest unit.

The deep offense of this subtle and corrupting appeal to the pleasure loving instinct of childhood is made the more nauseating by the empty pretense of caution conveyed by the following note:

"It is hoped that such examples, relating to the immediate interests of the pupils, may furnish means for giving them some idea of the vastness of expenditure for armaments. It is not intended to suggest that the money spent for war would otherwise be spent for pleasure, but to offer familiar standards of measure to allow our youth to appreciate the size of numbers represented by these endless 'caravans of figures.'"

This, under a hypocritical disguise of education, is peace at any price in its most contemptible form, an attack upon the morale of American youth which, if it is permitted to be carried out, will have the worst effect upon the character of the next generation. That it should be offered seriously as an effort at creating a "broader patriotism and higher ideals" is a striking example of the intellectual dishonesty and moral perversion of the Carnegie propaganda.

These problems, we are informed by the Carnegie Endowment, "are sent to thousands of teachers and text book writers throughout the United States." If such is the case the Carnegie Endowment is revealed as a menace not to be permitted without determined attempt to counteract its influence.

If this type of pacifism expresses American morale today or tomorrow the fate of this nation will be worse than China's and far more deserved.

WHERE AMERICA LEADS.

If we were called upon to select the most fitting subject for a Fourth of July rhetorician, where men talk in superlatives, we would not overlook America's record as an inventive nation. If human progress depends upon the man who has vision and who can project himself into the unknown and return with something that makes life vastly more worth while, then the entire world is paying homage to Yankee ingenuity and imagination.

Our contribution to political theory might conceivably be under dark suspicion in certain quarters, but our place in the world of invention is secure. The people who in a short space of eighty years contributed so marvelously to the industrial and social revolutions of the past decades by the invention and in some instances the perfectment of the cotton gin, the reaper, telegraph, steamboat, telephone, sewing machine, trolley car, dynamo, arc light, incandescent lamp, electricity, steam turbine, gasoline engine, air brake, typewriter, phonograph, Mergenthaler typesetting process, horticulture, skyscraper, elevators, and more recently the airship, submarine, automobile, and moving picture, deserve something from history.

The editors of the Scientific American seized upon the opportunity in their seventieth anniversary issue to point out the creative achievement of American genius during the last eighty years. Only a hundred years ago it was said that the culture and civilization of Paris and London was inferior to that of Egypt and Mesopotamia five thousand years ago. Beginning with the steam engine, a march was begun which has transformed the entire world. In 1840-50, the ten year period crowded with inventive results, Americans led the way with the reaper, the vulcanization of rubber, sewing machines, and the telegraph.

Our record has not yet been equaled, and yet we have not reached the height of our growth.

ENTER MILITARY SOCIALISM.

Military socialism is the dominating system in Europe today. It has absorbed the Germanic and Austro-Hungarian empires. France has been forced to adopt it. Great Britain is compromising and temporizing, but is quite apparently approaching it.

Military socialism is a loosely constructed phrase, but it is a fairly descriptive one for a condition of society in which compulsion of the individual for the good of the state begins with prescribing the amount of bread he may eat and ends with prescribing the amount and character of work he shall perform. It does not matter whether the compulsion can be concealed in a word of direction to willing citizens or whether it is force applied to unwilling ones. The individual is giving himself without reservation to the state. Individualism is ceasing to exist except in Great Britain, where its survival is threatening the purpose of the state.

We here in the United States do not like this any more than the English like it or than the French liked it. The French just avoided a knockout from an iron fist and they reconciled themselves to a surrender to necessity with less feeling and better grace than the English, who have only the occasional Zeppelin or submarine to avoid.

Military socialism is the dominating system. Its enemies are adopting it to destroy it. They cannot fight it and succeed if they hold to their principle that the individual is so sacred and important that he may not be forced to do other than pay his taxes and obey the general laws of the state.

Military socialism can be conquered only by military socialism and Lloyd George has been telling Great Britain this for weeks, ever since the feebleness of the British effort against Germany was fully disclosed. When it has been adopted, will it be discarded? That is the question of the war which turns itself unpleasantly toward the United States.

It is the inherent optimism of humans to think that if they can get a question stated in new terms they have it solved. From century to century the question of control gets restatement and the revolutionaries who have fought for the changed form and have succeeded in obtaining it have a moment of thinking that their accomplishment is permanent. Then comes the realization that the form of control has been changed but that the fact of control remains. From absolutism to restricted monarchy, from restricted monarchy to representative democracy, from representative democracy to pure democracy, from democracy to socialism—thus the struggle for freedom from control or equality under it progresses, exchanging kings for barons, barons for capitalists, parliamentarians for referendum votes, etc., etc., getting a change of form and never escaping the fact that the strongest will be dominant.

Now Europe is under the control of military socialism. Where the individual is willing he need not be coerced; where he is unwilling he must be. Nothing exists except the state and that is as absolute in its demands and as relentless in its decrees as if the power were in the hands of an unrestricted monarch. The state is the people, but it does not permit the will of the individual to stand opposed to its will.

It will be fortunate for us if the war does destroy this, whether it be good, bad, or indifferent, whether it be necessary or unnecessary. Its threat to us is its appalling efficiency. We know beyond any doubt that we shall not adopt it. If the war does not destroy it we shall have to face it, to present to it the temptation of our wealth and the fact of our helplessness.

We are fat merchants exposed on the highway with our rich merchandise in tempting caravans. We do not want to attack any one. We have what we want. If any act of highway robbery waited for our hands to commit it there would be peace on the highways for a century, but the peace of the community never is in the hands of the men who do not want to break it. It is in the hands of the men who do want to.

A nation which is destined and determined to be helpless may with cause consider the possibility of a change of system of control in Europe and in Asia. Japan has none of our repugnance for efficiency. The Japanese mind is not hostile to a fact. The Japanese do not put on smoked glasses to keep from seeing a fact if it be unpleasantly bright.

They accept it. They may regret that it is the fact, but they do not try to persuade themselves that it does not exist. If military socialism be established in Europe as the best means of preserving nationality and advancing national aspirations, it will be established in Asia. It will be established wherever there is a considerable power except in the United States.

Editorial of the Day.

THE "MOONSHINER."

[From the Birmingham, Ala., Age-Herald.]

The most picturesque lawbreaker of the south is the "moonshiner," who is sometimes referred to in his more peaceful avocations as a "Hill Billy." Statistics recently compiled show that the "moonshiner" is not on the decline, and efforts to stamp him out have proved abortive. Although revenue officers continue active from year to year and federal judges sentence long lines of such offenders to the penitentiary as regularly as the terms of court roll around, the business continues to flourish and as soon as a mountaineer serves his sentence he goes back and starts another "still."

The mental attitude of the "moonshiner" has often been commented on and is generally understood. He sees no reason why he should pay the government a tax on whisky he makes himself, out of his own corn, and with such apparatus as he may have at hand. Furthermore, his conscience does not reproach him for selling the liquor without a license after he has made it. With the exception of his "moonshining" proclivities and a habit of "potting" unfriendly neighbors in the feud district, the illicit distiller may be a model citizen. So far as he, or any member of his family, or any neighbor is concerned, the fact that he has a "still" somewhere is no reflection on his character and he can occupy a prominent seat at church.

There are also economic reasons why a mountaineer persistently converts his corn into whisky at the risk of his life. His corn is usually grown on poor land and is inferior in quality. Besides, he would have to haul his corn a long distance over rough roads before finding a purchaser, even at a low price. The temptation to "concentrate" his product and make what to him is an enormous profit is not easily resisted, so as fast as one "still" is destroyed another springs up to replace it.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

LORD NEWTON, appointed to the post of paymaster general in Premier Asquith's newly reorganized administration, has sometimes been described as the Labouchere of the house of lords, owing to the sparkle, the unconventionality, and the breeziness of his clever speeches. It was he who immortalized his friend Lord Rosebery by describing him as "a sort of political prima donna." On this side of the Atlantic he is particularly known as the biographer of his former chief, Lord Lyons, England's representative at Washington during the civil war and afterwards ambassador at Paris.

Lord Newton, although only the second peer of his line, is head of the ancient and very wealthy house of Legh, in Lancashire, which has been in possession of its estate of Lyme park in that county since the reign of Edward I. Indeed, the bedstead on which Edward the Black Prince slept when he stayed at Lyme as the guest of Sir Peter Legh, who distinguished himself at the battle of Poictiers, figures among the relics of the place; while the bedstead, used in turn by Queen Elizabeth, Mary, Queen of Scots, Charles I., and James II. when visiting Lyme, still form part of the furniture of the mansion.

Lord Newton was for a time in the diplomatic service, stationed at Paris and Berne. He is a clever writer and a popular member of the Jockey club; also a great favorite at court.

That he has any very lofty idea of the value of the house of lords would not appear from his utterances. For he once described it as "infinitely the most good natured and long suffering assembly in existence—a place where the biggest bore might die without ever discovering that he was anything but the most acceptable speaker in the house."

On another occasion he stigmatized it as "a sort of hybrid between a registry office and a debating society."

Lord Newton also has to his credit the sensational assertion in the house of lords that one of the members of that gilded chamber was the owner of what was probably the leading professional usury concern in London.

He made it during the course of the debate on his bill compelling usurers to disclose their real as well as their professional name. He added that when the bill became law it might possibly afford consolation to some unfortunate young man who is being bled to the tune of 150 per cent to discover that instead of paying this exorbitant interest to some Semite plebeian he was really in debt to some patrician of distinguished and ancient lineage, in fact to a hereditary legislator and peer of the realm.

Dunrobin castle, which has just been almost entirely destroyed by fire, is the principal Scottish home of the Duke of Sutherland and has been in the uninterrupted possession of his family for over 700 years. In fact, it was the oldest secular building inhabited and used by the same family, in all Scotland. It was erected by the Earl Robin of Sutherland on the hill which still bears his name, "dun" being the Gaelic for "hill," and there are in existence a number of letters, written in 1401, by the sixth Earl of Sutherland and dated from Dunrobin.

It was this sixth earl who figures so extensively in "Froissart's Chronicles," which bear tribute to his military prowesses.

He married Margaret, sister of King Robert Bruce. Pope Clement, on the occasion of their wedding, sent a special blessing from Avignon to the bride and bridegroom, expressing at the same time the hope that their union "might prove an immediate remedy to the murders, forays, burnings, and depredations which cease not to happen in Scotland." Castle and gardens at Dunrobin retained until the other day plenty of traces of this Princess Margaret, who was also Countess of Sutherland.

About seventy years ago the castle was subjected to a restoration by the second duke, which was perfect in its way. Not a bit of the old castle was removed or destroyed, the restoration consisting in additions of a very extensive character, in perfect keeping with the existing structure.

Queen Victoria, describing her visit there, pays in her "Leaves From the Journal of Our Life in the Highlands" an eloquent tribute to "its fine, imposing appearance, with its very high roof and turrets, a mixture of an old Scotch castle and of a French chateau"; while Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe devoted an entire article in the "Atlantic Monthly" to Dunrobin and to that Duchess of Sutherland who was its restorer, in which the authoress of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" tells charming stories of her sojourn at the castle in 1856.

Until the beginning of the nineteenth century the rule of the earls of Sutherland, not only over their clan but also over the entire county of Sutherland, which belonged to them, was supreme. The great-grandmother of the present duke, sole heiress of the ancient family of Sutherland, and who married Lord Stafford, subsequently created first Duke of Sutherland, insisted on retaining the old time gallows on Gallows hill, near by the castle, just by way of reminding her people that as their chieftainess she possessed powers of life and death over them.

As is only natural with a castle so long owned without interruption by a family, it was full of treasures of art and history, of interesting relics of King Robert Bruce, of Mary, Queen of Scots, of the old and of the young pretenders, of English rulers, of popes, and of famous Scottish and foreign statesmen.

The rooms where the archives of the Sutherlands, going back for over 700 years, were preserved constituted a mine of wealth alike to the historical student and to the novelist and playwright. For the Sutherlands contributed more than their fair share to the romance and drama which figure so extensively in the annals of the northern kingdom of George V.

At the time of writing it is too early to know what has been saved. But it is to be feared that much will have been destroyed in the flames that is simply irreplaceable and that the losses caused by the fire are irreparable.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

THYROID MALADIES.

LYING on the front of the trachea, or breathing tube, just below the Adam's apple and just above the breastbone, lies one of the most important organs in the body. It is located just under the skin and therefore is easily felt. It is known as the thyroid gland.

The painters and sculptors knew of it in the earlier days of art, for the old Grecian statues and pictures show it plainly; yet the physicians were slow in discovering it. The first medical man to recognize definitely disease in the thyroid was Paracelsus, who wrote on goiter and cretinism about 1500.

The reason for the tardiness with which knowledge of the thyroid has grown is that it is a ductless gland. Its secretion is absorbed directly into the blood stream. The peculiarity which made this gland secretion of the very greatest importance served to hold back knowledge of it. It was not possible to tap a duct, gather the secretion and analyze it, as can be done with the secretion of the duct glands.

Paracelsus, the Swiss scientist of the sixteenth century, was deprived of one of his glands having a ductless gland function. In consequence his skin was smooth and his face grew no beard.

Possibly he had some thyroid disease when he was young, for it is said that he was rickety. Possibly the bony changes of rickets are due to the effects of poor food and poor air acting through some of the ductless glands.

Robinson says, compared to Paracelsus, "the magpie is shy and the peacock modest." Be that as it may, Paracelsus recognized that the thyroid was an important organ.

The thyroid gland weighs from one to two ounces. It is about two inches long, three quarters of an inch broad and an inch thick at the thickest part. Shaped like a pair of old fashioned saddle bags, it lies across the windpipe. The two main bodies, called lobes, rest on the sides of the windpipe, and they are joined by a band of thyroid tissue, called the isthmus, lying on the front of the windpipe.

In the ordinary person the edge of the thyroid is about three-quarters of an inch above the top of the breastbone. In some people some part of the thyroid is behind the breastbone in the upper portion of the chest.

The secretion of the thyroid cells is poured into microscopic cysts or tanks, and from these it is absorbed by the blood. If the amount of thyroid secretion is just enough and not too much the work of the body is liable to go along about right.

The thyroid is the master gland. More than any other gland it governs the work of other glands. The other organs are tied rather narrowly to their accustomed tasks. The thyroid has special tasks and in addition it has some capacity to help out with the tasks of other glands.

If there be a general infection the thyroid is liable to swell. Indigestion causes it to enlarge. It enlarges during menstruation. Some pelvic troubles in women cause it to swell.

If there be very much of an excess of thyroid secretion the heart beats too rapidly and is irregular; there is a tremor in the hands, and the breathing is shallow. The change in the mental state is very striking. There is great nervousness, excitability and general on-edge-ness.

If there is too little thyroid secretion absorbed, the pulse is slow and strong; the skin is thick and dry, and the hair is lifeless. The mind is dull.

The amount of thyroid substance absorption has a great deal to do with size and weight. Children with thyroid deficiency are small. Dr. Hertoghe dwarfed small animals by removing their thyroids in their early youth. He caused dwarfed animals to grow larger by the use of thyroid.

Children with an excess of thyroid are nervous and learn and grow rapidly.

As people approach the meridian of life, the thyroid begins to show the effects of its great activity during the earlier years. The pathologist says that there is an overgrowth of the framework of the organ, the interstitial tissue—a sign of wear.

The person says he is getting bald; is taking on weight; is less aggressive mentally, and that his judgment is better. The physician puts together the testimony from the two sources and says that the thyroid is secreting less.

When the thyroid oversecretion is enough to bring the condition into the realm of disease the name given is hyperthyroidism, or too much thyroid. If the thyroid is enlarged, the condition is called goiter. There can be goiter without the on-edge-ness due to hyperthyroidism. There can be hyperthyroidism without any goiter.

If the absorption of thyroid secretion is too small in amount, the condition is called hypothyroidism. If the deficiency is very great the condition is known as cretinism. A less marked stage is called myxœdema. If the amount of secretion is still nearer normal, the condition is known as partial myxœdema.

In cretinism the gland is very small, and the amount of secretion is almost at the zero point. In consequence none of the life processes goes right. The subjects are somewhat dwarfed in body and very much dwarfed in mind.

Cretins are such by inheritance. In fact, heredity is a prominent factor in both goiter and cretinism. Of cretinism, the Sardinian commission reported: "Sometimes cretins are born to cretinous parents. Sometimes the children of such parents have no more than a disposition toward cretinism."

In a considerable group of people there is a temporary condition known as partial myxœdema. In others this condition of slight hypothyroidism is persistent. French described six groups of people who suffer from partial myxœdema as follows:

"1. Certain infants who without being true cretins, present symptoms of idiocy.

"2. Certain backward children between 2 and 5 years of age showing various symptoms, of which the two most familiar are slowness in learning to talk and delay in learning to walk.

"3. Growing boys and girls suffering either from general mental backwardness or a persistence of the habit of wetting the bed at night.

"4. Certain stout, sterile women of the child bearing age.

"5. Certain females at or about the menopause who have rapidly become too stout.

"6. Sufferers from certain nerve affections which closely resemble and are frequently called neurasthenia and tic douloureux."

There is no better way to discover that a given condition is the result of too little thyroid than giving thyroid for a while and noting the effect.

If the physician who is observing the case notes that the symptom is disappearing he is justified in feeling fairly sure that hypothyroidism was the underlying cause. For instance, if a child is noted to be months behind in walking or talking, there is evidence enough to warrant a trial of thyroid; or if a boy wets the bed years after he should have stopped.

Belladonna, worm medicine, and scores of other remedies have been tried in vain, for none of them is worth anything for bed wetting. Thyroid, under proper control, is worth a trial.

An idea of another type of thyroidism can be had from a description of a case given by Dr. Barton in the Journal of the American Medical association.

A woman 44 years of age, the mother of three children, noticed that she could not comfortably put on her shoes or her gloves. Her feet and hands would swell and stay swollen for a while, then the swelling would go down. Examination of the urine showed that she did not have Bright's disease. This came on slowly and lasted for four years.

Then she noticed that she was getting stout; her mouth was feverish; she felt cold when others did not, and her hands and feet would "go to sleep" easily—in fact, they had that feeling most of the time. Her skin was dry, glossy, and rough, and she never perspired. She had pains in her legs, especially when she went up and down stairs.

In time her gait became very wabbly. Her memory became poor, she spoke slowly, and was disposed to cry a good deal.

Her lips thickened a little and her tongue swelled. One consequence of this trouble with her lips and tongue was that her speech got a little thick. For instance, she pronounced s as sh.

From her speech, her gait, and her mental impairment the neighbors got the idea that she was mildly intoxicated most of the time.

Finally she went to a doctor and had a thorough examination made. He found a stout woman whose weight had recently increased from 170 to 189. The lips and tongue were thick and stiff. There was enough of the appearance of dropsy in the skin to blot out the lines which ordinarily give expression to the face. At the same time there was no typical dropsy.

She said she sat at a window for hours at a time, aimlessly looking out. Her mind was clear, but there was no snap to it. Her speech was thick. Her pronunciation was a mild imitation of that of the stage drunk.

Dr. Barton decided that she was not suffering from Bright's disease. The near dropsy in the face and legs was suspicious, but there were no albumin or casts in the urine. He decided that she was suffering from partial myxœdema.

He gave her two grains of thyroid extract three times a day. Her pains kept up for several days. Then she had flashes like a woman passing through the change of life.

Then her disagreeable symptoms began to clear up, and within a few weeks she was a well woman again. That is to say, she was well in so far as her symptoms were concerned. Her thyroid deficiency was permanent. At her time of life that could never be cured.

After she had got over her symptoms her dose of thyroid was reduced to one two grain tablet a day. That dose she will probably be compelled to keep up until her other organs have grown as old in structure as her thyroid is. She may be able to leave it off when she gets to be an old woman, but not before.

Of the six groups outlined by French those in Nos. 4 and 5, having begun thyroid, will probably need to continue it for many years. The members of 2 and 3, being young, should only take thyroid long enough to get well started toward cure. The elasticity of youth ought to bring them out and should be given a chance to.

The members of group No. 1 will need to take thyroid longer than those in groups 2 and 3. How long will depend upon how near they are to being cretins. The members of group 6 must be guided by the circumstances of the individual case.

In those days when the only variety of hypothyroidism known was cretinism thyroid, deficiency was thought to be a very rare condition in this part of the world. Then came knowledge of the milder condition, myxœdema, but still the condition was regarded as rare. Then came knowledge of partial myxœdema.

Now it is known that a minus thyroid condition may complicate almost any disease condition. It may cause various kinds of aches and pains, various kinds of mental disturbance, and various symptoms that appear in other diseases, but which are the result of lack of thyroid. A few days of thyroid treatment may unravel more than one puzzling case.

Fortunately, the discovery of the remedy preceded the full knowledge of the disease. Thyroid extract bears much the same relation to this disease that quinine does to malaria or antitoxin to diphtheria.

PUBLIC MEETING FOR PAVING ALLEY.

Chicago, June 21.—[To the Friend of the People.]—What is the situation with respect to paving the alley between Sixtieth and Sixty-first streets, Vernon and Eberhart avenues? I understand that the alley has been on record for paving since June, 1913. All the property owners are willing to pay for this improvement and want the work started as quickly as possible.

FREDERICK WELLS,
6000 Eberhart avenue.

The matter of the paving of the alley in the block between Sixtieth and Sixty-first streets, Vernon and Eberhart avenues will come up at a public hearing to be held on Friday, June 25, 1915, at 2 o'clock p. m. The property owners of record fronting on the proposed improvement have been duly notified of the hearing.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

WILL NOT PAVE ALLEY THIS YEAR.

Chicago, June 22.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if it is possible to have the alley between Montrose avenue, Junior terrace, Hazel avenue, and Vista terrace paced this summer.

C. T. LUNDSTROM,
853 Montrose avenue.

We have ordered an estimate of cost on the paving of the alley in the block between Montrose avenue, Junior terrace, Hazel avenue, and Vista terrace, but there is no chance that the improvement will be made before next year.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

PAVE BISHOP STREET THIS YEAR.

Chicago, June 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is it true that Bishop street, between Seventy-ninth and Eighty-first streets, will be paved this summer?

N. SWANSTROM,
8034 Bishop street.

Bishop street, between Seventy-ninth and Eighty-first streets, will be paved with asphalt this year. We are about to advertise for ids, on the work.

EDWARD J. GLACKIN, Secretary.

MUST PAY DOG LICENSE.

Chicago, June 22.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please inform me if I am obliged to pay a license on a dog which I keep at all times on my own property and never allow it to go on the public streets.

H. T. WILSON,
1521 North Harding avenue.

The owner of a dog is required to pay the license fee if such dog is kept anywhere within the city of Chicago. The fact that it is not taken on the streets does not exempt the owner from paying the fee.

CHARLES J. FORSBERG, City Collector.

A JAPANESE PROTESTS.

Chicago, June 23.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. Oscar King Davis' articles on the Chinese-Japanese negotiations, extending over two months, caused all Japanese disgust because of their injustice to Japan. He apparently wrote his articles from the Chinese standpoint alone, merely to attack Japan, and I believe he made out his case pretty well. His strong, malicious effort to put Japan in the rogues' gallery, interpreting perniciously the provisions of the pending treaty in their worst angle, could easily be seen by any impartial mind. He inquires minutely and repeatedly into the motives of every little statement made by the Japanese, officially or unofficially, even words said in passing among insignificant officials, always adding to it a sarcastic comment that such statements or utterances were purported to deceive the whole world, American public in particular. I can pick 100 of these cases and can point out where his malicious fallacy crept in had I been allowed sufficient space.

It is a case of malice aforethought pure and simple. If he did not entertain such a vicious preconception, I should like to ask why THE TRIBUNE allows him to run these ex parte articles without prefixing each article that Mr. Davis was presenting the Chinese and German side of the case, and not as the disinterested third person seeking after truth. When I come to think how great will be the effect of these articles in a great newspaper like THE TRIBUNE to the deception of an innocent public, though unwilling, my unbounded fear would overcome my already prostrated heart.

A JAPANESE READER.

CONFINE AND CURE THE MEN.

Chicago, June 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It was with great indignation I read that a law had been passed "making immoral women subject to one year's imprisonment for the purpose of curing contagious diseases." The men who gave them these contagious diseases are not confined in jail a year so they may be cured of contagious diseases. No, they are allowed freedom and opportunity to infect other "unfortunates!" And when you shut up the already diseased and depraved women you diminish the supply which must be recruited by white slavery, so the evil is made worse.

Equally bad public policy is the confining of betrayed girls till after the birth of their children. Who is going to pay for all this care and privacy? Make the fathers who have danced pay the fiddler. Make each man support his own children, whether married or unmarri

Repeal the law making prevention of conception a felony. Make it reprehensi ble for a man to have more childre than he can decently support.

NOT MISLED BY NEWSPAP

Chicago, June 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Mr. J. S. Perry, like Jerome K. Frank, wishes to inform us "that our president is wrong on submarine warfa and that the newspapers have misl him." It is quite strange to "learn" that a man of President Wilson's standi would be "misled" by newspapers. Doubtless Mr. Perry has failed to these words, which appeared on TRIBUNE's main page at the time the Lus tania sank. "First find out if you're righ then move." President Wilson acted a cordingly, not on the request of papers, but by the advice of his cabin and state department. Immediately aft the sinking of the Lusitania the presiden ordered an investigation and not by t newspapers, either.

"Will it be time enough to back the president when we are actually in war?" There is no reason under the sun why w should not be his firm supporters in an cident that may arise.

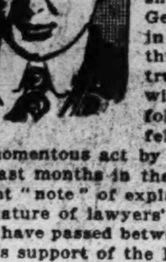
WHY ITALY ENTERED THE WAR

By Robert Herrick.



VENICE, May 28.—With the guns thundering a few miles to the north on the southerly slopes of the Alps, with the wounded already being brought here from the battlefields of Friuli, and almost nightly attacks by Austrian aeroplanes, it would seem to make little difference why Italy went to war—why after nine months of deliberation and hesitation she chose to intervene in the European conflict against her former allies instead of maintaining a safe neutrality with what small compensations she might have extracted from Austria with the aid of Germany. And yet for one who has watched this nation in the throes of her great decision, for all who sympathize with Italy, it is important to get as close to the truth of the causes as is possible in a matter so mixed with old and new passions. The government of Italy, following the example of the other warring nations, has felt the obligation of responsibility before the world for its momentous act by publishing some of the diplomatic correspondence of the last months in the "green book," followed by a far more explicit and cogent "note" of explanation to the powers. Both of these naturally are in the nature of lawyers' pleas, are exasperatingly silent on many things that must have passed between the diplomats (concerning Germany's insistence on Italy's support of the Belgian outrage, for example), and at the best merely account the surface reasons for the final act. The object of diplomacy is to present surfaces, to find pretexts, to hide realities from the common eye. Some of the reasons that influenced Italy to break with her former allies and declare war on Austria seem to me more vital than the story set forth in the "green book," or the "note"; even at this late day they are worth considering.

To dispose first of the diplomatic and technical case of ITALY VS. AUSTRIA ET AL., it is undeniably true that Austria, when she sent her insolent ultimatum to Serbia last July without notifying her southern ally in advance of her intended action, violated the first article of the triple alliance treaty. Italy might then and there have "renounced" the treaty and taken up arms in defense of Serbia, which would have placed her where she is now, beside the allies. The reasons why she did not take this simple course are of a political and practical nature. Giolitti, who was then in power, was not only friendly to the triple alliance (as he has amply proved since by his advice to take what Austria offered and maintain the alliance), but also had so starved the army—some say by misappropriation of funds—that the country was in no state to make war. All that Italy could do at the time when the storm broke was to refuse to coöperate with her Teutonic allies in an unjustified war of aggression, in whose inception she had no voice—and this she did. Further, the Giolitti ministry gave way to a government that more nearly represented the ideas of the country, and the new government proceeded to put the army in a state at least of adequate defense—an elaborate and expensive equipment justified by the disturbed condition of the world. This took time—all of nine months.

Austria in attacking Serbia violated another article of the treaty of the triple alliance—the seventh—under which compensations to Italy are due for the upsetting of the status quo in the Balkans. Such an interpretation of the seventh article Austria has denied, also her intention to retain any Serbian territory. This latter must be taken for what it is worth, which under the circumstances is nothing. In order to protect Italy from the aggression of any neighbors on the Dalmatian coast and in the north, Baron Sonino opened the discussions with Austria on the subject of "compensations." To the uninformed all this displomatic process has seemed a simple "holding up of Austria" in her difficulties by Italy, a trading on the situation "to get something." It was more decent than that, more reasonable and more necessary. If we grant that self-protection is the first law of nations, as of individuals, then Italy's demands for Austrian territory were not only justifiable but urgent. And here enters the strategic side of the case.

IT is difficult for Americans with their thousands of miles of open frontiers to understand the European fear of invasion, the vital importance of a defensible frontier. Living as we do in comparative security, with aggression a rather academic question unless we ourselves are the aggressors, we cannot appreciate what it means to have hostile neighbors, who do not live according to the sermon on the mount, within a few hours' march of one's home. To understand Italy's position on the Adriatic, Americans should be in Venice at this hour in expectation of an Austrian attack. Triest and Pola are not much farther away than is Milwaukee from Chicago, and the whole Dalmatian coast is a network of waterways and islands admirably adapted to conceal and protect enemies, and the Italian coast is poor in harbors for a modern navy. Further, a glance at the map will show that Italy's northern frontier from the Italian lakes to Triest was made for her by her enemies so that it might be easy to attack and hard to defend. Austria holds all the lofty mountain positions, Italy the exposed valley places. Proof of this disadvantage will not be long wanting, alas! now that the Italian armies are fighting their way up the Alpine slopes against well fortified Austrian positions. It is said that the winning of the Trentino will take 150,000 lives per month—for how many months?

But why, the American may ask, with his imperturbable sense of security, not be content with the old frontier which has served for nearly fifty years without any infraction on the part of Austria? Why not trust the Austrian wolf a little longer, especially now that he has his belly full? The only "trust" in the European world today is in one's own ability to defend what one has, to take what one wants. Austria, after her descent on Serbia without warning to Italy, is surely not to be trusted to respect the present frontiers when she is in a position of advantage. If Italy had waited, with faith in the triple alliance as protection, she might have been another Belgium, and however heroic the story of Belgium it is naturally one that no nation desires to emulate. Every Italian believes—I think rightly—that Germany and Austria, if successful in the present war—and their chances of victory are greater than one likes to believe in America—would soon turn their attention to Italy.

Thus the diplomatic, the technical, the strategic side of Italy's case is far stronger than it might seem on the surface. Of course, if international agreements were universally respected, if mankind was ready to live according to the beatitudes, there would be no excuse for such suspicion and precaution, such foresight for the preponderating influence in the Balkans and on the Adriatic. But the one truth that this calamitous war should teach the most simple minded American observer is that men, European men, have today no intention whatsoever of living according to the beatitudes, or by any other system than that of the biologic law of survival. Admitting all this, it would still be impossible to conclude that Italy went to war for the "compensations" which Austria stupidly refused to grant. Nations hardly rouse themselves to the white fury of making war for the sake of a good strategic frontier, however necessary in the present state of international ethics that may be.

HERE we leave the realm of diplomacy, with its unpleasant atmosphere of selfish, even sordid, bargaining, and enter the more profoundly interesting realm of national passions, which are honester and cleaner. How were the passions of Italy roused to the pitch of war in face of the awful spectacle of slaughter and ruin before her eyes for nine long months? It should not be forgotten that in August—indeed, until very recently—Italians were by no means united for war. The "neutralistas" seemed to have the best of it until the last month. The one tremendous force working in the minds of all Italians during these nine expectant months has been the ideal of nationality. The sense of growing nationality has been Italy's heritage from those brave men who made a single kingdom of the peninsula.

The ideal has been nourished by the "irredentists," who kept alive the fact that to Italy belonged the Italian provinces adjacent on the north and northeast. Latterly the hope of recovering these lost lands has seemed remote. But the European war, awakening marvelously the spirit of nationality all over the world, once more made this a vital issue for every Italian. "Italy redeemed—Trent, Triest, Istria, they are ours by rights—they shall come back to us! A million or more of our brothers in blood are under the Austrian bondage, their men serving in the Austrian armies, their language and customs and nationality being eradicated by the hateful Austrian conqueror—they are calling to us to save them!" How much reality there is in the irredentist case it is useless to inquire. It has been a great factor in the present situation. But the new "resurrection" of the nationalist ideal is something greater than the will to get back a few lost provinces; it is a consciousness of national life, a human, almost religious, rendering of that biologic law of survival!

"Eviva una grande e pura Italy!" cried the poet D'Annunzio to the impassioned multitude that drank his words as the words of a new prophet. And D'Annunzio has been for Italy the speaking voice of this new nationalism. He returned from his five years' exile in Paris just at the critical moment of this crisis, when Italians had to decide whether they would accept forever their position of underlings to Austria and Germany, or make the mighty effort with the sacrifices to become a greater, stronger nation. "We do not wish to be a hotel, a museum for the nation!" the poet cried scornfully, and awoke in every young Italian an answering scorn. In the blood of these people, it must be remembered, lie the proudest memories any people ever had, and to this historical sense, extraordinarily alive even in the man on the street, the poet appealed. Standing in the Campodolgio, he spoke of the glories of Rome and prophesied a new Italy.

This passion of nationalism now running throughout Europe is something higher and nobler than a mere lust for conquest of other peoples. It is all the vital religion the world seems to have, a passion for the ideal, for the good of the race, faith and belief and love in the mother race. And like all good religions it teaches the sacrifice of the individual. The youth must give his life, the mother her child, the father both, in order that the nation, that is the whole, may live more safely, more grandly, and that the peculiarly national ideals may be preserved and grow to become the ideals of the whole world.

That is what drove Italy into the great war, far more than the desire for Trent and Triest. Indeed, it was rumored at the last moment that Austria was ready to yield all that Italy had asked. It was too late! Italy had found what she wanted. It was not a bit of land, but the vindication of herself as a nation.

Of course, all national ideals are mixed with many elements. One of the irritating daily elements of wounded nationalism has been an uneasy sense that Germany was gradually owning Italy in a financial way, exploiting Italy for the benefit of German stockholders, running her banks, her industries, her commerce. Just as France found out the deep hold that Germany had on her business life, so Italy realized how much she was in the hands of the Teuton. It has taken her nine months to untangle the threads of her commercial dependence upon Germany and Austria.

THIS growing control by the Teuton would have been more endurable if Italians liked the Germans, but they never have. The temperaments are unsympathetic. It was obviously impossible for Italy to fight with her allies of the triple alliance against France. I do not mean that the blood relation between the Latin countries is so close, but the spiritual relationship in feelings and ideals is close. And the German conduct of the war, it is needless to say, has emphasized more and more the antagonism between Italy and her former allies.

The rape of Belgium, which, as a member of the triple alliance, Italy would have had to indorse; the submarine assassinations, the German atrocities which Italians commonly believe to be true, all helped to put Italy with her present allies on the other side of the deep gulf that is dividing all mankind. It can be truthfully said that the turn in the tide of popular feeling in Italy from a reluctant acceptance of the war as a necessary evil, inevitable, into an ardent, clamorous desire for war, came with the sinking of the Lusitania. That last act of brutal stupidity by the Germans inflamed Italians extraordinarily, gave the final touch of disgust and hate, without which no war fever can gain a people.

So, as I see it, Italy is today fighting the battle of civilization side by side with her new allies, with mixed motives and passions, of which the greatest is a mighty sense of nationalism, that must be realized in sacrifice, but not least of which is a profound abhorrence of the Teuton, as revealed during the last nine months. She has put her all at risk—for Germany and Austria will take an awful vengeance if they can—not for a few miles of Italian territory, not for a good frontier, nor for a sentiment, but in order that she may realize herself as a nation, and take her part in molding the destiny of the world, which God forbid should be Teutonic. Every American, who all these long ten months has watched anxiously and powerlessly from afar for the cause of decency and civilization to prevail, should admire the courage and the idealism of Italy in breaking the bonds that bound her to the German arms and bravely casting in her fate with the better side—whose prospects at this date are none too bright!

A FRENCH VIEW OF THE KAISER.

By Paul Hervier.

[Translated from La Revue Novelle.]

WILLIAM II., calculating egoist, monopolist, and seer, is also a good bluffer. He loves to throw dust in the eyes; he must dazzle, amuse, be much talked about. The means of publicity matters not at all just so he gains his desired end. He distorts and mutilates the truth, pursues relentlessly those whom he wishes to conquer.

A friend who knew the great portrait painter, W. P. Frith, related the following anecdote: William was quite young when one day he was taken to the painter's studio. He suddenly discovered that no one was paying any attention to him. He stole off to a corner and there, behind a curtain, calmly proceeded to hatch out his little plot. He wanted to be different! He daubed his face all over with every color he could find. When not a splotch of white skin remained, he rushed out into the middle of the studio, letting out a regular war whoop. All of a sudden he stopped, his heart pounding with pride. They had noticed him. He had produced the desired effect.

Dr. Revilliod of the medical faculty at Geneva has described one of William's luxurious headquarters. It is at Charleville, in the Corneau house, which was brought up to his majesty's standards by infringing on the neighboring property. When he is there it becomes a citadel of splendor—an army of automobiles, of white cuirasseurs, of hussars of death, of generals, ministers, ambassadors, footmen, pêle mêle. There are Turks, pages, Hungarian foot soldiers, horses kept constantly saddled, trains under steam, a complicated network of telephone and telegraph wires, mirrors searching the horizon, antennæ feeling the atmospheric waves. On the near by roofs machine guns are turned toward the heavens to protect against the great redoubtable flying birds; when night comes powerful projectors search the clouds with their luminous brushes, and for further prudence behind three lines of trenches a retreat is prepared, still more remote.

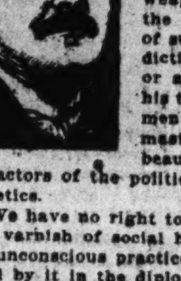
But one need not seek far to find a contrasting state of affairs. William was wont to visit a diplomat of a neutral power, and the latter declares that a deep sadness reigns at the Prussian court. No more receptions, no more 5 o'clock teas! The number of servants has been reduced to a minimum. This diplomat adds that the effect of the general depression is making itself felt at court.

DIPLOMATIC EUPHEMISMS

By Edward Goldbeck.



A DIPLOMATIST was asked by a lady what nonintervention meant. He answered: "O, it means the same as intervention." Talleyrand, the protagonist of the old diplomatic school, chuckled that language was made to hide our ideas. Disraeli advised a disciple never to forget that humanity is governed by words. If we squeeze out the quintessence of these aphorisms we find the conviction of diplomats to be that words mean nothing at all in themselves, that they must be used as tactical weapons, and that it is immensely important to study the use of these weapons. It is a natural consequence of such ideas that the diplomats should have invented a dictionary of their own. Just as you cannot read Hegel or any other opaque philosopher without dipping into his terminology at first, you cannot understand the documents exchanged by the foreign offices if you have not mastered their euphemisms. What is a euphemism? A beautiful word for a nasty action, a mask, a make-up. The actors of the political stage feel that they cannot dispense with such cosmetics.

We have no right to blame them, as we all wear what Bismarck called "the varnish of social hypocrisy." Only the diplomats have developed the half unconscious practice of daily life into an elaborate system. Nobody is duped by it in the diplomatic set itself and the initiated wink in the time honored augurian way when they throw these confetti of sweet and fragrant phrases at each other; but there are millions of plain worded and honest minded people in every country who read the "communiqués," the notes, and sometimes even the text of the treaties, and gullible and easily pleased as they are, swallow it all with a benign smile. But, when you have read diplomatic documents for a certain time, you come to know that their importance lies not in what they say but in what they omit. (Schiller has said: "Was er uns weise verschweigt, zeigt uns den Meister des Stils" —the master of style shows in what he wisely suppresses.) However, when these tactics are not available, the diplomat throws a veil over the facts, partly to hide, partly to embellish them with the delicate tracery of his words.

THERE are some phrases which have lived for centuries. One of the most felicitous inventions was the slogan of the "equilibrium." Metternich, the Austrian prime minister of the beginning of the nineteenth century, found this word, which combines suggestiveness with elasticity. He took it from the French king, Henry IV., who said of himself, "I fight against the universal spider" ("Je combats l'araignée universelle"), picturesquely designating the Roman-German empire. It worked so well because by the "conservation of the equilibrium" everybody meant something else and meant the same, i. e., the conservation and prevalence of himself.

The vaguer a word is, the greater its chance of becoming a favorite in the diplomatic diction. At first the statesmen talked about the European equilibrium, then the word was extended to the Mediterranean, then to East Asia, and during the next years—allow me this prophecy!—we shall hear a good deal about the equilibrium in the Pacific. If we translate the pedantic word from the sibylline diplomatic language into colloquialism, French people would say, "Ote-toi que je m'y mette!" Germans, "Nun aber raus!" and Americans, "Beat it!" The moment that the equilibrium is invoked the expert knows that one of the great powers wants to rob a smaller one, and that another power refuses to consent to this robbery unless it will get an adequate "compensation," which, of course, has to be taken from another weak power. Not by force, for heaven's sake! That would be a very ugly proceeding, but the great power may obtain a "lease," a lease for ninety-nine years. The only difference with the usual form of the lease in private life is that the stronger power will not pay anything to the weaker one.

Napoleon I. was great at this sort of thing. He told every nation against which he waged war that he had undertaken this campaign only to deliver it, and he did not even lie, because he delivered the nations from their legitimate rulers to subject them to himself. Napoleon III., his nephew, learned this art of juggling with phrases from his great relative and model; he stabilized the right of the nations to choose their own ruler and arranged plebiscites in which he falsified public opinion unscrupulously and skillfully.

It is astonishing to see how unselfish all the powers are. They only act from humanitarian motives. In 1900 the Russians occupied several towns in Manchuria. The Chinese government protested. The Russians answered that Manchuria was agitated, but they did not explain whether the invasion was a consequence of the agitation or the agitation a consequence of the invasion. The czar published an ukase in which he stated that his aim was "elimination of everything which might lead up to a dismemberment of the Celestial empire" and promised that his troops would evacuate Manchuria "as soon as order would be reëstablished, supposing that the attitude of other powers would not make it impossible." But when, after the treaty of Peking, the other powers withdrew their troops from China, Russia kept her regiments in Manchuria and even increased their number. Only after the conclusion of the English-Japanese treaty on April 8, 1902, did Russia promise China definitely to evacuate Manchuria within eighteen months.

Everybody knows how often England has solemnly proclaimed her intention of leaving Egypt to her own destinies as soon as England's task of civilizing and developing the country was performed. This unfulfilled promise was a sore point in England's not oversensitive conscience which France touched very often until in April, 1904, both countries came to an understanding about Egypt and Morocco. In this case it must be acknowledged that England really rendered great services to Egypt, but the diplomatic methods cannot be justified by this consideration.

IN article III. of the English-Japanese treaty of London (Aug. 12, 1905) we find an excellent sample of euphemistic diplomatical jargon. The article runs: "As Japan has prevalent political, military, and economical interests in Corea, the British government concedes to her the right of taking in Corea such measures of leading, supervising, and protecting as she may deem fit and necessary to defend and foster her own interests, supposing that these measures do not contravene the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations."

These few words delivered Corea to Japan, and a few years later the independent country became a Japanese province. The "open door" was closed with a bang. It is worth mentioning that a few weeks ago Japan extorted from China the right of "supervising, protecting, and guiding," and that the terms of this recent understanding were almost identical with those we find in the article of the quoted treaty between England and Japan. Just as in this treaty both powers proclaimed that they had "no aggressive tendencies against China or Corea," Japan now assures the world that she only wants to preserve China's integrity. The only thing which puzzles me is that there are still people credulous enough to listen seriously to this sort of talk when it comes from Japanese statesmen and naïve enough to repeat it to their countrymen, as if it really offered a guarantee of peace.

The same character of fake is adherent to the conferences or congresses. On Jan. 17, 1906, the famous conference of Algeciras was opened by the Duke of Almodovar, the Spanish minister of foreign affairs. In his opening speech he solemnly emphasized "the principle of the sovereignty of the sultan, the integrity of his states, and the equality of the nations with regard to commerce." He said the conference should aim at "reciprocal respect of reciprocal interests and the sincere endeavor to harmonize these interests with the sovereignty of the sultan and the integrity of his empire." While he was pronouncing these words, he as well as the French and British representatives were in possession of secret treaties which abolished the integrity of the sultan, divided Morocco between France and Spain, and made any commercial equality impossible.

In the text of the treaty between England and France (April 8, 1904) about Egypt and Morocco, France said that it did not intend to change the political condition of Morocco, while England conceded to France, as the next neighbor of Morocco, the right "to watch over the quiet of this country and to give it her assistance for all administrative, economical, financial, and military reforms." (It is almost the same formula with which England delivered Corea to Japan.) This treaty was published, but at the same time both powers agreed about a second and secret treaty which was not published until November, 1911. In article III. of this agreement the possibility is discussed that the sultan "would no longer have any authority in his country." In this case Spain was to get certain territories at the coast (so that France would not be able to threaten Gibraltar, for the friend of today may be the enemy of tomorrow), and France would swallow the rest. Of course, it was not very difficult to ruin the authority of the sultan and so to create the conditions considered necessary for the action of France. But the representatives of France, England, and Spain signed the Algeciras document, pledging their governments solemnly for the sovereignty of the sultan, the integrity of his dominions and liberty of trade without any inequality, while they stuck to their secret treaties and were firmly resolved to annihilate the Algeciras decisions.

BISMARCK said when he was a young diplomat that he spoke the truth and that nobody believed him, because his colleagues could not imagine for a moment that such a thing might happen. In June, 1862, he has dinner with Disraeli, then leader of the opposition. After dinner he says to him: "I shall be forced very soon to accept the position of prime minister. My first care will be to reorganize the army, with or without the help of the parliament. Then I shall take the first pretext for declaring war to Austria, I shall smash the German confederation, subjugate the smaller German states, and unite Germany under Prussian leadership. I came here to tell this to the ministers of her majesty."

The hearers probably thought that he was not accustomed to old port, but Disraeli said: "Take care of that man! He means what he says."

This system explains that the present war could not be avoided, although probably not one of the rulers, not one of the leading men, really wanted it. One single word gives us the thread of Ariadne and leads us safely through the psychological labyrinth; it is, suspicion. Austria received Serbia's meek answer to the ultimatum, but did not believe her assurances because she suspected that Russia would instigate Serbia to new offenses. She promised, however, not to annex Serbian territory after the war, but Russia did not trust her and mobilized. William asked the czar what the mobilization meant and the czar answered that it was only a partial mobilization. William was convinced that the czar had lied and declared war. He assured England that he would respect Belgium's and even France's integrity if he were victorious, but Sir Edward Grey thought that he might forget his promise and went into war. Suspicion is a snowflake which grows into an avalanche.

We have heard lately that the period of "force" is over and that the period of "persuasion" begins. But you cannot persuade another man who, while milk and honey are flowing from your lips, thinks that you want to "do" him and considers how he can get the best of you.

The Man Who Knows "The Truth"

By Laurette Taylor.

MISS LAURETTE TAYLOR

LONDON.—If it were not for the fact that I can ease my conscience by telling myself that these are epoch marking times and that therefore ordinary conventions may be rightly disregarded, I should not set about telling this story.

It was told me in confidence.

And I can respect that confidence to the extent of keeping my informant's name undivulged. That in itself is a pity, because if I named him there would be no question in anyone's mind that he is the one man in all England who is in a position to know "the truth."

Lord Northcliffe and his Daily Mail are responsible for those quotation marks. For weeks now his newspaper has been daily telling its readers that "The Truth Will Out"—referring to the charge that British troops are being needlessly slaughtered because their artillery has insufficient ammunition. But the truth is altogether different.

The important feature of my informant's summary of existing conditions is his contradiction, unequivocal and carefully expounded, that England, after eleven months of war is in a bad way.

"Let us admit," he said to me, "that there is a marked change in the attitude of the people and of the press since the first of the year. But let us be sure we know what this change means. At the outset of the war we were faced with the necessity of obliterating all conflicting interests in a common unity. For six months we succeeded in suppressing every attempt to deviate from this fixed determination. We kept smothered all old political dissensions.

"But now we have finally come to a realization of the cost of victory. Its staggering amount has at the same time sobered us and given cause for outspoken criticism of conditions which do not measure up to the standard which muct be attained if we are to be able to pay the cost—it has in no sense diminished our faith in our ability to improve these conditions.

"All this growing, pessimistic criticism really means is that Englishmen, after six months of unity, are beginning to revert to type—and are indulging once more in their characteristic industry of stirring each other up. Herein lies the reason for these published warnings against the number of uninterned Germans, the increasing number of suspicious fires, the inadequate output of munitions, the urgent need of conscription. It is not to be viewed with alarm. It is a healthy sign. The results will prove it. We are seriously pledged to the last man and the last shilling. Whatever the cost we must make good that pledge.

"Until now we have been in the war, but not under the war. Even now we are not under the war, as France and Russia and Serbia and Belgium are under the war. But we are beginning to appreciate the inexpressible horrors the war has brought to Europe and to appreciate the need of our responding to the calls made upon us on a scale that could not have been conceivable in any human mind until ten months of the workings of the German military machine had forced the conception upon us.

"Germany has proclaimed that this is a life and death struggle. We don't proclaim it; we know it. When the Germans overwhelmed us with their great superiority of artillery fire at the battle of Mons, we had no comment to make. At Neuve Chappelle, after we had pulverized the enemy with our artillery fire, the Germans declared there had never been known in the history of the world anything comparable to the blasting devastation our 300 guns on less than two miles of front wrought in their defences. Again we made no comment. But the fact remains that not one of those 300 guns exisited when the battle of Mons was fought.

"The truth, then, is not that we have muddled the problem of making munitions. We have simply and naturally and honestly underrated the amount of munitions that were necessary for a successful prosecution of our task. We have always known in a general way that a naval war was one of the workshop. Perhaps the greatest lesson this war has taught us is that land operations are no less won in the workshop. This is the outstanding lesson of the first ten months of the struggle—the supreme importance of the industrial side of war. We know now there must be an army of labor behind the army in the field. And it is this knowledge that has given rise to our sudden interest in existing conditions among the workers at home.

"Onlookers ought not to forget that for the first six months we were fairly busy creating an army of soldiers. This army now numbers 3,000,000 men in various stages of training. I believe its creation stands unparalleled in the world's history. Lord Kitchener is satisfied with this army. He has said so. As to the times and ways of putting the new armies successively in the field he puzzles the Germans and puzzles ourselves.

"As against the most brutal methods known since the dark ages, we have tried to conduct our affairs as scrupulously in accordance with the laws of humanity and decent warfare as we have known how. We are engaged in crushing German aims. If anywhere any one thinks that England can be intimidated by German threats or practices let them be set right. We have already lived through three phases of German bugaboos. We have waited a long time for the materialisation of the monster guns which were to bombard Canterbury cathedral from the continent. We have waited as long for the trail of ruin visiting Zeppelins were to blast through London. We have waited patiently for the submarine 'blockade' to accomplish some reasonable part of its declared purpose to starve our cities, stop our transports, and paralyze our merchant shipping.

"German violation of all the usages that have wisely mitigated the barbarities of war have been not only crimes but blunders. From the invasion of Belgium to the campaign of sea murder Germany has only aroused the allies to greater and greater energy and confirmed their union.

"And if England, up to now, has fallen short of her very utmost effort—and in so doing has stirred into new activity all the old hostilities of inveterate critics—those who know the truth know that now, as always, England's might is beginning to be drawn upon at a time when others' resources have been drained to the last drop."

Of course, I am no strategist—when it comes to warfare. I am first of all a woman, and then an actress—with eight performances a week to keep me out of mischief and out of 'isms. But for all that I should be a rank ignoramus if I could not gather from this man, who knows, the fact that children ten generations removed from the Englishmen who are fighting in the trenches today will still be singing their national anthem long after Prussianism has gone to its final rest.

And just one last thing.

Of all reasons in the world, what do you suppose is the true reason Gen. French has sent word to London for more shells? To listen to some of these English critics of the government you would think all the working men in England were on one continuous holiday. But that is not the truth at all.

The reason Englishmen in the trenches in Flanders haven't had the artillery support they needed is largely due to the fact that England has been sending shells to Russia and Serbia—not to mention the Belgians and French! And the queer part is that among the men who know there is nothing worth mentioning in this. England ought to furnish their allies with shells. That is the way they feel about it. And they won't be satisfied until they can do this—and still have enough left over to supply their own men as well.

"It is Unfair"

The following editorial, unmistakably from the pen of Lord Northcliffe himself, recently appeared in the London Daily Mail, one of Lord Northcliffe's many publications:

It is unfair that, after nearly a year of warfare, our men should have been slaughtered because they had the wrong kind of shells.

It is unfair that, as Earl Stanhope reported in the House of Lords, our troops in Flanders and Gallipoli should be fighting machine guns with rifles.

It is unfair that payments should be made to recruiting sergeants for the enlistment of married men, while most parts of the country are full of young shirkers, who take the married men's jobs.

It is unfair that while the so-called voluntary system has practically denuded some parts of the country of the male population, other districts should be full of recruitable men of the right age.

It is unfair that Government Departments are restricting enlistment while private employers, at great expense, are encouraging their men to join the Army.

It is unfair for Local Councils to employ laborers for odd jobs like tarring the roads when farmers want laborers to take in the hay harvest.

It is unfair that, for want of compulsory powers, a comparatively few idle workers should delay the war and blacken the fair fame of the British mechanic all over the world.

It is unfair that our great cities should be at the mercy of uninterned Germans, who would certainly join their countrymen in the event of invasion.

It is unfair that while British prisoners in Germany are in a state of semi-starvation, German prisoners in England should be treated so well.

It is unfair to let Germany import cotton through neutral countries for the purpose of making explosives to kill our men.

It is unfair for selfish people to eat veal and lamb which could be grown into beef and mutton for the hard times that are coming.

It is unfair to the men at the fronts, who have been killed and wounded at the rate of 2,000 daily, that the great war machine at home should move so slowly.

It is unfair that while one Cabinet Minister is making heroic efforts to insure the production of the right kind of shells, the optimistic speeches of another Cabinet Minister should be allowed to lull the public into a false sense of security.

WHEAT FUTURES HAVE SETBACK

Strong Cables Fail to Sustain Prices; Country Sales Are Moderate.

First prices of the day were the highest of the session in wheat. The strong cables from Liverpool, reports of continued droughty conditions in western Europe, and predictions for showers in the southwest over Sunday caused shorts a little anxiety early. Later the weakness in coarse grains and lack of outside buying support took the edge off the market and prices reacted, closing ⅜@⅝c lower.

Liverpool spot wheat was unchanged to 1d higher. Millers in the United Kingdom are said to be absorbing wheat on a large scale and continental supplies are reported light, while the continued dry weather is a bull influence abroad. Indian wheat cargoes were held at a higher range, and the spot and cargo markets generally were strong.

More Showers Are Forecast.

Weather conditions for the most part were favorable and the recent rains in the southwest have not caused great damage, according to most reports, although harvest has been delayed to some extent. In western Canada there were quite heavy rains, but in our northwest it was clear and warm. Reports during the day indicated fine weather in most sections. Country sales of wheat are not increasing to any great extent, and there is a good demand for old wheat, No. 2 hard being in demand here, while offerings were light, with holders asking higher premiums. In store prices for No. 2 hard were 16@17c over July, and a car sold on track at 18c over. St. Louis had quite a fair run of new wheat, the demand for which was reported light. Spring wheat reports continue favorable, only a few complaints being heard.

Receipts were 9 cars, with 7 cars inspected yesterday. Primary arrivals were 250,000 bu, and for the week they were 2,985,000 bu, compared to 1,903,000 bu a year ago. Northwest receipts for the day were 108 cars; last year, 134 cars. Winnipeg had 46 cars, against 264 cars a year ago. Clearances for the day were 375,000 bu.

Plate Corn Offered Freely.

Corn was affected by reports from New York claiming Plate corn was being offered on a cheap basis in parcel lots, with eastern dealers taking hold freely. The demand here was slow and prices were ⅜c to 1⅜c lower. A feature was the strength in July compared to the other months. The difference between September and July at one time was 1⅜c, compared to ½c difference the previous day. Cash houses were credited with buying the July. Wagner and Bartell were free sellers of the September and December. The December was the weakest delivery. Cables were unchanged.

The spot demand abroad is fair. Receipts were 115 cars, with 112 cars inspected yesterday. Primary arrivals were 516,000 bu, against 495,000 bu a year ago, and for the week were 3,765,000 bu, compared to 3,346,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 176,000 bu. Parcels of Plate corn were reported offered at ½c to 1c under Chicago September, c. i. f. New York. Cash sales were 200,000 bu.

Oats Show Heavy Tone.

Oats followed the lead of corn and there was considerable selling, headed by Wagner and commission houses. Bartlett-Frazier and Tietgens were early buyers. Cash sales were 115,000 bu. Spot prices were unchanged to ¼c lower, and futures were ⅛c to ½@⅝c lower. Clearances were quite liberal at 477,000 bu. Crop reports continue liberal. In parts of Texas good yields are reported where thrashing has started. In central Illinois oats cutting will start between July 5 and July 10. Primary receipts for the week were 2,899,000 bu, compared to 3,704,000 bu a year ago. Local arrivals were 89 cars, with 77 cars inspected yesterday.

Provisions Close Weak.

Hog products were easy. Prices were affected by the weakness in grains, and by the lack of outside demand. Steever, Cross-Roy-Saunders, and Logan-Bryan were sellers of pork. Hately was credited with selling. Receipts were 11,000 hogs, with 30,000 for Monday, and 135,000 for the coming week. Prices at the yards were a little easier. Western receipts of hogs for the week were 494,000, against 444,000 a year ago.

Rye Quiet and Steady.

Rye was quiet and unchanged. No. 2 was quoted $1.17 nominal. No. 2 new rye for Aug. 15 shipment sold at 93c. Receipts, 1 car.

Barley steady. Malting sold at 70c, feed 67½@68½c, and screenings 66c. Receipts were 26 cars.

Timothy seed firm. September sold at $7.60 and October closed $7.35 asked. Country lots, $5.50@7.00 nominal. Clover seed unchanged. Country lots, $8.50@13.25 nominal.

Duluth flax closed 1¼@1⅝c higher, with cash on track and July $1.72¼, September $1.75¾, and October $1.76¾. Receipts, 3 cars. Minneapolis was 1⅝c higher, with cash on track $1.70¼@1.71¼. Receipts were 10 cars. Winnipeg closed 1¼@1⅝c higher. July, $1.51¼; October, $1.56. Receipts, 6 cars.

J. V. FARWELL CO. REVIEW.

The John V. Farwell company weekly review of the wholesale dry goods trade, says:

"Notwithstanding the unseasonable weather, white goods sales are running ahead of last season and retailers have cut into their white goods stocks to a large extent. The large increase in white goods business is partly due to the dye situation and also the growing popularity each summer of white garments. White lace cloths and seed voiles lead in the white goods line with white piques, suitings, lawns, gabardines, and knweaves fabrics selling freely. White silks—especially messalines and white corduroy and golfine fabrics are active.

"For early fall black and white effects in wool dress goods are in large demand. Wool remains firm at the high prices prevailing. The demand in England for wool to be used in the manufacture of military cloth is greatly in excess of supply. Advance glove business for fall is good, especially the canvas glove line."

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

John Inglis wired Logan-Bryan from Colby, Kas.: "Extreme western counties, Scott City, Winona to Colby, stand and general appearance good only from bloom to water. Ossosionally fields approaching mills show heads covering, indicating imperfect filling. Farmers doping for grasshoppers. Not much damage yet."

J. A. Edwards & Co had the following from Mineral, Ill.: "Corn is looking better here with a few warm days, but acreage very small—much abandoned and all more or less thin stand. This neighborhood is all excited this morning, with farmers coming in from all directions with tales of army worm. One piece of ninety acres of rye and several pieces of wheat, corn, and oats are infested. Area affected covers several miles both ways, and they tell us it is getting larger fast—two pieces of corn an done of rye are reported all gone. We do not know how much this will amount to, but suppose it depends on weather somewhat. They are talking of plowing up fields and also burning to get rid of them."

George Le Count wired Finley Barrell as follows from McPherson, Kas.: "Recent storm caused much additional damage to this crop. Harvest is in progress in the Kaw valley and much is a total loss there as result of storm. From Topeka here wheat is turning yellow. All fields examined today show wheat maturing favorably. Quality not so good as last year, but will be satisfactory. Harvest should be general here next week. Black rust not a factor in this territory. Saw many fields here that will easily make 25 bushels. Think this district will average 15. Corn very late and uneven. Oats are fine everywhere."

C. H. Gibson had a letter from R. G. Brandt, a New York grain broker, saying that the chief feature in the east at present is the freer offerings of Argentine corn. It is estimated about 1,000,000 to 1,250,000 bu Plate corn has been bought recently. The Plate corn is now being offered in parcel lots for the first time and local trade at New York is consequently taking hold more freely. The corn is being sold in parcels at ¼@1c under Chicago September, c. i. f., new bags included. In the same letter it was predicted there would be a good demand for new oats.

Ware-Leland had the following from Fergus Falls, Minn.: "The prospects for wheat crop are good here for this time of the year. We have had an awful wet, cold, backward season, that is, speaking of May and June, but all of the small grain looks well."

"The corn prospects are about the poorest that I ever saw them for this time of the year in this part of the country. There possibly is time enough yet to get a corn crop, but I feel sure the weather will have to be very favorable, as there is surely no time to spare."

Orthwein-Machette company of Kansas City wired: "In connection Kansas report it should be borne in mind that the acreage is estimated upon a certain number of counties making state's average, that the compiled data is now almost two weeks old. Heavy damage since is not considered, that average yield is arrived at by including last year's wonderful yield and that about 30,000,000 bu of last year's reported crop has never been made manifest in receipts, shipments, flour, or consumption, and is certainly not in farmers' hands."

Cash wheat prices were firm yesterday and No. 2 hard in store was quoted 16@17c over July, and a car on track sold at 18c premium over the July. The demand here was only fair, but offerings were light and the undertone is firm. Outside cash markets generally were firm relative to the futures. Kansas City reported but little wheat bought to arrive and local receivers said there was no increase in country sales to arrive. The local sales were only 12,000 bu.

Cash corn and oats here were unchanged to ¼c lower. The firmness in the July corn was reflected in a good call for corn, and offerings were light. Kansas City reported a better shipping call for corn. Acceptances of bids in the country were small of both corn and oats. Sales from here were 200,000 bu corn and 115,000 bu oats.

Joseph A. Mannear and Thomas W. Carter Jr. made application for membership on the board of trade, while George D. Hokins and Ferdidand A. Fritze posted memberships for transfer.

Estimated receipts for Monday: Wheat, 7 cars; corn, 112 cars; oats, 77 cars; rye, 1 car; barley, 36 cars; hogs, 30,000 head. Hogs for all next week, 135,000 head.

Claims of black rust reported 100 miles from Minneapolis prove on investigation to be unwarranted, the infection turning out to be red rust.

Minneapolis reported 50,000 bu No. 1 and No. 2 northern wheat worked to the east via Duluth.

New York exporters reported a slow call fo both wheat and oats. There was less Argentine corn reported offered.

B. W. Snow's agent at Venus, Tex., wired thrashing of wheat had started, with yields of 15 to 30 bu per acre, and oats 40 to 75 bu.

Minneapolis reported No. 1 northern blue stem 15c over July. Low grades slow sale. Flour sales were fair.

Practically all the arrivals at St. Louis were new wheat, for which the demand was reported slow.

Wheat is about 90 per cent cut in St. Louis county, Mo.

Only one load of prime offerings reached the top price of $7.92½, while the bulk sold at $7.60@7.85. Packers and shippers were good buyers at the prices and the market closed cleaned up, with packers taking 10,800 and shippers 1,500. Pigs sold on a firm basis, reaching $7.25@7.50 for selected lots.

Final prices left hogs practically unchanged from a week ago, but the big bulk of the 138,000 head received here this week sold at advanced prices and the average figure for the week was raised to $7.70, the highest recorded since last October and compared with an average of $7.45 the preceding week ago. A year ago hogs averaged at $8.30. Pigs closed mostly 25c higher than a week ago.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 5,500; Swift & Co., 1,200; Sulzberger & Sons, 1,000; Morris & Co., 700; Anglo-American, 600; Hammond, 800; Boyd-Lunham, 300; Roberts & Oake, 700; Western Packing company, 570; Miller & Hart, 100; Independent Packing company, 200; Brennan Packing company, 800; butchers, 400; shippers, 1,500; toal, 12,300.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values showed a downward tendency at the close of the week, but still retained part of a gain made earlier in the period. Final prices were 15c higher than a week ago for the bulk of the steers. Most of the week's supply, however, cleared at an advance of 15@50c from last week's values, and the average for six days showed a substantial gain, while the top price, at $9.70, was 25c higher than the previous week's extreme. Cows and heifers came in for a more urgent demand than for several weeks and closed at a net gain of 25@50c, with intermediate grades at the big end of the appreciation. Canners and bulls also showed an advance of 25c, while calves were up 25@50c.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 102,500, against 103,200 the preceding week, 102,700 a year ago, and 113,600 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 2,851,000, against 2,760,000 the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Sheep and lamb values finished the week at the high point, showing gains of 50@75c for the bulk, while spring lambs in many instances were quotable 85c higher than a week ago. With marketings of range sheep and lambs, receipts for the week made a substantial increase, but shipping orders were more than correspondingly enlarged and local requirements were of a more urgent character. Competition between buyers was aggressive and values worked steadily upward, topping at $10.60 for spring lambs and $6.85 for range wethers. Advices received indicate light marketings of ovine stock at all western markets and much more satisfactory conditions than for some time in the eastern dressed mutton trade. The expectancy here is that appreciated values will be fully maintained and further gains probably recorded.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, June 26.—Money and discount rates were steady today. The stock market was all war loan. The old issue eased off on sales to exchange for the new loan. The other sections had no support whatever and were weak, with the exception of American Marconi shares, which improved to 13s on American buying. Diamond shares were flat. The transactions in the American section consisted principally of sales which shaded values a fraction under parity. The closing was steady. Bar silver, 23 1-16d per ounce. Money, 1½ per cent. Discount, short bills, 4¼ per cent. Three months, 4¼ per cent.

SUGAR.

CHICAGO, June 26.—SUGAR—The following prices were quoted by wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $7.47; powdered, standard, $6.38; eastern granulated, $6.28; beet granulated, $6.18; extra C, $6.02; canary, $5.77.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, June 26.—Finished cotton goods continued quiet and steady today. Higher quotations were asked on linens for late delivery by Belfast manufacturers. Burlaps were in good demand.

Big Cheese Shipment Spoiled.

PLYMOUTH, Wis., June 26.—Twenty-five tons of cheese was destroyed today when a car on the Sheboygan County Cheese federation's siding left the rails and went into a ditch full of muddy water. The cheese was valued at 13 cents a pound.

Great Northern.

H. E. S., Moline, Ill.—The Great Northern railway has been showing a severe loss in gross earnings this year, but the loss has been more than offset by economies, so that the net earnings are showing a safe margin over dividend requirements. More than half the saving in expense is from a cut in maintenance cost. James J. Hill says this is not an expenditure deferred but a real saving, due partly to the absence of heavy storms last winter and partly to the fact that much repair work was done in the early spring, when labor was cheapest. The road earned just under 9 per cent in the year ended June 30 last, and reports to the end of March indicate that 9 and a fraction will be shown at the close of this fiscal year. The Great Northern has a relatively small bonded debt, giving its stock a stronger position than that of most railways. The Northern Pacific and Great Northern jointly own nearly all the stock of the Burlington. They could pay some of the Burlington's large surplus earnings into their own treasuries, in the form of dividends, if they deemed it advisable. In any event, the equity in the Burlington gives strength and added value to the shares of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific.

Mutual Film.

C. O. S., Milwaukee, Wis.—The Mutual Film company is one of the three large film exchanges which at present have a practical monopoly of the business of buying films from producing companies and selling the same to theaters. It has been paying 1 per cent dividends monthly for some time. There are no figures available as to its earnings or condition. The fact that the stock sells on a basis to make the income yield nearly 18 per cent may be taken as a sure indication that people familiar with the company's affairs do not think its future entirely assured.

Virginia-Carolina.

G. W. C., Wheaton, Ill.—The Virginia-Carolina Chemical company has paid dividends at various rates on its common stock, the average being about 2.4 per cent. It paid 1½ per cent in 1913 and none since. Full preferred dividends of 8 per cent a year were paid through 1914. The January, 1915, dividend was deferred and in May a scrip dividend of 4 per cent was declared in satisfaction of the first two quarterly dividends of 1915. The common stock is speculative. It has risen in price because the position of the company has improved in the last few months.

BANKS' RESERVE SHOWS DECREASE

Change Due to Gain of $32,248,000 in Deposits; Stewart-Warner Stock Active.

Owing to an increase of $32,248,000 in deposits and a loss in cash of $2,634,000, the surplus reserve of the New York banks dropped below the $200,000,000 mark, the item standing at $193,253,030. The figures also showed a small expansion in loans. They stand at nearly $2,500,000,000. The figures:

ACTUAL BANK STATEMENT.

	June 26, 1915.	Increase.
Loans, etc.	$2,476,297,000	$1,790,000

Of the reserve in vaults, $395,008,000 is specie.

*Decrease.

Stewart-Warner Stock Deal.

Stewart-Warner common was the feature of the local exchange. The trading amounted to about 3,300 shares all, with the exception of two small lots, being taken at 67. The principal buyers were brokers representing White, Weld & Co.

The announcement made here to the effect that J. K. Stewart had sold to a syndicate 40,000 shares of the common stock was confirmed. While still retaining a large interest in the company, Mr. Stewart has parted with control.

Friends of the company assert that earnings are at the rate of 12 per cent on the common stock. One of the underwriters in the purchasing syndicate issued yesterday a circular offering publicly the syndicate stock at 67. This presumably affected the market for the shares on the exchange. The syndicate managers made no offering, but on the contrary were buyers.

Gold Imports $120,000,000.

J. P. Morgan & Co. received another $2,500,000 gold bars from Ottawa, making the total imports by that firm from Ottawa to the present time $55,000,000. Other imports from Canada will bring the total from that source since Jan. 1 up to about $90,000,000.

The total gold engaged for import to New York since the beginning of the year is $119,820,000. By countries the sources of these imports have been as follows:

Canada	$90,645,000	Holland	$2,000,000
France	11,500,000	London	1,050,000
Japan	9,625,000	So. America	1,000,000
China	3,700,000	Denmark	300,000

Terms of British War Loan.

The terms of the British war loan, as cabled from London, show that Great Britain has been obliged to pay a much higher price for funds than it has had to pay in the past. In fact, the high return on investments in the new loan serves to explain the foreign liquidation of securities in our market in the past few days and its influence on the general investment market will be watched with interest.

The subscription list will open on July 10 and payments will be made in installments up to Oct. 31. Full payment may, however, be made on July 20, and subscribers doing so will get the benefit of discount at the rate of 4½ per cent.

The issue will be made at par, but there will be a return commission of ⅛, making the net price 99⅞. The first coupon will be payable on Dec. 1 and will be for a half year. This will represent an additional return of 1¼ to the buyer, practically reducing the price of the bonds to 98⅝.

It is provided that in the event that the government is obliged to pay more than 4½ per cent for future loans, those taking the present loan will receive the benefit of the increased rate.

Curb Fairly Active.

The local unlisted securities market has been fairly active.

Great Lakes Dredge and Dock is wanted at 90, with stock offered at 92. Kellogg Switchboard and Supply company is firm at 318 bid, offered at 323. Oxweld Acetylene sold at 95¼, closing at 94 bid, offered at 96. Sulzberger & Sons preferred is in demand at 90, with light offerings at 91. Deere & Co. preferred has been fairly active between 90 and 91½. Avery company preferred is strong, with 68 bid and limited offerings at 69. The common remains practically unchanged at 31 to 34. Moline Plow preferred is 99 bid, offered at 100.

Inquiry for U. S. Gypsum.

Some inquiry for United States Gypsum preferred is in evidence at 108, with stock offered at 110. Otis Elevator common advanced from sales at 70 to 73, while the preferred improved from 94 to 98. Inland Steel is in demand at 190. It is rather expected that the dividends of 1¾ per cent will be resumed at the meeting July 27, with a possible extra dividend to make up for at least a part of that omitted during the last three quarters. Consumers preferred remains unchanged at 84½ to 85½, with the common 28 bid, offered at 30. Linde Air Products is offered at 170, ex-dividend of 2 per cent. American Chicle common is somewhat weaker, being offered at 144.

British Bonds for Collateral.

According to the Wall Street Journal New York bankers expect there will be a great deal of private borrowing in New York by London interests in the next few months. The London banks will offer as collateral the new 4½ per cent British bonds. The principal will be payable in dollars and the amount of collateral be made to conform to changes in the rate of exchange.

The new plan of accepting British bonds as collateral in accordance with the fluctuations of exchange, appears to meet with approval among New York bankers. The rate on the loan is expected to be around 5 per cent, and one banker is quoted as saying: "We could not ask for any better security than the good faith of the British government. All we were concerned about was whether we might lose on the exchange operation. This plan protects us in this respect."

Bank Share Quotations.

The bank stock market is at a standstill. Offerings are comparatively light. There is a good underlying demand, but buyers do not seem disposed to bid prices up, consequently actual trading is on a limited scale. Reported sales are as follows:

Continental and Commercial National, 272; First National, 478; Austin National, 130; Logan Square Trust and Savings, 106; Garfield State bank, 132.

FINANCIAL NEWS NOTES.

Announcement comes from New York that orders for shrapnel continue to come forward in large volume, with the result that several mills are now asking $33 per ton for shrapnel steel, an advance of $2 from the previous figures. It is also announced that there is a "noticeable change in destination of the greater portion of the shrapnel to leave this port during the next few months."

The Bankers' Trust company of Buffalo is offering an issue of $1,248,000 city of Buffalo 4½ per cent registered serial bonds at prices to yield 4.15 per cent.

The eighth and last blast furnace was placed in operation at the Gary steel plant yesterday morning. Two more open hearth furnaces were placed in operation, making a total of 32, the capacity of the works.

The Greene-Cananea Copper company expects its Sonora, Mexico, mines to be operating at better than 50 per cent of capacity before the middle of July.

It is rumored among holders of the Standard Oil stocks that Galena Signal Oil will increase its dividend in the coming year.

Shareholders of the Toledo Furnace company at their special meeting approved the issuance of $1,500,000 serial 6 per cent bonds. The proceeds will be used to finance the construction of a by-products coke plant.

According to New York advices, the dividend rate on Inland Steel stock will be increased on July 27 to 7 per cent.

On July 1 the subsidiary lines of the Southern Pacific company in Oregon will be taken over and operated by the Southern Pacific. This change will be in accordance with a resolution passed by the stockholders of the Southern Pacific company. The company owns all the stock of the subsidiaries.

DAY IS ACTIVE IN WALL STREET

50,000 Shares of Reading Bought; Stock Rises 3 Points.

Total sales of stocks, 203,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $1,228,000.

New York, June 26.—Strength in investment shares and renewed weakness in secondary railway issues and United States Rubber furnished the opposing movements of today's brief but fairly animated session.

Buying of Reading was the most impressive feature, transactions in that stock aggregating about 50,000 shares, or 25 per cent of the whole, at a maximum gain of 3 points.

Other high grade railway shares were in moderate demand at advances of a point or thereabouts and United States Steel, Amalgamated Copper, and American Smelting, together with a few war specialties, also reflected absorption, some of which probably came from the needs of short interest.

United States Rubber added 3 points to its recent sharp setback, declining to 51½, against 66½ at the week's opening, on persistent reports that the dividend is to be cut, if not entirely passed, at next week's meeting of the directors.

Missouri Pacific responded to unofficial statements outlining the proposed "friendly reorganization" which is said to involve a drastic scaling down of existing issues, by selling at 7, a fraction above its low price of the year. Rock Island, at a decline of 16, measured the precarious state of that property in relation to its probable rehabilitation.

Mercantile paper—3½@3¾. Sterling—60 day bills, 4.7360; demand, 4.7725; cables, 4.7820. Francs—Demand, 5.52½; cables, 5.51½. Marks—Demand, 81⅝; cables, 81⅞. Lires—Demand, 5.98; cables, 5.97½. Rubles—Demand, 38⅝; cables, 38¾. Bar silver—48⅝c. Mexican dollars, 37½c.

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
First Mortgage 6% Gold Bonds

Dated May 1, 1915. Payable serially as below. Interest payable semi-annually May 1 and November 1 at Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago. Callable on any semi-annual interest payment date in the reverse of their numerical order at 101½ and accrued interest. Coupon bonds of $500 and $1,000, registerable as to principal only.

TRUSTEE: CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

MATURITIES:

$20,000 May 1, 1918 | $20,000 May 1, 1921 | $20,000 May 1, 1924 | $20,000 May 1, 1927

60,000 May 1, 1930

We recommend these bonds as a conservative investment for the following reasons:

1. These bonds are the direct obligation of Buck & Rayner, Incorporated, and are secured by a first closed mortgage on the leasehold estate at the southwest corner of State and Adams streets, Chicago, Illinois, fronting approximately 42½ feet on State Street and approximately 100½ feet on Adams Street, together with a modern fifteen-story fireproof office building erected on said estate.
2. The cost of the building erected on the said estate will be at least twice the amount of the outstanding bonds. If the cash cost is less than $600,000, the bond issue will be proportionately reduced by call. The said leasehold estate represents an investment on the part of Buck & Rayner (Inc.) in excess of $140,000.
3. The net earnings of Buck & Rayner, Incorporated, for several years past have several times exceeded the maximum interest requirements of these bonds, and the payment of the principal and interest is assured by such earnings irrespective of any income return on account of the net rental receipts of the building.
4. The financial statement of Buck & Rayner (Inc.), prepared by Ernest Reckitt & Company, Chartered Accountants, as of Feb. 1, 1915, shows net assets of approximately $700,000. The Company owns other valuable leaseholds in Chicago, the actual value of which, in the judgment of the Company, exceeds by a substantial amount the book value at which they are carried in the statement above mentioned.

Having sold a large amount of this issue we offer the unsold portion at par and accrued interest:

THE passage by the legislature of the Hicks bill permitting corporations to own real estate is an exceedingly interesting culmination of a movement which has been earnestly advocated for a number of years by many of the leading real estate brokers and operators of Chicago.

The Chicago real estate board has stood sponsor for several measures seeking to secure this during several sessions of the legislature, but with many limitations and safeguards thrown around it to overcome the long standing prejudice downstate against these corporations.

All its labors, however, had been unavailing, until finally, despairing of securing any results in this direction, it confined its efforts during the session of the recent legislature to securing the passage of a law which would simply permit of the incorporation of real estate agencies, but without any power to own or deal in real estate.

Rockford Owner Gets Bill.

In this it was successful, the bill having been passed practically with little or no opposition and signed by the governor. But while the Chicago board and other Chicago advocates of corporate ownership ignobly failed in their efforts to secure legislative action to this end, a movement, started downstate by the owner of a valuable corner in Rockford who found it difficult to finance its improvement through private means, was successful in reaching the long coveted goal. It is interesting, not to say suggestive, to note that what was a bad thing while it emanated from, and was supposed to affect Chicago property interests, became altogether inoffensive when sponsored by downstate interests.

The Hicks bill, it may be said, has pronounced limitations and safeguards and it also may be said, is generally regarded as a thoroughly meritorious measure, but so were some of the more recent measures pressed by the Chicago board and other Chicago interests, but because they bore the Chicago label they were promptly killed.

Only One Piece Can Be Owned.

Under the terms of the Hicks bill the activities of a corporation are confined to the ownership of one piece of property, not to exceed 80,000 square feet, and the same must be improved within five years with a building, the cost of which must be at least 50 per cent of the value of the freehold. Holding stock in another similar corporation is prohibited.

The measure, while not as broad as many brokers and operators would like to have it, is generally acceptable to the advocates of corporate ownership, by whom it is regarded as a most important forward step in the proper development of the city. As was to be expected, it has encountered sharp opposition from those opposed to corporat ownership, who may prevail upon Gov. Dunne to veto it, but it has the unqualified support of many of the leading brokers and property owners of the city.

Same Result by Another Method.

As a matter of fact, Chicago is now securing through the trust agreement method practically the same results as by the proposed corporation plan, but there are objectionable features in connection with the former which would be obviated by the proposed law, particularly financing and responsibility features.

Harrison B. Riley, president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, accompanied his emphatic indorsement of the proposed law with the statement:

"If I am for the bill everybody ought to be, as it will mean the loss of thousands of dollars to us annually through taking title for syndicates. The presen law unquestionably has retarded property development, and the proposed law will not only work a great benefit in this direction, but will also give the small investor opportunities for high class investments which are now denied him under present conditions."

Help to Small Investors.

Henry G. Zander, chairman of the legislative committee of the Chicago real estate board, asserts the proposed law will as a matter of fact help the small investors more than the large ones and will be a potent factor in the outside development of the city.

"It is comparatively easy," he said, "to form a trust agreement in the downtown district, but difficult in the outlying parts of the city and the law will be of great benefit there."

Edgar M. Snow, who favors the proposed law, thus enumerates some of the advantages of corporate ownership:

"In corporate holdings, the question of dower rights and many other matters seriously affecting the title are not involved as in individual ownership, nor do judgments against the individual stockholders affect the title to the real estate.

"The holdings of individual investors in the stock of owning corporations are easily and inexpensively transferred.

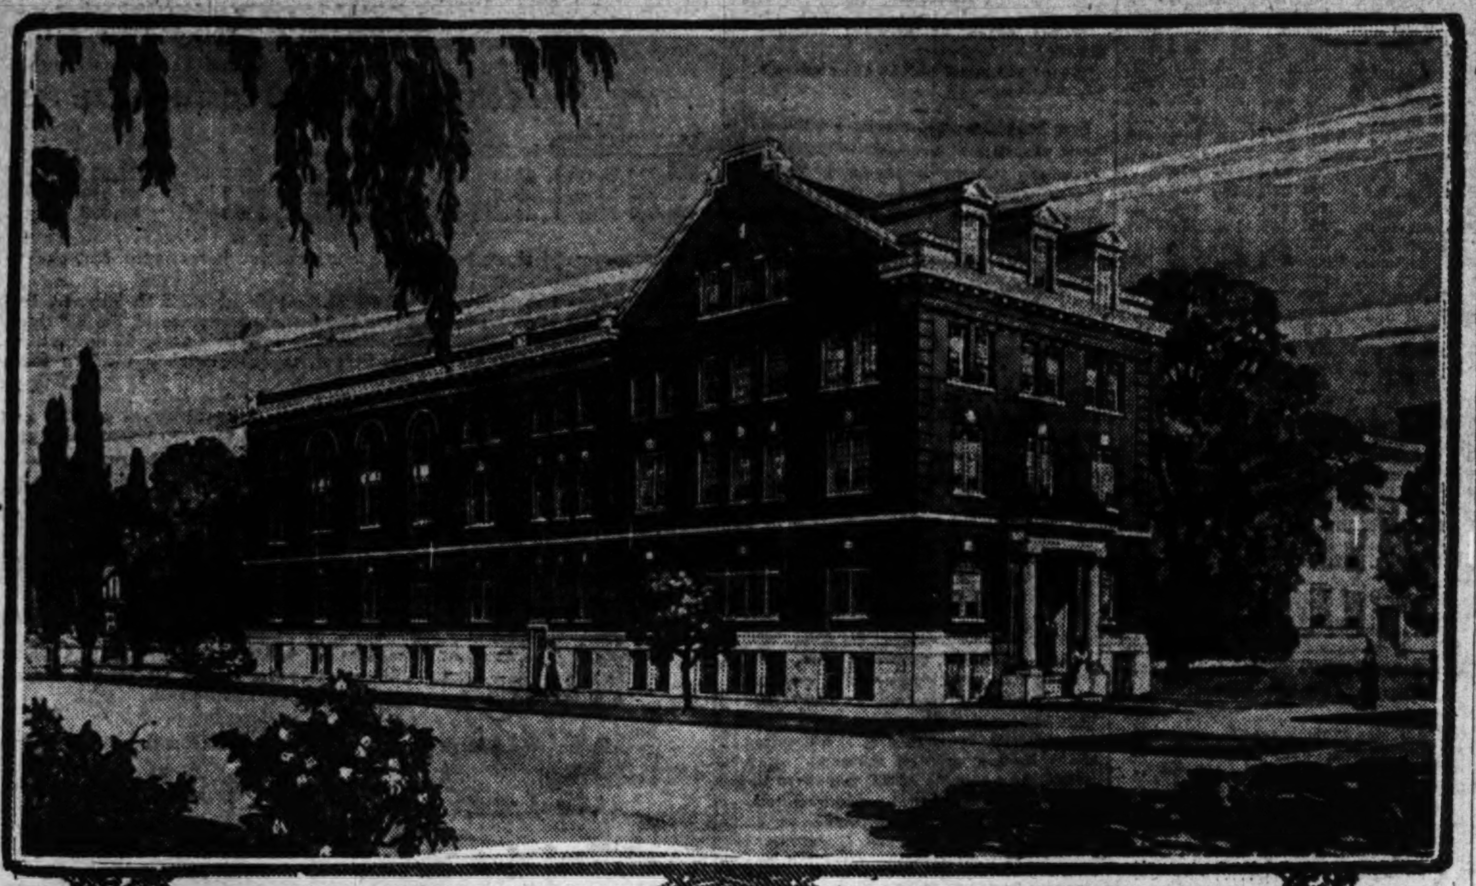
"With corporate ownership the title to the real estate is not tied up for a year, as is the case in individual ownership for administration following death.

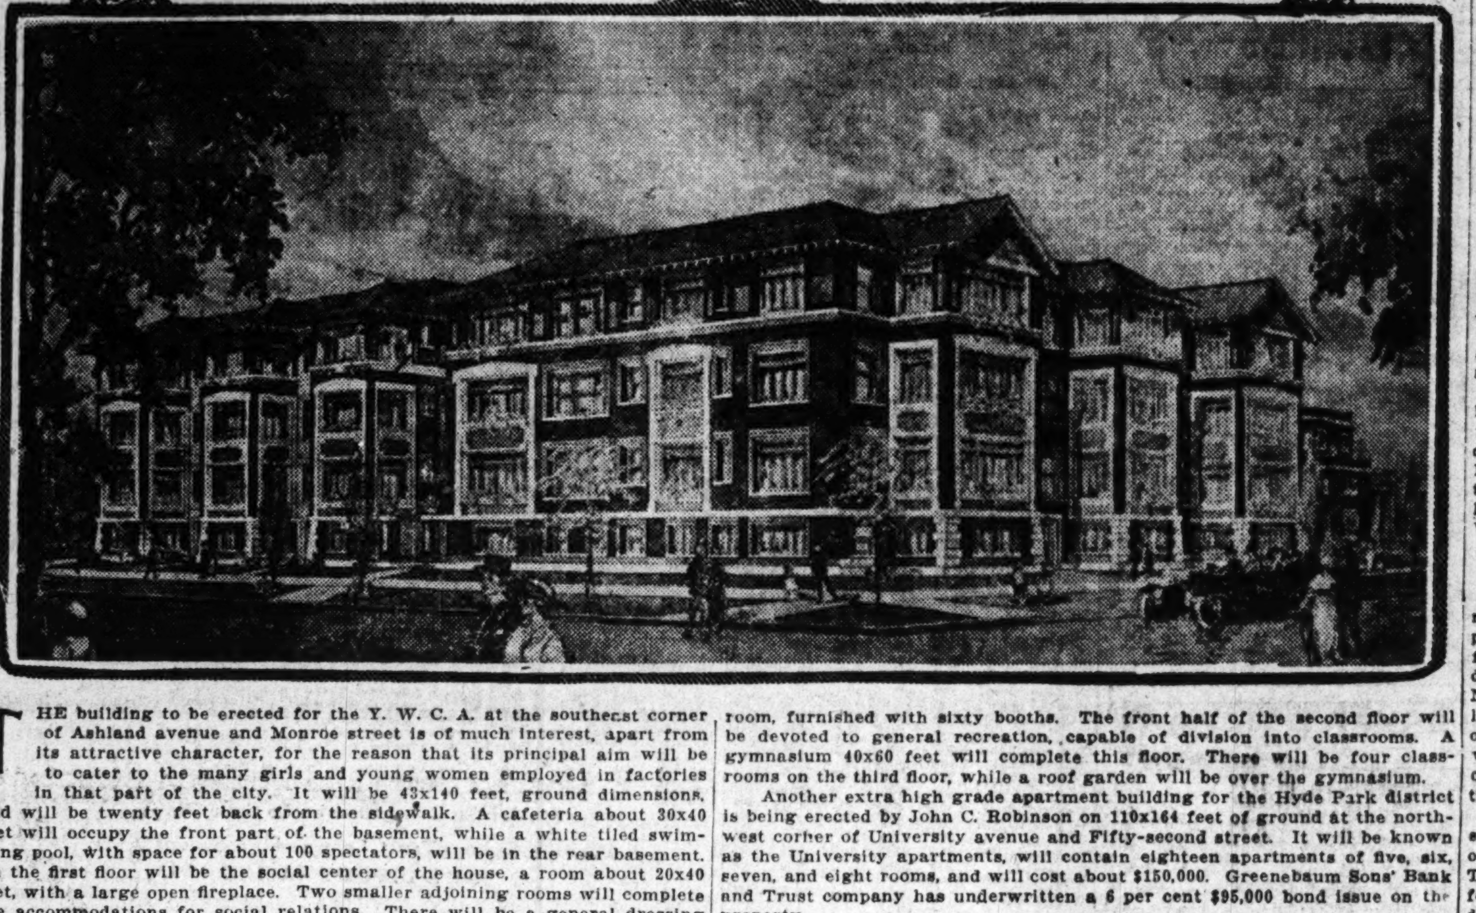
"Real estate corporately owned can easily be sold or mortgaged, is not subject to the delays and inconveniences incident to death or absence, as in individual ownership."

Albert L. Strauss, a recognized authority on downtown real estate, said:

"I heartily approve of the measure, believing it will make for a broader and better market and should contribute toward a greater stability of values."

New Home for Young Women; High Grade Flat to Go Up





THE building to be erected for the Y. W. C. A. at the southeast corner of Ashland avenue and Monroe street is of much interest, apart from its attractive character, for the reason that its principal aim will be to cater to the many girls and young women employed in factories in that part of the city. It will be 43x140 feet, ground dimensions, and will be twenty feet back from the sidewalk. A cafeteria about 30x40 feet will occupy the front part of the basement, while a white tiled swimming pool, with space for about 100 spectators, will be in the rear basement. On the first floor will be the social center of the house, a room about 20x40 feet, with a large open fireplace. Two smaller adjoining rooms will complete the accommodations for social relations. There will be a general dressing room, furnished with sixty booths. The front half of the second floor will be devoted to general recreation, capable of division into classrooms. A gymnasium 40x60 feet will complete this floor. There will be four classrooms on the third floor, while a roof garden will be over the gymnasium.

Another extra high grade apartment building for the Hyde Park district is being erected by John C. Robinson on 110x164 feet of ground at the northwest corner of University avenue and Fifty-second street. It will be known as the University apartments, will contain eighteen apartments of five, six, seven, and eight rooms, and will cost about $150,000. Greenebaum Sons' Bank and Trust company has underwritten a 6 per cent $95,000 bond issue on the property.

Subdividers Report 'Good Stuff' Active.

Favorable reports are being made by subdividers, particularly those who have been making an aggressive advertising campaign and who are offering thoroughly good stuff to the public. The latter is becoming more and more discriminating, and passes by unnoticed the crude subdivisions which two or three years ago were sure to secure their attention.

Of much interest is the announcement by William H. Britigan, manager of Marquette Manor, of the final sale of lots in that subdivision. It ends one of the most interesting sales of subdivision property that has occurred in recent years. Some of the corners are held at sensationally high prices, and it is said lots have changed hands on Sixty-third street at an advance of over 100 per cent on the prices paid for them. Mr. Britigan assumed the management of this property in November, and since that time is said to have sold approximately $1,500,000 worth of property. His closing sale is set for July 5, but it is thought all the lots may be sold before that date.

H. O. Stone & Co. are offering the balance of the Mont Clare subdivision at Grand avenue and Seventy-second avenue. In the five years that Stone & Co. have been operating at this point they have sold seventeen subdivisions, totaling practically 7,000 lots. It is claimed that the new Hillcrest subdivision now being offered is eighty feet above Lake Michigan and is one of the highest points in or around Chicago.

McIntosh Bros. are offering the balance of their property on Irving Park boulevard at the intersection of Sixtieth avenue, known as Irving Park Manor. A great number of houses have already been completed on this property, and several more are planned for construction during the summer and fall months.

A. T. McIntosh & Co. report that in their Marquette Park property at Seventy-first and Western avenue, there are only about 35 lots left out of a total of 320.

H. Teller Archibald & Co. announce a general price increase of 25 per cent on their property on Stony Island avenue and Eighty-seventh street. This property is located in the heart of development of the south side, which has attracted so much attention during the last few months. Eighty-seventh street and Stony Island avenue is a double section line transfer corner, where the Eighty-seventh street cars intersect the Stony Island avenue line.

OUTSIDE BUSINESS BLOCKS REPORTED IN GOOD DEMAND.

Among the more important transactions in outside business property was the sale by Rose M. Ingram to Clara I. Malcolm of Ann Arbor, Mich., of the property at the northwest corner of Walnut street and Kedzie avenue, lot 125 feet on Kedzie avenue and 50 feet on Walnut street, improved with a three story store and flat building, for a stated consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $16,000.

The property at the southwest corner of Irving Park boulevard and Glenwood avenue, formerly Southport avenue, 136x150 feet, improved with a three story building on the corner and a one story brick adjoining on the inside, has been sold by Eugene Kramer to William E. Massey for a stated consideration of $25,000, subject to an incumbrance of $13,000.

Built for Saloon Purposes.

It is said that when the building was erected it was with the purpose of saloon occupancy, but that it was discovered after the building was erected that it was in prohibition territory, and as a result it never was put to the purpose for which it originally was intended. The ground floor is now occupied by a store and the adjoining building by a bowling alley.

The property at the southeast corner of Sixty-fifth street and Ingleside avenue, lot 125 feet on Sixty-fifth street by 48 on Ingleside avenue, has been sold by Louise E. Harroun to Elbert C. Ferguson for a reported consideration of $27,500. It is improved with a row of eight one story stores.

Residence in Payment.

The sale was subject to an incumbrance of $7,500, the purchaser giving the residence property at 5131 Woodlawn avenue, lot 40x173 feet, valued at $19,000, in part payment. L. M. Smith & Bro. were the brokers.

The property at the southwest corner of Hamlin avenue and Adams street, lot 52x150 feet, with store and flat improvement, has been sold by Jennie Wildman to John W. Jinnette for an indicated consideration of $52,500, subject to $33,000.

ACREAGE DEALS FEATURE WEEK'S REALTY MARKET

Opening of Belt Railway Starts Active Trading in Clearing District.

Several notable transactions in acres, together with the reported activity in the Clearing district, in the southwest part of the city, as the result of the opening of the Belt railway into the district June 1, were among the most interesting features of the week's market. There was a fair movement of apartment house property, but there was little doing of an important character in outside business property, the market in this field making a poor showing as compared with the previous week.

William A. Peterson, the nurseryman, appeared in two important acre transactions, in one of which he was a seller and the other a purchaser, in which the total consideration was $227,000.

$107,000 Paid for Tract.

One of the transactions was the sale to W. F. Kaiser & Co., the subdividers, of a tract of about eighty-two acres bounded by Bryn Mawr avenue on the south, Central Park avenue on the west, Ardmore avenue on the north, and the sanitary district canal on the east, for an indicated consideration of $107,000, as evidenced by the revenue stamps on the document. This has been subdivided by Kaiser & Co. into 578 lots of 30 feet frontage.

Mr. Peterson purchased from W. L. Turner two tracts of forty acres each, the whole being bounded by Peterson avenue, Central Park avenue, Kimball and Ardmore avenues, for a total expressed consideration of $120,000. Mr. Peterson gave back a part purchase money mortgage of $50,000, five years, at 6 per cent.

The Peterson nursery of 275 acres, belonging to Mr. Peterson, adjoins this on the north, and the property just acquired will be used for nursery purposes. Mr. Peterson has three years in which to remove the trees from the tract which he has sold to Kaiser & Co. J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. were the brokers in both transactions.

Sheridan Road Site Sold.

Benjamin Lowenmeyer, a prominent north shore subdivider, appeared as the purchaser from Frank M. Steele of 1,350 feet of frontage on the west side of Sheridan road, opposite the grounds of the North Shore Golf club, south of Highland Park. The tract has a varying depth of 325 to 400 feet, and is about 500 feet west of the forty acres recently purchased by Adolph Lichstern for a country home.

The consideration is withheld, but is said to have been in the neighborhood of $30,000, and was a cash transaction. The property may be subdivided into 200 foot lots, although no plans have yet been decided upon. David Ettelson attended to the legal details for Mr. Lowenmeyer. It will be recalled that in April last Mr. Lowenmeyer purchased from Martin L. Ryerson, 1,400 feet of frontage in Evanston, and it is stated that all but 100 feet has been sold.

Marked Activity in Clearing.

The announcement is made in connection with the Clearing district that several concerns recently have purchased sites for factories and warehouses, and others who acquired sites some time ago have begun the construction of factory buildings.

The C. F. Massey company, manufacturer of concrete railway supplies, with factories at Spokane, Des Moines, Newark, Minneapolis, and elsewhere, as well as in Chicago, where its plant is at Kedzie avenue and West Thirtieth street, has purchased ground at Sixty-sixth street and Fifty-seventh avenue.

The property has a frontage of 900 feet on Fifty-seventh avenue, extending 300 feet to a private alley in Fifty-seventh court. The company has begun the construction of a concrete and brick factory building, which will be connected with the Belt railway by private switch. S. H. Hodge of Hodge & Chandler was the broker.

Storage Warehouse to Be Built.

The Calumet Signal Oil company will begin work at once on a brick and concrete storage warehouse and distributing station on land recently purchased from the Clearing Land association at Fifty-eighth avenue and Sixty-sixth street. The site, which comprises 131,000 square feet, is said to have sold for about $18,000. Building plans are being prepared by Frank D. Chase.

The Hardstone Brick and Tile company, a concern which recently moved to Chicago from Canada, has taken title to an acre of ground on Sixty-sixth street and Fifty-ninth court. The property has been improved with a brick factory building, 100x300 feet, basement and two stories, which will be used for the manufacture of high grade face brick, roofing tile, and mosaic floor tile under a German patent. L. B. Beardslee of Kappes, Beardslee & Co. was the broker.

The Standard Oil company also has purchased a site at Sixty-sixth street and Fifty-eighth avenue, 96x464 feet, for a branch distributing station. It has connections with the Belt road. Plans have been prepared for a concrete storage warehouse, garage, and office building, and work will begin at once, it is stated. W. A. Merigold of W. A. Merigold & Co. represented the purchaser.

BUYS TRACT IN WILMETTE.

Considerable interest attaches to the purchase by Benjamin H. Marshall of Marshall & Fox, architects, of a plot of ground south of the drainage canal in Wilmette extending from Sheridan road to the lake. Mr. Marshall is said to have paid about $20,000 for the property and report is it was acquired as the site for a country club.

FIELD & CO. SPREAD OUT.

Marshall Field & Co. are to establish another large distributing station on the south side on 166x174½ feet of ground on Wentworth avenue fifty feet south of Seventieth street which the firm has acquired for $12,000.

Leases and Loans.

THERE were several loans of an important character reported last week, one in particular being of much interest, that by the Greenebaum Sons Bank & Trust company to the L. Woolf Manufacturing company. The amount is $750,000 in the form of a 6 per cent serial bond issue maturing in one to fourteen years. Its purpose is understood to be the refunding of the floating indebtedness of the company.

It is secured by the plant of the company on Hoyne avenue, Robey street, Carroll avenue, and Fulton street, comprising about sixteen acres, with a frontage of 2,372 feet, adjoining the Northwestern and Panhandle roads, and is improved with twenty-two buildings of brick and stone construction; also the property at the southwest corner of Lake and Jefferson streets, comprising about eight acres improved with five buildings and other property used for office and manufacturing purposes; also the leasehold estate and building at 111 North Dearborn street.

Greenebaum also made a bond issue loan of $105,000, two to seven years, at 6 per cent to Walter W. Ahlschlager, secured by the 200x125 feet on Milwaukee avenue through to Sawyer avenue, being improved with the three story Logan Square Terminal block, land and building representing a stated investment of about $200,000.

They also are trustee in a loan of $75,000 to William Bertha in connection with the construction of the "Bertha" apartments at the southwest corner of Ellis avenue and Fifty-fourth place. The building, now in course of construction, will occupy a lot fronting 150 feet with a depth of 158 feet, and will contain thirty apartments of three, four, five, and six rooms, and, together with the land, will, it is said, represent an investment of approximately $150,000. The annual gross rent is estimated at $16,700.

In the most important of the store leases in the downtown district the trustees of the Marshall Field estate have closed a lease with the Best & Russell company covering the cigar privilege of the new Conway building, at the southwest corner of Washington and Clark streets. The space comprises the store at 109 West Washington street, about 16x30 feet, and a booth in the rotunda of the building. The lease is for a term of five years, at an annual rent of $6,000.

Gustav G. Anders has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $52,500, seven years, at 6 per cent, secured by the property at the northwest corner of Fifty-third street and Ingleside avenue, lot 136x109 feet, east front, with an $80,000 apartment building, in process of construction.

FLAT BUILDING MARKET BRISK

Labor Troubles, However, Make Investors More Cautious.

There was a fairly free movement of apartment house property, although this market, as well as that of outside business property, evidently suffered from the general feeling of apprehension regarding the trouble in the building trades, which seems to make investors generally more cautious in their operations.

A noteworthy deal in apartment property was the sale by Fred Becklenberg to Isador Cohn of the new high grade eighteen flat building on 81.7x134 feet of ground at the southwest corner of Addison street and Janssen avenue for an indicated consideration of $70,500, subject to $38,000 incumbrance. Trade valued at $15,000 figured in the transaction.

The eighteen flat building, lot 85x157 feet, at 516-22 Wrightwood avenue was sold by Charles G. Frank to Mrs. Margaret M. McConnaughy for $76,000, subject to $58,000, the purchaser conveying in exchange 100x160 feet at northeast corner of Clinton avenue and Randolph street, Oak Park, improved with four two flat buildings valued at $36,000, subject to $18,000. Gage, Kirk & Eaton represented Mrs. McConnaughy and Lytle & Graves Mr. Frank.

The twenty-four apartment building on Winthrop avenue, 150 feet north of Berwyn avenue, lot 100x150 feet, east front, has been conveyed by Andrew McAnsh to Margaret Fahey for an indicated consideration of $80,000, subject to an incumbrance of $74,000.

The apartment house property at the northwest corner of Calumet avenue and Forty-fifth street, lot 72x137½ feet, to the elevated road right of way, has been sold by Bertha Hoekstra to William A. Haynes for an indicated consideration of $36,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000.

The fifteen flat building, northeast corner Monroe street and Springfield avenue, was sold by Charles Shoenfeld to Antonia Lambert for an indicated consideration of $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $22,000. George Lauth, associated with John F. Diffenderfer & Co. was the broker.

BUILDERS AWAIT SETTLEMENT OF CARPENTER ROW

Loans Brisk for Future Construction Despite Gloomy Outlook.

Important building projects in connection with land purchases as well as building loans again figured prominently in the week's market despite the gloomy outlook in the building trades labor situation. Many of these projects, however, are matters of the future so far as beginning construction work is concerned, the purpose being to wait until something approaching a settlement of the trouble between the contractors and the carpenters is reached. Considerable work, however, is being done and will be done by independent contractors unless there is a tieup of materials, as is now threatened.

A noteworthy transaction in the west side factory district involving the reported construction of a building for the use of the Henry O. Shepard company, printers, has been closed. The property is at the northwest corner of Washington boulevard and Elizabeth street and was sold by Perley Lowe, William Templeton, and N. M. Jones, trustees of the estate of Henry Witbeck, deceased, to James Hibben and Mrs. Jennie O. Shepard for a reported consideration of $50,000 cash.

Price Is $467.29 a Square Foot.

The lot fronts 107½ feet, with a depth of 182 feet to an alley, and contains 19,474 square feet, making the sale at the rate of $2.57 a square foot and $467.29 a front foot. There are old brick improvements of no value on the property. It is stated the purchase was made with a view later to the construction of a building for the occupancy of the Sheppard company, now located at 632 Sherman street. The purchasers were represented by Walter H. Wilson & Co. and the sellers by E. Orris Hart & Co.

The Ketter-Elliott Erection company will erect a warehouse building in California avenue, south of Thirty-first street, on 45,500 square feet, which it has purchased from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for the Chicago and Illinois Western railroad syndicate for $10,000.

The proposed building will be used for the repair and housing of the company's car and equipment used in the construction of railroad and other structural iron bridges. W. H. Lichty of J. H. Van Vlissingen & Co. was the broker.

Lawrence Avenue Deal Closed.

An interesting transaction in the Lawrence avenue district, involving extensive improvements, was closed. The property comprises both sides of Springfield avenue, north of Lawrence avenue, about 270 feet in each front, which has been sold by Silas Ropp to Francis S. Graham, the consideration being withheld.

It is said the purchaser will improve the entire frontage with two and six apartment buildings, the former to cost about $7,000 and the latter between $15,000 and $20,000.

An eighteen apartment building of four and five rooms is to be erected by W. F. Peterson on Greenleaf avenue, near Glenwood avenue, to cost about $55,000. It will occupy a lot 75x172 feet and is expected to have a gross annual rent of about $10,000.

REALTY BOARDS TO CLASH.

The two Chicago real estate boards, the Chicago and the Cook county, will line up against one another at the hearing before Gov. Dunne at Springfield tomorrow on the bill permitting the corporate ownership of real estate. The Chicago board, while it was not sponsor for the Hicks bill, will support it as a measure which it has favored for a number of years, while the Cook county board, which has consistently opposed corporate ownership, will oppose the measure.

EAST NAMES 29 ATHLETES FOR U. S. MEET

A. A. U. Team Picked as Result of Tryouts Held at Harvard Stadium.

Boston, Mass., June 26.—Twenty-nine athletes who will represent the eastern section of the country at the national amateur track and field championships in San Francisco on Aug. 6 and 7 were named tonight as the result of their performances in the tryout meet today. Announcement of their choice was made by Frederick W. Rubien of New York, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic union, as follows:

100 yard dash—Alvah T. Meyer, I.-A. A. C., New York.

440 yard run—J. E. Meredith, Meadowbrook club, Philadelphia, and T. J. Halpin, Boston A. A.

880 yard run — J. T. Higgins, Holy Cross; Homer Baker, New York A. C., and D. S. Caldwell, Boston A. A.

1 Mile run—Norman S. Taber, Boston A. A.; Abel R. Kiviat, I.-A. A. C., New York.

5 mile run—Hannes Kolehmainen, I.-A. A. C., New York, and V. Kyronen, Millrose A. C., New York.

High hurdles—W. A. Savage Jr., Boston A. A.

Low hurdles—H. M. Martin, Smart Set A. C., New York.

440 yard hurdles—W. H. Meanix, Boston A. A.

High jump—Wesley Oler, New York A. C., and Harry Barwise, Boston A. A.

Broad jump—H. T. Worthington, Boston A. A.; Platt Adams, New York A. C., and H. Bostock, Pittsburgh.

Hop, step, and jump—M. J. Fahey, I.-A. A. C., New York.

Discus throw—J. J. Cahill, Millrose A. C., New York.

Javeline throw—George Bronder, I.-A. A. C., New York.

3 mile walk—Edward Reenze, Mohawk A. C., New York, and Fred Kaiser, N. Y. A. C.

16 pound shotput—J. C. Lawler, I.-A. A. A., Boston, and P. J. McDonald, I.-A. A. C., New York.

16 pound hammer throw—Patrick Ryan, I.-A. A. C., New York.

56 pounds weight hurl—Matt McGrath, I.-A. A. C., New York.

Taber Stars in Mile.

The athletes, pitted against one another on the track and field within the Harvard stadium today, proved their fitness without question. Most notable of the day's performances was the mile run of Norman S. Taber, the Oxford Rhodes scholar, now representing the Boston A. A. On a track sodden with morning rains the former Brown university track captain sped over the mile in 4:15 1-5. This was only four-fifths of a second behind the world's amateur record made by J. P. Jones of Cornell on the same track two years ago.

Only a slow first quarter, which Taber spent in working his way through a small group of runners, probably prevented him from reaching the world's mark. He covered the last three-quarters of a mile in 3;15 2-3, pressed closely at times by Abel R. Kiviat of the I.-A. A. C. of New York.

Summaries.

880 yard run—Won by Joseph T. Higgins, Holy Cross; D. S. Caldwell, Boston Athletic association, second; Edward F. Raser, Irish-American Athletic club, New York, third. Time, 1:56 3-5.

Three mile walk—Won by Edward Renz, Mohawk A. C.; Fred Kaiser, N. Y. A. C., second; Frank Plant, Long Island A. C., third. Time, 21:45 2-5.

16 pound hammer throw—Won by Patrick Ryan, I. A. A. C., New York, distance 172 feet 6 inches; Guy Leadbetter, I. A. A. A., Boston, second, 148 feet 5 inches.

Mile run—Won by Norman S. Taber, Boston A. A.; Abel R. Kiviat, I. A. A. C., New York, second; H. F. Mahoney, Boston A. A., third. Time, 4:15 1-5.

440 yard run—Won by J. E. Meredith, Meadowbrook A. C., Philadelphia; T. F. Halpin, Boston A. A., second; A. M. Bowzer, Syracuse university, third. Time, :49 3-5.

56 pound weight throw—Won by Patrick Ryan, I. A. A. C., New York. Distance 33 feet 2 inches; William Lynch, I. A. A. A., Boston, second, 31 feet 8 inches; Robert Lucey, I. A. A. A., Boston, third, 28 feet 8 inches.

220 yard hurdles—Won by W. A. Savage, Boston A. A.; W. Bursch, New York A. C., second; H. M. Martin, Smart Set A. C., New York, third. Time, :25.

120 yard high hurdles—Won by H. M. Martin, Smart Set A. C., New York; A. L. Engels, New York, unattached, second; W. A. Savage, Boston A. A., third. Time, :16.

High jump—Won by Wesley Oler, N. Y. A. C., New York, height, 6 feet 2 inches; Harry Barwise, Boston A. A., second, 6 feet 1¼ inches; Walter Whalen, Boston A. A., and Harry F. Grumpell, N. Y. A. C., third, tied at 6 feet.

100 yard dash—Won by Alvah T. Meyer, I. A. A. C., New York; Irving T. Howe, Colby college, second; H. I. Treadway, Boston A. A., third. Time, :10.

16 pound shotput—Won by J. Q. Lawlor, I. A. A. A., Boston, distance, 47 feet 10 inches; L. A. Whitney, Boston A. A., second, 46 feet 1½ inches; J. J. Cahill, Millrose A. A., New York, third, 46 feet 1 inch.

Broad jump—Won by H. T. Worthington, Boston A. A., distance, 23 feet 4½ inches; H. Bostock, Pittsburgh, second, 23 feet 3¼ inches; Al Gutterson, Boston A. A., third, 22 feet 10¼ inches.

Javelin throw—Won by George Bronder, I. A. A. C., New York, distance, 178 feet 7 inches, bettering the A. A. U. championship record; J. C. Lincoln, N. Y. A. C., second, 161 feet 2¼ inches; L. Harper, I. A. A. C., third, 157 feet 3⅝ inches.

Discus throw—Won by J. J. Cahill, Millrose A. C., New York, distance, 130 feet; L. A. Whitney, Boston A. A., second, 117.3 feet; T. Joyce, Mohawk A. C., third, 116.17 feet.

220 yard dash—Won by Irving T. Howe, Colby college; Roy F. Morse, Salem Crescent club, N. Y., second; H. Bostock, Pittsburgh, third. Time, :22 1-5.

Pole vault—Marc S. Wright, Boston A. A., and H. L. Reind, I. A. A., Boston, tied for first place at 11 feet 7 inches; third, tie between R. W. Harwood, Boston A. A., and F. Gargan, N. Y. A. C., 11 feet 4 inches.

440 yard high hurdles—Won by W. H. Meanix, Boston A. A.; Edward M. Pritchard, I. A. A. C., New York, second; H. Schaff, I. A. A. C., New York, third. Time, :54 4-5.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

Bill to Steve.

[Copyright: 1915: By Ring W. Lardner.]

CHICAGO, June 26.—Steve: Well Steve, I made it up in my mind that they aint no use arguing with a lady or your wife because a mans got no chanct to win because the minut she sees your geting the best of her she busts out crying and I wisht it was that way in base ball and every time we seen we was going to loose a game we would beggin to blubber and then the other side would feel a sorry for us and give us the game.

Well we fired this here higher girl that just come over acrost the Ocean from norway and couldent talk nothing but sweden and you had to wave diffrunt collered flags to make her under stand what you wanted. so we let her out and Gussy says they was no use fusing with no more cheap girls but get a hold of a good 1 and give her $7.00 or $8.00 per wk. and have your work did right. So I says I aint no Capital S. and cant aford to give no girl $7.00 per wk. and I says they aint enough work for a girl to do a round the house to make her worth $7.00 just cooking and washing out the dishes and dusting a round. I says I wouldent want more then $3.00 per wk. for that kind of work myself because they wasent nothing hard a bout it.

So Gussy says it was harder then laying a round the ball pk. al day and playing catch and seting on the bench and watching the rest of them play ball and she says dont you get $250.00 per mo. for that and I says yes but Im a good ball player and got it comeing and besides it was hard work because its a strane on a man all ways puling to win and besides cooking meals dont take near the time that practiceing and playing ball does. So Gussy says the cooking the meals aint nothing and its a pleasure to cook meals and so 4th. and I says well then what for do you want a higher girl and she says it was for the washing dishs and makeing the Bed and stratening the house up. I says that a joke and she says all right if its a joke why dont you try it your self and you do the house work and I will cook the meals. So I says your on and its a bargun and dont leave me hear no more a bout a higher girl. So last Wed. A. M. I started in to do my part of the work and Gussy got breakfast and then says I must wash the dishs so after breakfast I took the dishs out in the kitchen and I dropt a couple of them takeing them out because the kitchen door works back and 4th. to loose and bumped in to me and we will have to get the door fixed. So I started washing the dishs and Gussy come out and says I better put on a apern and I says I dont need no apern and you stay out of the kitchen.

So she beat it in the other rm. and she set down in the parlor like she was a queen or some thing and left me do al the work. Well Steve I got a long O. K. because of coarse they aint no trick a bout washing dishs and after I was threw I went in and made the bed and I made it up right and left the sheets and so 4th. loose so a man wouldent half to spend a ½ hour at night untucking them out before you can get in to bed. And then Gussy says I must sweep and dust in all the rms. so I took a hold of a broom and dust clothe and give evry thing a good cleaning and I was threw in 10 min. and then it was time to go out to A. M. practice.

So Gussy came out to the game in the P. M. and we come home to gather and I says I was hungry and what was we going to have for supper. So she says we was going to have oat meal and fride eggs and coffee and I says what was the idear and she says they was enough of them things left on the breakfast dishs I had washed for an other meal and what was the use in cooking some thing more. So when we got home she tride to show me where they was still breakfast food and eggs stuck to the dishs and they was just as clean is your shirt Steve but she in sisted they was not cleaned good and al as she could show me was a little peace of egg on 1 plate.

I says well is it my falt if you leave egg stuck on the botun of your plate and she says your right there it must be my plate because if it was yours they wouldent be nothing left on it she says and it aint nessary to wash your dishs she says when your threw eating but al as you half to do is wipe them. So then she took me in the parler and showed me some dirt under the rug and what do you think of that Steve she puting dirt under the rug wile I was gone so as it would look like I hadent swept good.

So finely she cooked up some liver & bacon for supper and then she says I must wash the supper dishs and I says I will wash them in the A. M. when I aint tired from playing ball al day and they will be just as dirty in the A. M. is they are now. Then Gussy says you wont have no time to wash up the dishs in the A. M. because all the rugs has got to be tooken out and beat besides the rest of the house work. So I remembered that Bresnahan ast us all to be at the club house for a meeting at 9 A. M. So I says I couldent beat no rugs and then Gussy says yes I dident think you would last more then 1 day. So then I seen they wasent no use argueing because she looked like she was going to cry because I showed her up a bout what a cinch the house work is so I says all right go a head and higher a girl to do the work and then I went out and stayed out all evening. So wear going to try and get an other girl a good 1 that can talk englich and you dont half to make sines to them but what a cinch a girls got Steve and I would of did the work the rest of my life with out makeing no holler only for Bresnahan asking us to come out early Thurs. Business beffors pleasure hey Steve. Respy, BILL.

SOX ARE BEATEN AT CLEVELAND BY A FREAK HIT

Ball Falling Foot from the Home Plate Enables Indians to Win, 3 to 2.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Cleveland, O., June 26.—[Special.]—Chicago's rampant White Sox failed to make a clean sweep of the series of seven games against the Cleveland Indians when the latter arose in warlike fashion today and scalped the league leaders in the final game by a count of 3 to 2.

Inability to clout the ball in their customary manner was the main cause of the Sox's defeat, for they gathered only five blows off a rookey hurler named Jim Walker, who is tall and broad and hails from Tennessee. Still the Sox came through with a belligerent attack in the seventh and scored two runs which ought to have won the ball game for them, but a freakish sort of blunder in the last half of the same round opened the way for the Indians to capture the victory.

Joe Benz was on the mound for the Sox, and until that eighth was invincible. Only one hit had been made off him, and that followed a two base error by Weaver, driving in Cleveland's other run, so Benz wasn't responsible for the defeat. The Indians never should have scored.

Eddie Collins labored with a lame leg, and after he made the hit that drove in the tying run in the seventh he was excused, Breton taking his place. Eddie was badly needed in the ninth, when the Sox had another chance to count. Brief batted for Breton, but could do no good.

Amateurs a Bigger Attraction.

Cleveland's fans didn't seem to care much whether the Sox won seven straight games or only six out of seven. At least there were only about 3,000 of them who cared enough about it to pay their way into the ball park, and that number on a half holiday with perfect weather wasn't considered much of a crowd. Out in the public park it was said there were at least 25,000 persons watching an amateur game. The Sox and Indians might get more money in this city by playing in a public playground and passing the hat.

The Indians, however, stirred up a ripple of excitement in the second round of the combat by scoring a run they didn't deserve. Jackson was first up and bounded over Benz's head. Weaver cut across the diamond, made a nice capture of the ball, only to shoot it to the grandstand and Jackson pulled up at second. Graney laid down a neat sacrifice, putting Joe on third, from where he cantered home when Smith cut a single between Weaver and Blackburne. Smith was caught off first and Wamaganss fouled out, ending that fuss.

Sox Get Busy in Seventh.

It was the seventh round before the Sox could do a thing with Walker's benders and then they drove in two runs, putting them one to the good. After one was out Weaver pulled a drive down the right field foul line for three bags and trotted home when Eddie Collins poked to left for one base. Fournier drew a base on balls, pushing E. Collins to second, after which he was relieved because of lameness, Breton taking his place. Breton proved to be alive by scampering to third, when Catcher O'Neill made a peg to first, trying to catch Fournier off the base. J. Collins bounded to Chapman and Breton was pegged out at the plate. Roth followed with a beauty single over second and Fournier tallied. J. Collins went to third and when Leibold's peg went over Catcher O'Neill's head, J. Collins rounded third, but Walker was backing up the plate, got the ball and pegged Shano out at third, ending the assault.

Freak Play Wins Game.

A freak play started the Indians on a rampage in the eighth that netted two runs and put them one to the good again. Smith, first up, hit one to the sky over the home plate. Everybody saw the ball except Ray Schalk. He looked to all parts of the sky except straight up, and, finally, with every one screaming at him, made a final frantic effort at a catch, but the ball fell for a base hit a foot in front of the plate. Wamaganss produced a sacrifice, then O'Neill singled, sending Smith home with the tying run. Walker fanned, but Leiboldt lined to the wall in right center for two bases and O'Neill legged it home. Leiboldt reached third on the peg to the plate, but the assault ended when Hammond tapped to Benz.

Catches Fournier's Liner.

In the ninth, with one out, Weaver singled. Brief batted for Breton but forced Weaver at second. Quinlan then ran for Brief but Fournier ended the game with a line drive straight to Graney.

WHALES WIN TWO FROM BROOKLYN; FIGHT ON FIELD

BY SAM WELLER.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 26.—[Special.]—Tinker's Whales took both ends of a double header with the Tip Tops this afternoon, 6 to 1 and 10 to 6. There was a real fight in the second battle, the offenders being Hap Myers and Joe Tinker, who clashed in a mixup at second base. Blows were struck and both men were ejected from the game.

The Whales evidently angered the Tip Tops, especially Myers, when they scored eight runs in the eighth inning, overcoming a five run lead. In the last half of the eighth Myers went in to run for Griggs, who got on with a single. He was forced a moment later by F. Smith to Tinker unassisted.

Myers Starts Fistic Clash.

Tinker trapped Myers off the bag and this made the Tip Top first baseman sore and he took a wallop at the Whale manager, but missed. Several of the players grabbed Tinker and while he was being held Myers took half a dozen punches at him. Jimmie Smith came to the rescue and dropped Myers in his tracks.

All the players then rushed to the center of the diamond and it looked for a moment like a general free-for-all, but the combatants were finally pulled apart. Tinker and Myers were ejected from the game and the Whales went on and won.

Eight Runs in One Round.

The first half of the sensational eighth inning was a real thriller. Jimmie Smith started the doings with a double. Jackson walked and Wilson beat out a puzzler to Halt, filling the bases. Zwilling was tossed out by Howard, Smith scoring. Fritz went out, short to first, Jackson counting. Hanford drew a pass and Mann singled to center, scoring Wilson.

Westerzil was then sent in to bat for Farrell and Manager Magee withdrew his left handed pitcher, Finnis Wilson, and sent Finnernan, a right hander, to the mound. Tinker was too smart for him and before any balls had been pitched to Westerzil he yanked him and sent up Fischer. Bill was hit by the first ball pitched, filling the bases. Tinker batted for Black and walked, forcing Hanford home.

Jimmie Smith came up for the second time and singled through Halt, Mann scoring. Jackson drove a long single to right and Fischer and Tinker counted, while Smith took third. On an attempted double steal Land threw to center field and Smith counted, giving the Whales eight runs for the inning.

McConnell Wins Opener.

George McConnell held the Tip Tops to three hits in the first game while his teammates were piling up ten swats for a total of seventeen bases, and the Whales won easily. One of the spectacular features of the battle was the slugging of Harry Fritz, who drove out a home run, a double, and a single in three times at bat. Harry drove the ball into the left field bleachers in the sixth inning with one on ahead of him and put his teammates in the lead.

The Whales cracked the ice in the fourth inning when Bill Fischer led off with a double to the right field wall and scored when Fritz drew a two base wallop to the left field bleachers. They had lost a glorious chance to count in the second inning when the first three men up were given free transportation, filling the bases. Mann hit into a double play and Farrell was an easy out.

Fritz's Homer Nets Two.

Dutch Zwilling's double, followed by Harry Fritz's immense drive into the left field bleachers, for a home run, gave the Whales two more in the first half of the sixth inning.

The Tip Tops got their first count in the last half of the round when Myers singled, stole second, and scored on Simon's double to left.

Drive Hendrix from Mound.

Claude Hendrix got by nicely for two innings of the second game, then the Tip Tops took kindly to his spitters and knocked him off the mound with five hits, netting five runs. Land led off with a double and went to third on Howard's sacrifice. Finis Wilson singled to center, scoring his battery partner, and Cooper followed with a triple to the flagpole in center field on which Wilson rode home. Halt delivered a sacrifice fly to Flack, allowing Cooper to score easily.

Kauff hit the right field wall, but Mann fielded it so well Bennie was held on first. Steve Evans settled the fate of Hendrix when he drove a home run over the right field wall. Dandy Dave Black was called to the rescue and retired Griggs on an easy roller.

Whales Do Some Hitting.

The Whales began to solve the delivery of Wilson in the fourth inning. Jimmy Smith got a life when Howard fumbled and Flack drove him to third on a single to right. Art Wilson came through with a sacrifice fly to Cooper, giving Smith an opportunity to count. Zwilling also bagged a single, but Fritz fanned and Beck was an easy out.

ENTRIES CLOSE FOR BASEBALL HONORS JULY 15

Entry blanks for amateurs wishing to make a trip as a member of Cubs, Sox, or Whales will appear in "The Tribune" tomorrow. Entries close July 15. If you have not entered do it at once so "The Tribune scouts can look you over.

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Entries for THE TRIBUNE'S amateur baseball contest will close July 15. Youngsters under 21 years old residing in Chicago and the suburbs who wish to be given consideration by scouts in their selection of the three amateurs who will be members of the Cubs, Sox, and Whales teams in their final eastern trips of the season must have their names in by that time.

So, boys, it's up to you to hurry. You may clip tomorrow morning's blank, have it filled out properly, signed by your manager and send it to the Amateur Baseball editor. Then at some time during the next few weeks members of Jimmy Ryan's scouting staff will look you over. You will not know in advance when the scout will be present, so it behooves you to play your best at all times.

Sportsmanship Important Point.

Sportsmanship during the game, as well as your skill as a player, is an important factor. Many excellent reports have been handed in by scouts to date, so considerably more inspection will be required before the staff of scouts can name its choices.

Ted M. Coutre, the left fielder of Netzel's North Ends, filed his blank during the week. This was the player of whom Jimmy Ryan spoke in glowing terms. Coutre wrote that he intended to, sign one of the blanks, but hesitated because of modesty. Probably there are many others who have felt the same way, so come right out and make yourself known.

SUSPENDS TINKER AND MYERS

New York, June 26.—[Special.]—President James A. Gilmore of the Federal league announced tonight that he had suspended indefinitely Manager Joe Tinker of the Whales and First Baseman Hap Myers of the Brooklyn Federal league club because of their fist fight during the second game of today's double header at Washington park. Gilmore took this action as soon as he received the official report of his umpires.

MORE METAL FOR TRAVERS.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 26.—Jerome D. Travers, national open golf champion, today defeated Walter Reynolds of the Woodbury, N. J., Country club in the thirty-six hole final round for the Harold A. Sands trophy at the Merion Cricket club, Haverford. Travers won by 4 up, 3 to play.

Cub Sydelights.

In Cincinnati today—two games.

The Cubs lost a little ground to the Phillies, who won a game from Brooklyn, but the margin is not close enough to worry about.

Manager Bresnahan took his tribe to Redland last night for a bunch of five games in four days with the tail-enders. The Cubs will be home again on Thursday.

Bescher slipped and wrenched himself on the covered drain in left field in the eighth inning when chasing Fisher's double. He gave way to Wilson, also a cripple.

Betzel was announced to start the game at third, but when Vaughn was replaced by Zabel Huggins shifted Beck to third before Betzel got into the game except through the megaphone.

Bridegroom Lavender was the recipient of a chest of silver from his teammates and a check for $500 as a wedding gift from President Thomas. The presentations were made at the plate just before the game started.

Charley Dexter, an erstwhile Chicago backstop, was among those present. He is now in business in Des Moines and took a look at the scene of his former endeavors, but the scrap lasted too long for him to see the finish.

Umpire Quigley wrenched himself by a tumble at third bag when he was following Long around the bases in the fifth inning. He was unable to stand on his feet for a few minutes without assistance, but was jarred rather than seriously hurt and continued arbitrating to the bitter end.

PITCHER TIPPLE TO REDS.

Cincinnati, O., June 26.—President Herrmann of the Reds stated definitely today that the Cincinnati club would get Dan Tiple, sensational pitcher of the Indianapolis A. A. club, who won his tenth straight game yesterday by blanking the Cleveland Spiders in a no hit game. Under a working agreement between Indianapolis and Cincinnati, Herrmann said, the Reds had the first call on Tipple. "We do not expect to get him right away," Garry said, "but we shall eventually."

COUTCHIE, EX-MAROON, WED.

Muskegon, Mich., June 26.—[Special.]—Kenneth Gilbert Coutchie, a star half back with the Chicago university football eleven for two seasons and last year a member of the track team of that school, was married to Miss Marian Martha Benjamin at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Frederick Benjamin, on Grandriver, near Nunica, Mich., today.

CARDS OUTFUSS CUBS AND TAKE CLOSING GAME

St. Louis Gets Early Lead in Contest Marked by Wrangling.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Punk pitching in the early innings by Vaughn and Zabel gave the Cardinals four runs and the final game of the series with the Cubs yesterday, but not until the teams had spent nearly two and a half hours in wrangling, fussing, and stalling, was the ultimate verdict of 4 to 3 recorded.

The Cubs fought vociferously to overcome the handicap they had placed on themselves and came so close to knotting the count in three different rounds that they had Slim Sallee scared nearly stiff. In consequence the stringlike southpaw conferred between pitches with his catcher, his infielders, and his manager, who was on the bench. It was so bad the crowd got after Sallee and roasted him roundly for his dilatory tactics, but the southpaw and his pals probably will contend that their stalling staved off a defeat.

Near Fight on the Field.

Once or twice it looked as if war was going to break out on the diamond. A mixup in the first resulted in a long, tempestuous argument in which Umpire Orth and Bresnahan and Archer were the disputants. Later Bresnahan tagged Ham Hyatt with such vehemence that the indignity, on top of being robbed of a home run, caused Hyatt to bristle like a hedgehog. For a couple of minutes the air was charged with scrap, but Orth got between the belligerents and induced them to arbitrate. Altogether, it was one of those games the frequent occurrence of which is responsible for a lot of the deficits in the baseball treasuries of the country.

Bresnahan used everything he had, including oratory, in an attempt to offset the handicap his hurlers gave the visitors at the start. He used four different pitchers, including Jim Lavender, just back from a honeymoon. He impressed Heine Zimmerman into service in the middle of the combat and the Great One did his share toward overcoming the lead. When it came to the ultimate pinch Bresnahan had to slip Standridge in as pinch hitter in the ninth.

Cards Get Big Start.

Four bases on balls, two singles, and a sacrifice fly gave the Cards three runs in the opening round and it would have been a lot more but for a bonehead play by Bescher. Butler singled, Bescher walked, and Miller singled. Schulte's throw home stopped Butler on third, but Bescher didn't see it and ran into a jam which resulted in Butler being run to death. Zabel took Vaughn's place and three more passes with the aid of a sacrifice fly and another jam at the plate counted three tallies. With the sacks loaded Beck drew a pass, forcing Miller home. Long rounded third and started home, whereupon Archer pegged to third. Long kept right on and scored because Archer muffed Phelan's return throw. Bresnahan protested earnestly against this sort of base running, but Orth finally pleaded with him to go on and the side went out on the next play.

Zabel lasted through the second, in which two singles and a double steal scored the winning Cardinal run. Then he gave way to Adams, who stopped the visitors for five innings only to be yanked for a pinch hitter. Lavender blanked the visitors in the last two rounds.

Fisher Out at the Plate.

Good's single, Fisher's sacrifice, and Schulte's double scored a run in the third. Phelan's single, Bresnahan's double, and Zimmerman's single put over two more in the seventh, leaving the Cubs one behind. Fisher tried to tie the score by opening the eighth with a double, making third on Schulte's sacrifice and going home on Saier's little fly to Butler in short left, but Butler doubled him at the pan. Long almost spilled the beans in the ninth by muffing Phelan's tall fly, but Williams and Bresnahan flied, Zimmerman was passed intentionally, and Standridge struck out.

MAKES WAR ON BALL POOLS.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 26.—Fines of $500 and costs each were assessed against Roy McDaniels and Robert Hamilton by Judge Deery in City court today on the charge of making a gift enterprise. Both men have been selling coupon lotteries designed for baseball pools, according to the evidence. Appeals were taken. Several other men are awaiting trial on similar charges.

PHILS' SLAB STAR AGAIN TOUCHES ONE-HIT NOTCH

Alexander Holds Brooklyn to a Lonesome Single, Gives No Passes, in Fast Game.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 26.—For the second time this month Alexander came within one safety of a no-hit mark when he pitched Philadelphia to a victory over Brooklyn today, 4 to 0. At St. Louis recently the only hit made off him was with two men out in the ninth inning, while today Wheat made a single in the eighth session. Alexander did not give a pass and was perfectly supported, so that only twenty-eight batsmen faced him during the game. The game was played in 1:00. Score:

BRAVES RALLY IN NINTH AND BEAT GIANTS, 7 TO 5.

New York, June 26.—The world's champion Braves evened the present series with New York by taking the second game 7 to 5 by a ninth inning rally. With men on second and third and one out, Marquard purposely passed Gowdy, but Rudolph singled, scoring two runs, and a third came in on Snodgrass' wild return. Two more runs were scored on Fitzpatrick's single, an infield out, and a wild throw by Merkle. Fletcher was ordered out of the game for protesting a decision.

Inquisitive Fans.

Morris, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A man on third, a man on second, no one out, and the batter drives the ball to the pitcher, who fields the same, runs over to the base line and waits for the runner. The runner stops and starts back toward the plate, but does not go out of the base line. Pitcher goes back to his box and runner then starts to first and makes it. Umpire calls him safe. Was he safe or out? S.

Runner was safe, as he had to be touched or fielded out at first base. He had the same right as any other base runner to stop and back up in the line to avoid being touched.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Kindly let me know if a delayed steal can be made with three men on bases, and how? FAN.

It has been done, but the man who did it was laughed out of the big leagues. It is done by starting after the ball is in the catcher's hands, but results in the man who makes it being put out, because the base he steals is bound to be occupied already.

Reader, Chicago, Ill.—"The Tribune" does not decide "guessing contests."

D. W. K., Chicago—You might obtain the information about Weaver from Secretary Harridge of the American league, 1512 Fisher building, if the official averages have been compiled to the date desired. They are not open to newspapers until the end of the season.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The ball was hit to the shortstop, who threw high to first base. The ball hit the first baseman's glove and fell into the other hand. The runner had not reached first base when the ball struck the glove, but reached there while the ball was falling into the other hand. Is the runner safe or out? P. R.

The runner is safe. The rule specifically says the ball must be "securely" held "before" the runner reaches first.

N. M. O'Connor, Webster City, Ia.—There is no record of a no hit game on both sides for ten innings in professional baseball. No complete records are kept of semi-professional games, so far as known.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Last half of ninth inning, score 12 to 9 in favor of visiting team. A doubles, B walks, C is out on infield hit, D is safe at first on slow infield hit, E is thrown out at first [called out by umpire], but remains at first, being overlooked by all, A scoring. F hits to short. Shortstop, thinking two were out and seeing E coming into second, tossed to second baseman for the force-out. Umpire called E out at second base, forgetting the decision at first on E. B and D scored. Thinking three were out, the second baseman threw ball to the bench and F scored when ball was thrown to bench. No ground rules governing the last play. Who was at fault and how should the protest be decided? G. W.

Every member of the visiting team and the umpires were at fault for what goes on record as the world's champion bonehead play. The rules don't provide for any such composite "forgetting," and there is no way to decide the mixup unless you play the game over.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] Inning 9, last half; score 11 to 10 in favor of the visiting club, and two down. The batting list called for Brownie, but Carlton came to bat and made a two base hit. The visiting club called for a decision on "batting out of order," and the umpire ruled that Brownie was out, according to rule 51, section 1. Was the umpire right? [2] The side at bat claimed the umpire could not declare the out because the scorekeeper had not called attention to the failure to bat in order. Umpire overruled the claim. Was he right or wrong? [3] If the umpire had declared Brownie out without an appeal from any one, would his decision not have been supported by rule 57? M. H. L.

[1] Right. [2] Right. The scorekeeper has nothing to say about it, as the rules prescribe that each team shall furnish the umpire with its batting order, which must be followed. [3] Yes. The same dispute arose in a game between the Cubs and Pittsburgh and the National league directors made the decision embodied in the foregoing answers.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] With a man on second or third, do you have to tag or throw the batter out at first if the last strike is dropped by the catcher? [2] If in the rule book please tell where? [3] How can we get score blanks to fill out to send in to put in the paper? B. F.

[1] Yes. [2] Rule 56, sections 3, 4, and 5. These give the only ways in which a man can be retired on a third strike unless first base is occupied with less than two out. [3] Send stamped and addressed envelope with your request to the sporting editor.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A man on first, a man on third. The batter hits a foul fly over the left field foul line. Left fielder goes after and catches it. Now, when the ball is caught has the man on third the right to try to make the run, and has the man on first the right to try to make second? JAMES McCARTHY.

Certainly, the same as on any other fly that is caught. A good outfielder would not have caught the ball if he knew it was foul.

Roseville, Ill.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—First base occupied, nobody out. Batter hits a fly ball to the infield. Is the batter out or does the fly have to be caught? C. A. C.

Notes of the White Sox.

Cleveland, O., June 26.—[Special.]—The Sox left tonight for Chicago, where they open a four days' engagement at Comiskey park tomorrow against the St. Louis Browns.

Although Eddie Collins limped while in the game, he expects to be in the battle tomorrow in Chicago. A ligament in his leg is on the bum.

Jim Scott, who was permitted to go home from here Thursday night, is slated to open against the Browns at the south side tomorrow.

Fournier's wallop in the ninth was a beauty, and would have put the Sox back in the fight, but it went in a line straight into Graney's hands for the third out. A runner was on first at the time.

The game today wound up the trip for the Sox. Since leaving home they have played twenty games, winning fourteen and losing six. They left home a game and a half in front and are going back with a much better lead.

Manager Rowland, who made a hasty and secret trip to Chicago while the Sox were idle Friday, was back on the job today. It was rumored he had gone to consult with Comiskey on a proposed big trade, but he said tonight there was nothing doing.

Wiltse Works with Feds.

New York, June 26.—Hooks Wiltse, old Giant pitcher and until a few days ago manager of the Jersey City club of the International league, appeared in a Brooklyn Federal uniform today at morning practice. Wiltse resigned his Jersey City post, securing an unconditional release.

"AD" MEN'S GAME A TIE AT ST LOUIS

Chicago Team Earns a Draw in Eleven Rounds, 4-4.

St. Louis, Mo., June 26.—[Special.]—Five thousand persons turned out today to see the Chicago and St. Louis ad men's teams battle to a 4-4 eleven inning tie. The game was for charity and there was a large representation of society, with women selling score cards and refreshments. Smith for Chicago allowed seven hits and struck out twenty-one men. He gave four bases on balls and made four wild pitches. St. Louis was lucky in bunching hits and walks with a couple of wild pitches in the eighth inning, counting three runs and tying the count. YALE SHUTS OUT HARVARD, 13 TO 0

Way Holds Crimson Batters to Three Hits in Last Game of Series.

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 26.—Yale shut out Harvard in their final game of the season at Ebbets field today, 13 to 0. Way held the Crimson to three hits, all of which were made in the first two innings. In the last seven innings only two Harvard men reached first base. Mahan was hit by a pitched ball in the sixth and Gannett walked in the seventh.

Waterman and Abbott were hurt in collision with base runners. The former retired from the game, while the latter pluckily continued. Score:

KNOCKS OUT AID; AVERTS DEFEAT IN FISTIC BOUT

Charley Burns Lands Kayo with Foot to Keep Own Second from Ring.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Charley Burns (remember Roughhouse, the gent who hailed from Cincy) is drifting around Chicago these days. It has been about eight years since Burns pulled on a padded mitt to do battle, but he's as full of fight as he ever was. In the time that "Roughhouse" mingled among the active birds of the ring he pulled many a funny trick, but the one he likes to tell about most took place when he fought a tough stock yards miller by the name of Buck Montgomery in Chicago.

Montgomery sprung up like a mushroom. One night he wasn't considered good enough to beat the punkest kind of a novice, but the next it was different, for the promoters saw in Buck one of the most promising middleweights they ever had looked at. For quite a spell after that Buck ruled as a windup performer. The stock yards man had discovered that he packed a mighty kick in his right fist and he learned how to use it, with the result he toppled them over with considerable regularity.

Burns Takes Real Lacing.

But when Buck met Burns there was a different story to tell. He didn't topple Roughhouse with the hefty right, for Burns stopped so many of the punches with his face and still refused to drop that Buck grew discouraged. Burns, like Montgomery, had gained a lot of reputation for right hand walloping, so it was a case of both laying to put over the stinger. The punches that found Burns' map had him looking as if he had been through a cyclone when the fourth round came around, but Charley was strong and still trying to lay over the right.

Finally about midway of the fourth the chance came, and as the thud of the mitt against Montgomery's jaw could be heard all over the hall Buck fell to the floor. He was nearly finished, but when the referee had counted six he gave a kick which indicated that he was "coming to." At the count of eight Buck was still stretched on the canvas and one of Burns' seconds, thinking the show was all over, started to crawl through the ropes.

Burns was quick to see the move and turned his attention to the second, who was half way into the ring before Roughhouse let go at his chin with his right hoof. The second was completely kicked out, for he landed in the crowd and it was several minutes before he regained consciousness.

Then Roughhouse turned around, and just in time, for Montgomery, who had regained his feet, came rushing at him swinging lefts and rights wildly. The bout went the limit and Burns was given the decision, but when he started to look for the second he had kicked out of the ring he couldn't find him and he didn't meet him face to face for many moons.

"Say, that bird nearly cost me the fight by climbing into the ring," said Burns in his dressing room. "I don't want any of these timid guys in my corner. Yes, I believe I did administer a bit of rough treatment."

Jess Willard Pulls One.

Big Jess Willard, world's heavyweight champion, carries a pretty good bean on the top of his huge frame. He demonstrated that fact long before he copped the title from Jack Johnson.

When he came to Chicago a couple of years ago he did his training at Nate Lewis' gymnasium. On the floor below was a billiard room where the boxers adjourned for a little play after the daily workout. One day Willard and Eddie McGoorty, the Oshkosh middleweight, hooked up in a pocket billiard match of twenty-five balls. The match was made through a kidding match, McGoorty boasting that he was the best fightercuist in the world. Willard disputed his claim to the title, so they put up a little bet to make it interesting and the battle was on.

McGoorty set a fast pace and led from the start. When he had pocketed twenty-three balls, while Willard's score stood at nineteen, it looked like a cinch the Oshkosh boy would be the winner. But that was where the cowboy fooled them, for he came back with a run of five balls and had a setup on the needed ball, which was near a corner pocket. He snot, but the ball found the crotch and wabbled, refusing to fall into the pocket. McGoorty, with a shout of glee, started for the other end of the table to "pick on the cripple," but suddenly the ball started moving again and dropped into the slot, giving Willard the match and side bet.

Tilts Table; Gets Ball.

McGoorty was more dazed and mystified than if he had been hit squarely on the point of the jaw by a right uppercut, but gamely coughed up his money.

It was a long time after that Willard tipped off how he beat McGoorty, and he probably wouldn't have let it out then but for the fact he repeated the trick. When he saw the ball wabble and that it wasn't going to fall in the pocket he reached down with his right hand and tilted the table enough to roll the ball in, waving his cue in his left hand at the same time to divert the attention of McGoorty and those watching the game. It was clever work and shows that Willard isn't a slow thinker.

PENTECOST TWICE WINNER AT DRIVING CLUB MATINEE.

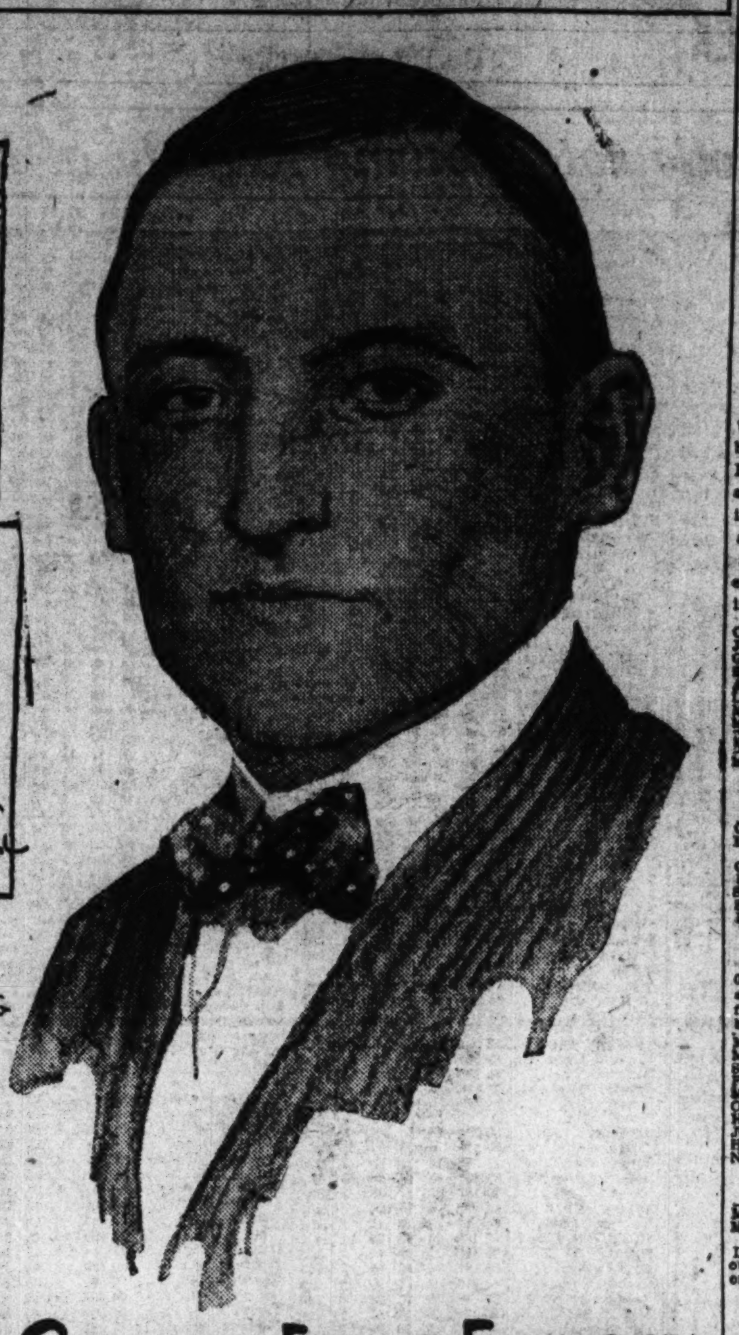
EARLY IN HIS UMPIRING CAREER HE HAD THE USUAL RECEPTION ACCORDED MEN OF THAT CALLING



CLARENCE ERNEST ELDRIDGE

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

In the summary of the box scores appended to the Detroit American league games of May 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, the first against the Athletics and the rest against Washington, appeared this usually insignificant line:

Umpires—Evans and Eldridge.

Of course, the fans all know "Fearless Bill" Evans, one of the best arbiters on President Johnson's staff. But who was Eldridge? Probably few in that crowd realized that the thin faced young man giving decisions on the bases was a practicing lawyer, an attorney from Chicago, who had been pressed into service. Yet this umpire was the legal light who had assisted in preparing the case by which the Kansas City club through an injunction suit forced the Federal league to enter a stipulation to retain Kansas City in the circuit this season.

The Kansas City case did not go to a final hearing. The reason it did not was because the Federal league attorneys realized they were beaten by the presentation of evidence from the firm of which the lawyer-umpire was a member. That umpire was Clarence Ernest Eldridge, alumnus of the University of Michigan.

"Dope" Eldridge, as he was known to his college friends because of newspaper work, must have a fighting instinct. He acted as a newspaper correspondent in his university days. That is an act of temerity in itself. If the correspondent writes what his newspaper wants, he is fired from college. If he writes the colorless stuff which most deans approve, his newspaper fires him. Eldridge survived in some way and took up amateur and then professional umpiring. He has been mobbed on the field several times and spirited away by the police to save him from injury.

Yet when Eldridge reaches a position where his income from the practice of law justifies him in sticking to his knitting, he jumps his office to act as sub umpire for one of Ban Johnson's staff who is sick.

When Eldridge returned to Chicago after the Detroit games, he was asked:

"Well, which will it be, umpiring or law."

"I know which I ought to do—stick to my law," replied Eldridge. "I also know which I would rather do. A regular position has not been offered me in the major leagues. I hope it isn't. I am almost afraid of my choice."

This curious specimen—we hope he will not object to such characterization—was born on June 24, 1888, in Three Rivers Mich., about twenty-eight miles south of Kalamazoo, where his father was foreman in a steel foundry. Eldridge attended the grade schools and was graduated from high school in 1904, entering the University of Michigan that fall.

At Ann Arbor, "Dope" Eldridge was correspondent for THE TRIBUNE for four years. He had a string of other newspapers which added to his TRIBUNE earnings. In the school year 1909-1910, when he also acted as managing editor of the University of Michigan Daily, his newspaper takings were between $2,000 and $2,200—not bad for a student who also is gaining his education.

Eldridge was graduated in 1909 at Ann Arbor, but continued his law studies for two years more, taking the degree of Doctor of Jurisprudence in 1911. He was a member of the Phi Alpha Delta legal fraternity. While in college, Eldridge was manager of the baseball team in 1909 and before that frequently umpired baseball games in which the Wolverines contested against Ohio teams. He also became almost a fixture as referee of the Michigan-Case football contest. Later Case, Ohio State, Oberlin, Western Reserve, Ohio Wesleyan, Wooster and others sought his services for football or baseball games against Michigan, although he was a Michigan student at the time—a remarkable tribute to his fairness.

It was while still a student that "Dope" had his most exciting experiences as a professional umpire, compared to which his college officiating was child's play. In the fall of 1906 he stopped at Jackson on his way back to Ann Arbor to play a friendly call on Jim Frank, now president of the Southern Michigan association, then managing editor of the Jackson Patriot. Learning that the regular umpire was sick, Eldridge telephoned Joe Jackson, president of the league, and asked for the job. Jackson knew "Dope" as the correspondent of the Detroit paper on which Jackson worked and, as it was the final game of the season, gave the appointment.

Battle Creek defeated Jackson, 2 to 0, and the whole affair was a good natured kidding match. "The players were mostly old timers, it was their last game, with nothing at stake, and they were having lots of sport with me, but I didn't know it," explains Eldridge. He received $7 for his work. That was the start.

In 1907 Eldridge temporarily left school to take the position of sporting editor of the Arkansas Gazette at Little Rock. Chief Zimmer quit as umpire and the late Judge Kavanaugh, president of the southern league, appointed Eldridge at a salary of $225 a month. Eldridge was mobbed in his first game.

Little Rock was playing at Memphis. There was a decision at third and Eldridge called out the Memphis runner. Catcher Ed Hurlburt, a local favorite, on the coaching line, protested the decision and was promptly put out of the game. He incited the left field bleachers and it was necessary to keep Eldridge in the clubhouse nearly an hour after the game before he could return to his hotel in safety.

During this interval "Dope" was visited by the sheriff and told he could not umpire the next day as the sheriff refused to be responsible for a lynching. Judge Kavanaugh was notified by Eldridge and replied that he was running the league, not the sheriff. Eldridge was there and there was no lynching.

Eldridge was not mobbed again for nearly two months. The next trouble took place at Memphis in the closing games of the season when Atlanta and Memphis were playing a crucial series of six games for the pennant. There were several close decisions at the plate in the first game. In the arguments Eldridge put the Memphis third baseman off the field. An outfielder went to third and a pitcher to the outfield. The pitcher outfielder misjudged a fly and lost the game.

The next day Eldridge's announcement of the batteries was drowned in a chorus of groans and catcalls. In the second inning, the crowd broke on the field and made a rush for him, but the players and police gathered round and order finally was restored.

Encouraged by such success, Eldridge did more work in the Southern league in 1908. He worked in the Southern Michigan league in 1909, and the Central league under Dr. Carson in 1910, and had his fair share of trouble both years. The following year he started the practice of law in Chicago, but for several years held his ear to the ground for big league offers.

Eldridge's first big league game was June 24, 1914, when he substituted for Bill Dinneen who had been assigned by President Johnson to the Michigan-Pennsylvania game. He worked with Connolly at Chicago. That was his last appearance until the games in Detroit in May, but he kept in fighting trim by refereeing eight football contests last fall.

Such is the story of "Dope" Eldridge, who at heart would prefer the thankless rôle of umpire to a lucrative law practice.

CARROLL FIGHTS TEN INNINGS FOR TIE WITH BARRY

K. of C. Nines Draw in Overtime Fray, 7-7; Overlock Fans Twenty Batters.

Carroll and Barry battled ten innings to a 7 to 7 tie in the Knights of Columbus league yesterday at Tigers' park. Darkness stopped the game. Six solid swats gave Barry six runs and the lead in the sixth round, but Halas' generosity and opportune hitting by Doyle and Spehn helped Carroll to a tie in the eighth. Silk Kavanaugh and Jameson led in the heavy stick work. Score:

HISTORIC RACE, THE BROOKLYN, WON BY TARTAR

R. T. Wilson's Entry Makes New Record for Nine Furlongs.

New York, June 26.—By winning the twenty-sixth renewal of the historic Brooklyn handicap at Aqueduct today and establishing a new track record of 1:50 3-5 for nine furlongs, R. T. Wilson's 5 year old bay gelding Tartar, by Ogden-Yankee Sister, carrying 108 pounds and ridden by Jockey Johnny McTaggart, accomplished all and a bit more than his owner and trainer expected from him. There were only a half dozen starters, but it was by far the best lot of thoroughbreds brought together in the east this season.

Short Grass, the English horse owned by Emil Hirs, was the only one to decline the issue, although seven carded overnight.

Andrew Miller's Roamer, who made his first appearance here this year, finished second, and Harry Payne Whitney's Borrow, the top weight, running in the silks of L. S. Thompson, was third. These two were the first and second public choices, while the winner was the outsider in the small field. The Belmont pair, Rock View and Sam McMeekin, and J. W. Messerney's Addie M. were well supported, but none of them lived up to expectations at any time during the race.

DROBACH DEFEATS RYAN IN FEATURE CYCLE RACE.

In the five mile motor paced race the feature event of the weekly races of the Riverview velodrome, Dorbach of Boston defeated Ryan of Newark in two of three heats. Drobach took the first heat and pedaled the distance in 7:41. Ryan was the winner of the second clash, and he covered the distance in 7:38 2-5. The Boston rider won the final and deciding heat in easy fashion in the fast time of 7:19. Ernest Kochler, the local amateur, won the two-thirds mile and three mile open amateur events. Summaries:

2-3 mile amateur, handicap—Won by Kochler, R. C. C.; Kuehl, R. C. C., second; McWhirter, Northwest S. C., third; Klassen, Danish-Am. A. C., fourth. Time, 1:20.

3 mile amateur—Won by Kochler, R. C. C.; Minnetti, R. C. C., second; Davini, Italo-Am. C. C., third; McWhirter, Northwest S. C., fourth. Time, 6:32.

1-3 mile professional, handicap—Won by Doefenbacher, 60 yards; Young, 50 yards, second; Krebs, 45 yards, third; McLean, 60 yards, fourth. Time, :34 3-5.

Unknown distance professional—Won by Lawson; Verri, second; Bedell, third; Piercey, fourth. Time, 5:37 for 2 miles and 5 laps.

THREE TIE FOR RIFLE LEAD.

Three trap shooters tied for first place at the Sportsmen's club shoot yesterday with marks of 94. O. P. Goode, A. Johnson, and L. R. Keller were the winning trio. Twenty-eight competed in the regular event of 100 shots. In a special handicap bird shoot A. Clemons won a gold medal and G. Washburne and H. Otter were second and third, respectively. Leading scores were:

O. P. Goode, 94; A. Johnson, 94; L. R. Keller, 94; W. R. Clifford, 89; L. B. Clarke, 89; J. H. May, 89; D. R. Little, 89; G. Steffins, 87; H. Otter, 87; D. A. Raymond, 86; J. A. Kelley, 85; J. Pedysift, 84; G. Holloway, 86; G. Washburne, 80.

WHIST QUERY.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Kindly inform me how the following game should be scored: We bid one no trump; opponents double it; we take in eleven tricks. I claim that we get 160 below the line for five doubled tricks, fifty above the line for contract, and 200 above for four extra tricks above contract. Also thirty above for three aces. J. B.

Answer: Your count was correct.

NOMAD ACTS AS REAR GUARD FOR RACING YACHTS

War Scribe, on Last Boat, Tells His Story Backwards; Valiant First.

BY JACK PROCTOR.

St. Joseph, Mich., June 26.—[Special.]—Nomad, G. H. Atkins' sixty-five foot schooner, sailed into port here today from Michigan City, Ind., absolutely last of a fleet of nine boats that left the Hoosier city this morning in the second leg of the Chicago Yacht club's triangular race. Nomad's time was 11:43:51, which was a great deal longer than any of the other boats remained out on the lake. This constitutes a record in that it is the longest time ever taken by a Chicago Yacht club boat in this leg of the triangular race.

Second to last was C. H. Morgan's schooner Nahant, which was nearly eight minutes ahead of Nomad. Third from the rear was Neoga. George O. Clinch's yawl Arcadia was fourth from last. The fifth boat was Josephine. Capsicum was sixth from last place, with Maia seventh ahead of Nomad. Otto Schoenwerk's Banshee was next to first.

War Scribe at Rear.

The race was won by Fred A. Price's sailing, the class P sloop Valiant making the thirty-six miles in 6:21:49. (Your correspondent had to write the race this way because he sailed on the Nomad and saw the contest from the rear.)

The yachts started with a fair breeze from Michigan City, and for ten or twelve miles made good time. Valiant went into the lead right at the line, and with Banshee, Maia, and Capsicum held in close to shore. When the wind changed and came out of the north, making the leg a dead beat to weather, the new sloops pointed much higher and footed a great deal faster than the old type of craft as represented by the big schooners and yawls, and before half the distance was made it was easily seen that the older boats didn't have a chance.

Valiant Wins Leg Easily.

Valiant led the fleet over the line here more than thirty-eight minutes ahead of Banshee, the class R sloop which won yesterday's contest. In the light going that obtained Banshee, however, proved its superiority over Maia and is now conceded to be the champion R boat of Lake Michigan.

This race makes Valiant and Banshee tied for first honors in the triangular run, and the contest tomorrow, which will be sailed from here to Chicago, will be the decisive leg. No other boat has a chance to beat out these craft unless it be Maia, which has two thirds to its credit.

Summary of Race.

GLEN VIEW IDEAL FOR GOOD GOLFER, SAYS DONAGHEY

Changes at Famous Course Make It Perfect Place for Right Kind of Player.

BY FREDERICK DONAGHEY.

Golf at Glen View has ever been grateful and comforting, as the cocoa ads in the theater programs would put it. It is in no degree less so as a result of what has been done to the exquisite course. It remains, among golf grounds, of the elect—an ideal retreat where the game may be followed without loss of any of its flavor as sport, even though the very deliberateness of the scheme of beauty and luxury in surroundings be regarded as part of a plan to take from golf some of its original ruggedness and its suggestion of a sort of elemental sturdiness.

The creation of Old Elm and Indian Hill has, of course, served to make Glen View less nearly unique than when it had Chicago Golf as its sole rival in this neighborhood. The changes made since the end of the season of 1913 have all been in the way of betterment of the links, and are, in scheme, in the precise spirit of the modern golf-architecture of the two new north shore courses.

Mr. Ferguson's Ideas Used.

Pretty nearly all the Glen View changes were suggested by President Ferguson, whose regard for the course is something very much like actual veneration. That is, and has ever been, a typical Glen View manifestation—that devotion of the members to the ideal of their links as a perfect place for the playing of perfect golf by those who can play that kind of game. It is the spirit which makes for the replacing of divots without spoken or posted admonition; the spirit which makes of every Glen-Viewer a volunteer member of the greens committee; the spirit which makes for as fine a course at the end of November as the members find when they start play at the beginning of May. Other clubs may possess the spirit, but none other, so far as I have discerned, in the degree and warmth and unselfishness of the Glen View golfers.

Colt and Ross Did the Work.

The new aspects of the course represent the work of Colt and Ross, the designers and builders of Old Elm. It was to this admirable team Mr. Ferguson turned over the ideas he had studied and pondered. He "caught" Colt when the latter was in the country to design Old Elm; and the finishing touches were given by Ross, whose handicraft is to be noted now on virtually every hole.

The graceful, easy curves of the Ross ter was in the country to design Old Elm; and Indian Hill can be easily recognized in the revisions at Glen View. Not a spadeful of earth was, in making the changes, dug for the mere sake of creating punitive hazards regardless of the logic of distances and of the fixed measurements of par. Some of the players will tell you that the course, since the changes, is "slower," meaning their 85 [say] of 1913 was a 90 last year, and is not yet an 87. But they can successfully be defied to point to a single change that represents gratuitous penalizing, or that will not, in the end, be of advantage to their game.

Beautifying Eighteenth Hole.

Glen-Viewers, before the changes, always pointed to the sixth, "Old Hickory," as their notion of a "great golf hole." It was; and it is, although there has been, I think, a shift of affections to the eighteenth. Ross' changes on the latter, however, struck me as being made more in the interest of good landscaping than to intensify the difficulty of getting what has always been a hard 4.

The wide, square cornered pit on the side of the hill below the home green has been made into three circular kettle-shape traps; and a trap has been placed back of the green. But the tee is where it always was, with the drive across the river where it broadens to exact a clear carry for a fair lie. The player good enough to get his 4 on the eighteenth two years ago may still get it with the same kind of golf, I think—and so with the player who then habitually got a 5 or a 6 there.

New Hazards for the Famous Sixth.

"Old Hickory" remains, to me, the star hole of Glen View. Its old finish of "frightfulness"—that forbidding, abysmal pit which had to be carried on the approach—has been ameliorated, and is now a suave and sodded depression with logical edges and banks, making possible, although by no means inviting, a skillful running-up shot. The green was left by Ross at its famous tilt, demanding that the approach be deftly shot if the ball is to stick.

The radical change on this famous sixth has been made for the drive. Superb bunkers now divide the carry-rough from the fairway, running obliquely to the right and left, and nearly converging about a hundred yards from the tee to give, perhaps, fifteen feet of passage to the short drive possessing perfect direction. The longer the drive, the less the penalty for departure from the crowline.

The square trap which bisected the hole at about the 300 yard line has been filled and rolled into sheer fairway, and the penalties now are at the sides, in the form of reasonable traps. There is nothing to take toll from straight work with driver, brassie, or iron until the problem of the green is reached.

Other New Things at Glen View.

The most marked change on any of the other holes has to do with the sixteenth, which was, perhaps, the least interesting of the old course. A characteristic Ross hillside trap is now encountered on the approach, and gives to the hole a piquancy it never before possessed for the man able so to negotiate its 387 yards that he was on the green with his second shot.

Ross has done away with the cop bunkers on all holes, improving in every case with his putts and traps. He and Colt may be described as practicing disciples of orificial surgery as the correct method of curing golf courses suffering from mumps!

CAPT. JACOMINI, LELAND STANFORD

CORNELL IN TIME TRIAL NEAR POUGHKEEPSIE BRIDGE

Results of Play on Golf Courses.

PRESIDENT J. T. LLEWELLYN of the Midlothian club scored a well earned victory in the match play event against bogey yesterday afternoon. Getting a net score of 83, he finished 8 up on the colonel, but was closely pressed by C. L. Safford and J. S. Porter, who finished 7 up. Safford had a gross of 90 and a net of 74, Porter getting a net of 77 with a gross of 95.

W. J. Black finished 5 up and tied with F. B. Houston. J. H. Johnson finished 4 up. Donald Edwards, playing from scratch, notched an 81 and finished 2 up. Only two matches in the third round for the Clark Dean trophy were decided and resulted as follows: F. B. Houston defeated Donald Edwards, 3 and 1. C. L. Safford won by default from L. A. Wiley.

Beverly.

The feature event at Beverly club was the final for the Milligan trophy, in which A. H. Hepburn defeated J. T. Henry, 3 and 2. J. H. Wheeler won low gross on the even holes in the eighteen hole handicap event with a card of 41—11—30. Low gross on the odd holes went to J. A. Mudd Jr., who had 43—5—38. H. E. Sever was low net for the full eighteen holes with a card of 92—26—66.

Edgewood.

E. M. Carpenter won the entertainment committee prize in the handicap at Edgewood. With a handicap of 36 strokes he completed the course in 105, setting a low net mark of 69. Frank DeWitt, with a total of 80, handicap of 4 and 76 was second. The other leaders follow: E. Davies, 94—19—75; C. Horr, 93—18—75; F. Pridmore, 101—26—75; H. Mitchell, 83—8—75; O. Wakefield, 98—20—78; J. Fletcher, 114—36—78; S. Cooper, 111—33—78; P. Libbey, 98—20—78; H. Freeman, 116—36—79; B. Cheney, 114—34—80.

A. M. Sanquist defeated W. Horn, 6 and 4, in the semi-finals for the sports and pastimes committee trophy. S. Tiffany won from W. Craig in a semi-final match, 1 up.

Wheaton.

H. W. La Rue won the Directors' cup at Wheaton, when he defeated W. H. Waterbury, 2 and 1. In class "B" S. Brown defeated H. D. Blount, 2 and 1, while H. S. Deane and C. B. Harper tied in class "C." Low gross honors in the sweepstakes went to F. J. Douglass, with 85—7—78, M. D. Miner getting low net with 89—17—72. In the playoff for the class "A" medal H. W. La Rue defeated F. J. Douglass, 75 to 78.

Westward Ho.

	G.	N.		G.	N.
W. Kettlestrings	81	75	T. H. Jones	90	81

Skokie.

Members of the Skokie Country club competed in a best ball foursome. Winners with choice net scores were: T. O. King, O. W. Allison, C. J. Miller, and R. W. Hall. This quartet had a card of 84—24—60. G. Copeland, S. A. Wilmarth, G. Sibley, and I. McCurdy won combined gross prize with a total of 348, and they also had choice gross of 72. Low combined net honors went to G. M. Witherspoon, J. D. Small, W. Howell, and De C. Lloyd, who had 367—49—318.

Ravenswood.

Matches in the semi-final round for the Seever cup yesterday at the Ravenswood club resulted in nip and tuck finishes. S. E. Hackett, by defeating C. C. Zillman, 1 up, won the right to contest for final honors with R. P. Gates, who took the measure of C. H. Challen, also by 1 up. In the semi-finals for the Karpinsky cup, J. A. Wettling eliminated R. C. MacPherson by 5 and 4, while A. C. Ward removed H. B. Field, 7 and 5.

Evans Sets New Record.

"Chick" Evans yesterday set a new record of 74 for the La Grange Country club, clipping three strokes off the previous amateur and professional marks.

Harry Simons held the amateur record for the course, which he made last year, while Robert McNulty held the professional mark. Evans' card was:

Out	5	4	3	5	5	3	4	4	4	37
In	4	5	4	3	5	4	3	4	5	37—74

Aided by an allowance of 50 strokes, J. H. Jones turned in low net for the last eighteen of thirty-six holes for the house committee trophy with a total of 204—50—154. Low gross honors went to E. M. Hicok, with 181.

Evanston.

G. W. Smith won the Walker cup, defeating H. B. Knowlton in the final at Evanston, 4 and 3. Final matches in the class handicap resulted as follows:

Class A—D. W. Alyyson defeated C. E. Fargo, 1 up.

Class B—J. D. Murphy defeated J. W. Horton, 6 and 5.

Class C—E. A. Fargo and A. R. Morse, postponed.

Elliott Evans had low gross of 75 in the sweepstakes, W. H. Jamieson getting 81, and G. Packard and A. H. Rockhold notching 83. R. S. Griefen, 87—19—68, won the low gross prize, J. H. Barchard, 94—25—69, and J. D. Murphy, 88—19—69, tying for second place.

Exmoor.

Exmoor members competed in a putting contest in connection with an eighteen hole handicap. It was necessary to have a low net of 78 or better in order to qualify for the putting prizes. Prize winners were:

Class A—H. A. Towner, 84—6—78, 28 putts.
Class B—W. R. Tapper, 91—14—77, 31 putts.
Class C—C. M. Hoof, 95—18—79, 27 putts.

Windsor.

H. L. Fisher had low net score of 74 in the qualifying round for the E. P. Cockrell cup at Windsor, R. B. Sullivan having low gross of 83. In the final for the President's cup, Beverly F. Hall defeated H. C. Johannis, 6 and 5. Scores and pairings for the Cockrell cup:

	G.	N.		G.	N.
H. L. Fisher	101	74	W. G. Warren	88	82
J. F. Downer	74	77	K. N. Tinkle	96	82

R. B. Sullivan	83	81	R. C. Wilson	89	83
J. P. Field	90	82	J. F. Chelius	97	83

Jackson Park.

William Beard and William Hornberger, with cards of 91—16—75 and 98—23—75, respectively, tied for the blind bogey prize at Jackson park, each hitting the bull's-eye. A. C. Anson, 90—13—77; J. H. Theobold, 99—22—77, and W. T. McNeilly, 97—20—77, tied for second position. H. A. Smith, with 74, and P. McCann, with 78, had the best low gross scores.

Onwentsia.

Three teams tied in the best ball foursome at Onwentsia, with net totals of 80. E. I. Cudahy and Frank Hibbard finished with a card of 87—7—80, while Leeds Mitchell and H. W. Letton returned a card of 88—8—80 and A. D. Farwell and R. D. Stuart notched 82—2—80, which also gave them low gross honors. S. T. Chase and G. H. Ingalls followed with a card of 86—4—82.

Chicago.

In the play for the Saturday afternoon cup yesterday at the Chicago Golf club W. H. Lyford won with a card of 99—22—77. Gilbert E. Porter won the play off for the Goodrich cup, which is played for annually on Decoration day, when he returned a card of 82—12—80, after being tied with Addison Stilwell.

Edgewater.

At Edgewater the members completed in an eighteen hole medal handicap, divided into three classes. H. M. Hosick won in class A with a card of 87—15—72 and A. J. Kasper Jr. took the honors in class B, returning a score of 89—17—81. In class C, M. H. Seegars was the victor with a total of 102—30—72.

Class A—G. M. McConnell defeated L. E. Ernst, 1 up.

Class B—C. T. Hays defeated P. T. Starck, 2 and 1.

YOUNG MR. YOUNG WINS VETS' CUP FROM CAPT. HUNT

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Two of Chicago's best septuagenarian golfers, A. N. Young, now in his seventy-seventh summer, and Capt. R. W. Hunt, who is one year younger, met in the final for the Maturity cup at Glen View club yesterday and the former won, 4 and 3.

It was the fourth success scored by the winner in this event, which is an annual at Glen View, open to all players of 60 years of age and over. Mr. Young had a handicap of seventeen, Capt. Hunt having one stroke less.

Rollin W. Keyes won the Frazier cup by defeating Brown, 2 up, in a well fought final.

J. H. Barnard Wins Cup.

In the semi-final round for the Fellowship II. cup J. H. Barnard defeated J. E. Pumphrey, 2 up, while E. E. Mac Leod won from C. A. Cook. L. W. Stratlin won the ball sweepstakes with a card of 98—24—74, which also led the field in the qualifying round for the Deering Benedict trophy. The qualifiers for the latter prize follow:

L. W. Stratlin, 98—24—74; H. I. Robinson, 102—23—79; J. J. Charles, 89—9—80; S. F. Miller, 99—19—80; R. F. Pettibone, 101—21—80; Dr. W. Walter, 93—12—81; J. E. Blunt Jr., 96—15—81; A. D. Langworthy, 105—24—81.

Open New West Side Course.

After two delays on account of rain the new nine hole public course at Warren Woods was opened yesterday afternoon. In the absence of President Grower of the west parks board, Starter Jack Taylor of the Garfield course drove the first ball. As the opening had not been given much publicity, the crowd was not large, about seventy-five playing. The course is 3,400 yards in length and considering the amount of work done on it is in fairly good shape. Its opening will relieve the congestion at Garfield park. The new park is located two blocks south of the end of the Madison street car line. A capacity crowd is expected out today.

Calumet.

W. Schoenthaler won the ball sweepstakes at Calumet with a card of 85—16—69. Ties followed among the other six players, each of whom was awarded a prize. Scores: W. Schoenthaler, 85—16—69; C. B. Cameron, 95—23—72; A. G. Erwin, 87—15—72; R. W. Fulton, 89—16—73; J. H. McElroy, 103—30—73; F. L. Fake, 101—27—74; J. A. Cashin, 98—24—74.

The second match rounds for the President's cups were also decided and resulted as follows: First flight—F. L. Fake defeated J. A. Cashin, 1 up; C. Rathbun defeated H. C. Rockwell, 1 up;

Ridgemoor.

By finishing 2 down, John Simpson won the match play against par [73] event at Ridgemoor. The second match round for the age limit resulted as follows: H. H. Piper defeated W. B. Warden, 3 and 4; A. C. Fordham defeated S. J. L. Kelb, 4 and 3; R. E. Williams defeated W. H. Boes, 1 up; E. A. Thornton defeated J. W. Robb, 4 and 3.

CREWS ON EDGE FOR BIG REGATTA

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 26.—College men and rowing enthusiasts began to arrive here tonight for the intercollegiate regatta which takes place on the Hudson Monday afternoon.

Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, and Stanford crews were on the water this afternoon for an easy paddle, just enough to keep them in trim, the coaches announcing that their personal work was done and that it was up to the men in the shells.

The Stanford crew will go on the water tomorrow for practice. Coach Guerena held that the six days' journey across the continent pulled down their work considerably.

Minard Among Missing.

Minard, No. 2 in the Syracuse varsity crew, still is out of the boat with an infected finger and Dodge is rowing in his place. It is probable that Minard will not get back for the race.

In front of the Cornell quarters this afternoon the Cornell freshman substitutes in a pair oar defeated the Pennsylvania freshman substitutes by nearly three lengths in a half mile row. The time was 2:31 3-5. J. P. Egbert and William Courtney, nephew of the Cornell coach, rowed a spirited contest.

Mongrels Badly Beaten.

Then Calder and Othus, Cornell varsity substitutes, rowed the "mongrel" crew, made up of Rehm of Stanford, Moir of Cornell, and a Pennsylvania coxswain. The mongrels used a Pennsylvania shell, but could not manage the hole pine, being badly beaten. The time was 2:50.

AMERICAN "AD" GOLFERS OPEN ANNUAL TOURNEY.

Hot Springs, Va., June 26.—[Special.]—The tenth annual tournament of the American Golf association of advertising interests opened today with a four ball match, in which four players played as partners, the best ball of the four to count and the handicap being one-sixteenth of the combined handicap of the four partners. There were fifty-six entries. Two net scores of 74 were turned in, one by George D. Jones, Hinsdale; R. L. Whitten, Highland Park; F. A. Sperry, Westward Ho, and C. L. Collette, Midlothian, 73—3—74, and the other by B. F. Sawin, Frank Smith, Westward Ho, and William Campbell and S. R. McKelvie, Lincoln Country.

WILLIAMS WINS TENNIS CONTEST ON CLAY COURTS

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 26.—The sixth national clay court tennis championship tournament opened at the Pittsburgh Athletic club this afternoon. Twenty-four matches in the men's preliminary singles and three matches in the first round were played.

Interest centered in the appearance of R. Norris Williams of Philadelphia, American amateur champion. It was on these courts that he won the clay court championship from Hayes of Chicago three years ago. He was pitted against Harmar Denny Jr. of Pittsburgh today, and won by a score of 6—2, 9—7. The local man gave the champion a hard fight. Summary:

Victor Bihlman, Pittsburgh, defeated Donald McLeod, Pittsburgh, 6—4, 7—5.

In the semi-final round of the mixed doubles of the Washington park tennis tourney Miss Amanda Falker and C. Fisher defeated Miss Lillian Litt and D. R. Black, 7—5, 3—6, 6—4.

NET STARS OPEN BEACH TOURNEY

Burdick, Weber, and Gifford Win Opening Sets in Invitation Meet.

BY KEENE GARDINER.

Ralph Burdick, runner-up for the city tennis title; Jimmy Weber, former prep star from the Harvard school, and Harold Gifford, a prominent figure in the recent city tourney, carried off preliminary matches in the invitation tournament at the Chicago Beach hotel yesterday. The three singles matches were all the scheduled contests played. Hayes, Chicago champion; Al Lindauer, former winner of the net meet in connection with Stagg's interscholastic games; Al Green, conference title holder at the game in 1913; Jerry Weber, an interscholastic expert, and W. McKay, winner of the recent University of Chicago prep tournament, played in exhibition matches.

Burdick eliminated D. F. Wiley, 6—2 and 6—0, and Gifford had an easy time with W. S. Hillis, taking his match in straight love sets. The match between James Weber and Fulton of the Sherwood club was the best, the academy star winning by scores of 6—4 and 6—3.

Men's singles will be continued today, the play starting at 10 o'clock this morning. Jerry Weber will meet H. F. Prussing at 11 o'clock, and Floyd Terrent, Hyde Park High school star in the 1914 Stagg games, will take the court against H. T. Byford, and Lindauer will play M. G. Ketcham in the afternoon. The women's matches will begin Tuesday, and play will be continued morning and afternoon throughout the week, the women playing in the morning and men in the afternoon.

REACH SEMI-FINAL ROUNDS IN JUNIOR TENNIS EVENTS.

After elimination rounds in which seventy players took part in singles and forty teams were entered in doubles, the semifinals in the annual tournament of the Chicago Hebrew institute will be played this morning. James Weber, the champion last year, and Weber and Siegel, the 1914 winning pair in doubles, survived the preliminary rounds and will take part in the matches today as favorites. The best match yesterday was that in the third round of the singles, in which Littman eliminated Nath, a Wendell Phillips High shcool player, 6—2, 6—8, and 6—4.

Weber, Siegel, Littman, Ries, and H. Vance will play today. In the doubles, Weber and Siegel, Campbell and McLoughlin, Littman and Nath, Zeman and Smith, and Cohn and Golan survive the play. Summaries:

Singles—L. Smith defeated Smidl, 6—4, 6—4; Adler defeated G. Campbell, 6—2, 2—6, 6—2; Littman defeated Nieman, 6—3, 6—4; Nath defeated Pearlman, 6—1, 6—3; James Weber defeated H. Cooper, 6—0, 6—4; Zeman won from E. Weber by default; Haskell won from Vance by default; Goldstein won from L. Campbell by default; Byer won from G. Murphy by default; J. Cohn won from Kirk by default; L. Murphy defeated Goldman, 6—3, 6—8, 6—4; A. Ries won from Dunlap by default; P. Siegel defeated Kramer, 6—2, 6—3, and McLoughlin won from Meyers by default.

Doubles—Campbell and McLoughlin defeated Nieman and Zernier, 6—1, 6—0; Kramer and Goldman defeated Pearlman and Haskell, 6—3, 8—6; Littman and Nath defeated Myer and Adler, 6—2, 6—3; Golan and Lippman won from Dunlap and Murphy by default; Zeman and Smith defeated Nath and Ries, 6—2, 6—4, and Siegel and Weber won from Kirk and partner by default.

CHICAGO WOMEN VICTORS IN CENTRAL NET TOURNEY.

Kansas City, Mo., June 26.—Illinois women won both the singles and doubles title in the Central West tennis tournament for women which ended here at dark tonight. Miss Mary Katherine Voorhees of Evanston is the new champion in singles and Miss Louise Pound and Miss Carrie B. Neeley, both of Chicago, share the doubles title.

In the first set Miss Pound took the first five games straight. The Evanston woman then took three straight, but lost the next game. The following set was hard fought and Miss Voorhees saved it from a deuce by a narrow margin. At the beginning of the third set Miss Voorhees appeared to weaken, and Miss Pound took the first three games, although each went to deuce. Starting with the three game handicap, she took the set, allowing her opponent but one game in the last seven played.

The doubles final, which Miss Voorhees and Miss Lyl Hayes of Kansas City lost 5-7, 6-4, 6-4, is said to be the hardest fought match ever seen here.

WOOD AND IRON TEAM FIRST IN ELECTRIC MEET

Department Gets 70 Points in Western Company's Competition.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

Represented by an evenly balanced team of athletes who scored points in ten of the thirteen events, the wood and iron department yesterday won the third annual interdepartment outdoor track and field meet of the Western Electric company, held on the plant's grounds, with a total of 70 points. The plant department finished in second place with a total of 21 points, and the technical department was third with 20 units.

W. J. Watson of the winning group was responsible for placing his team in an early lead. He won the half, mile, and two mile runs in easy fashion, and his teammates later came along with enough points to give the wood and iron department the verdict by a large margin.

Tied for Individual Honors.

Another athlete who helped the winning team was Fey, the former star of the La Grange High school championship team. The suburbanite won the 90 yard low hurdles, running broad jump, and the 90 yard high hurdles. As a result of his efforts he tied with Watson for individual honors with 15 points.

One hundred and twenty athletes, representing twelve departments, took part in the competition, which was seen by a gathering of 2,000 persons, most of whom were employés of the company. The winners of the first three places were awarded loving cups, and the winning team was given a shield emblematic of the interdepartment championship.

Creditable Feats Performed.

Despite the heavy rains of the early morning, which left the track in a slow condition and made the jumping pits unfit for good leaps, creditable performances were made. Summaries:

GARIBALDI AND HIS THOUSAND

PAINTED by P. NONELL

The reclamation of "Italia Irredenta," or that "unredeemed Italy" which comprises Trieste and Trentino, was the prime motive which caused Italy to forswear its obligations to Germany and Austria imposed by the articles of the triple alliance. Giuseppe Garibaldi, whose name for over half a century has been the oriflamme of Italy's patriotism, was the hero of "redeemed" Italy and his name and deeds were invoked recently whenever agitations in behalf of war were made. Herbert Caxton has written herewith the story of Garibaldi, to wear whose red shirt was at one time as great an honor as to wear the royal purple.

By HERBERT CAXTON.

"SELDOM do we find that a whole people can be said to have any faith at all, except in things that it can eat and handle. Whensoever it gets any faith, its history becomes spirit stirring."

These words written by Carlyle concerning the French at the time of their great revolution apply with equal aptness to the Italians. The unity of the nation in the war which it has just begun against Austria justifies it being called a people's war. Whatever its justice of the cause which compelled the declaration of hostilities, there can be no doubt that the people desired war, and that the king and his ministers acted under the strongest popular pressure. Not to have so acquiesced would have imperiled the house of Savoy.

The faith which inspires that nation today is the result of the rights of man which the American colonists gave to the world in 1776, but which the French rewrote twenty years later in the blood of their dynasty.

The new birth of Italy may be said to have begun when Napoleon with his republican army entered the country and thus spread the gospel of liberty and a constitution to the freedom hungry Italians who had languished under foreign tyrants for centuries. The ideals then implanted were not to be fully realized for many years, but the plant was hardy and not even the rigors of an absolutist winter were sufficient to kill it. As in Germany, it withstood the assaults and, though an exotic, it adapted itself to the foreign soil and flourished into full blossom after the blood of patriotism had watered it for two generations.

To two men, unfriendly yet unselfish for the same cause, is due the greater part of the credit for a united Italy. These men were Cavour and Garibaldi, the statesman and the soldier. Each unreservedly gave himself for Italy, but Cavour disapproved of the rashness of Garibaldi's methods and Garibaldi could not understand Cavour's diplomacy and statesmanship. Had it not been for intriguers the warrior might in time have forgiven the statesman for ceding Nice, Garibaldi's birthplace, to France, but as it was the death of Cavour found the two patriots still unreconciled.

Italy's Man of Honor.

For over half a century the name of Garibaldi has been the oriflamme of Italy's patriotism. No king, no statesman, no warrior has received greater adulation from the people he served. At the height of his popularity he was regarded almost as a demi-god. To have worn the red shirt of the Garibaldini was as great an honor as to have carried the royal purple. From that time to the present day there has scarcely been a war or a revolution in which one of the family has not taken part. In France, in Cuba, in the South Americas, and in Mexico some son or nephew has drawn the sword, and three of the old hero's grandsons have died within the last ten months wearing the uniform of France.

Giuseppe Garibaldi was Italy's man of the hour. Fitted by nature and experience for the task to which he set himself, by his valor and his personality he fired the Italian heart with an indomitable spirit which has persisted to the present time, a spirit which quailed at no obstacle, no odds. The Italians have been proud of their kings and completely loyal, but no king, no statesman has ever made them forget the debt they owe Giuseppe Garibaldi, the red shirted hero of 1860.

No novel ever written contained a better hero or one with a more romantic career. From his first appearance in the public affairs of Italy to his beautiful death on the lovely Caprera isle his career was a continuous succession of dramatic incidents which no manufactured play could excel.

Nicean born, he inherited from some one a most passionate love of liberty, an undaunted courage, fertile resource, the power to command, and military science within certain lines. Added to all this was an almost childlike simplicity and gentleness and a generous nature. This combination of qualities appealed strongly to the impressionable Italians. Garibaldi was the revolutionary spirit incarnate, not the insensate revolution of the French in 1793 but the revolt of their softer brethren of the south.

Equally at home with a boat, a horse, or a sword, Garibaldi appeared at the psychological moment, creating as much enthusiasm among those who acclaimed him as leader as he did consternation among the statesmen who were trying to bring about a united Italy by other and slower means.

Giuseppe Garibaldi, destined to be the hero of redeemed Italy, was born at Nice in 1807, a French subject of the great Napoleon. His family, however, was pure Italian. The father was a fairly prosperous merchant and ship owner. The boy went to school a few years, but retained little of what he learned there. There was another and greater school in which he was to do better, the school of life and experience. As a youth the mountains and sea were too near for him to pay much attention to books of any sort. French and Italian he spoke equally well, and later in life he acquired a working knowledge of English.

At 15 his father let him go to sea, and for ten years he was a sailor, advancing to a captaincy, learning navigation, mathematics, geography, astronomy, and commercial law. He visited all the Mediterranean and Black sea ports and had many adventures, being three times captured by pirates.

Goes to South America.

Up to this time liberal ideas had not touched him, but it was with astonishment and joy when in the Black sea a compatriot, Cuneo, unfolded to him the program of Young Italy, the lodges of which association, supplanting the Carbonaro, had already been started in many parts of Italy. When he comprehended the plight in which his country wallowed and the plans under which the patriots were working for her redemption he was happier at the discovery than Columbus was at his.

He at once threw himself with all the ardor of his nature into the movement, of which Mazzini was the leading spirit. At this time the government Young Italy in Piedmont had to fear was that of Charles Albert, then a cautiously conservative king whose officers were as much opposed to liberalism as the Austrians themselves, and who was bound to the league of Italian monarchs who hated and feared republicanism.

It was in 1834 that Garibaldi took part in his first revolution. Garibaldi had been sent to Genoa to corrupt the king's navy. The mission failed completely and the motley force which Mazzini had led from Switzerland fled back in defeat. Garibaldi in disguise made his way to Marseilles, where he read his name proscribed in a proclamation condemning him to death. For two years he wandered about an exile, when he took ship for South America with some companions to join other of his countrymen who had preceded him.

At Rio Janeiro he and another Italian set up a merchandise shop and also did trading in a little vessel of their own. But Garibaldi was not cut out for trade, and he was soon engaged on the side of the revolutionists in Rio del Sud. He obtained a ship, and this for a time was the rebel "navy." As a privateer he was a success from the first, and he rendered such service that his name became known for hundreds of miles up and down the coast. From time to time he alternated between sea and land service, and in the latter he got the guerrilla experience which was to stand him so well in after years.

At the head of bands sometimes only a score and sometimes running into the hundreds, he covered vast stretches of country—pampas, forests, and hills—attacking with great swiftness the government forces, or eluding them in the tropical wilderness when confronted by superior numbers. He learned to manage a horse with the best of his guacho followers and to handle the rifle and musket with deadly effect. These hardy men, who rode like centaurs, were often compelled to ride without food night and day for hundreds of miles. They slept in the open, fed on game which they shot when they could. The natives were friendly, but they were few and scattered. The revolutionary "army" had no commissariat and no medicine or surgeons.

On one occasion Garibaldi, who was the leader, was captured and tortured by the government troops for two hours, but managed to escape and rejoin his scattered command. Afterward when the brutal officer who had ordered his torture fell into his hands Garibaldi astonished every one by a display of that generosity for which he was always famous by setting him free.

Later Garibaldi was shipwrecked and lost some of his most beloved followers, but he managed to reach the shore with the rest of his command and took part in the capture of Laguna in the province of Santa Caterina, Brazil. The imperial fleet was also captured and he took command of it.

Meets the One Woman.

It was then that he met the woman who was to be his wife. Anita Riberas was the one woman in all the world who was a fitting mate for him. Beautiful, athletic, fearless, and a magnificent horsewoman, she was what he desired. She was promised by her father to a man she did not love. Garibaldi took her by storm and they eloped. She accompanied him on his campaigns, riding abreast with him, sharing the dangers of battle, in which she fought like a man, or hiding in the jungle when pursued. She was captured in a fight, but escaped at night on a horse she stole from her captors. Her first child was born almost on a battlefield, one might say, and the infant son, named for an Italian patriot, was taken with them wherever they went.

Hunted by the imperial troops, Garibaldi and Anita slept in the jungle for weeks at a stretch during the bitterly cold tropical nights, and often went hungry for days.

Then Garibaldi was called by Uruguay to defend it against Rosas, the Argentine president. He organized a navy which performed excellent service and then gathered together his Italian legion, composed of Italians living there. This proved to be the nucleus of the celebrated force which he took back to Italy later on. They wore the red shirts which became so famous in the war for Italian liberty. They had seen severe guerrilla service in Uruguay and Brazil, a turbulent lot, but good shooters and splendid horsemen. Garibaldi drilled them to perfection and made them religiously loyal to his person. Some of them had fought in many revolutions in Europe under different flags and several became valuable aids to Garibaldi when they went back with him. At least one of the battles they won for Uruguay became world famous.

He took nothing for his services and he and Anita lived upon his soldier's rations. Several sons were born to the couple, and the youngest, Ricciotti, now over 80, still burns with the Garibaldian fire, as dispatches from Paris and Rome attest.

News of Garibaldi's fame reached Italy, and he in turn heard that the flag of liberty had been raised in the kingdom of Naples. Later he heard of other deeds Young Italy was performing and at last he set sail on April 15, 1848, for his home land, taking with him a number of his followers.

It was his luck to arrive home in the year of revolutions. Hungary had risen against Austria. Louis Philippe had been driven out of Paris, the Germans had rebelled against autocracy, and all over Italy was the spirit of revolt. Milan had driven out an Austrian army of 20,000 and there were uprisings elsewhere. But there was no Italian unity.

His services having been rejected by Charles Albert, Garibaldi took a commission from the provisional government of Milan. The king was badly defeated at Custozza and fled to Milan, where he was execrated by the mob. He concluded a cowardly armistice with Austria, and Garibaldi and his men fled to the Alps, there to continue harrying the Austrians by guerrilla tactics. They were driven across the Swiss line, however, but not before, as Trevelyan remarks, the leader had displayed his peculiar military genius in a way which endeared him in all the Italian states.

Pursued by Three Armies.

Garibaldi now turned his eyes toward Rome, where the dissatisfaction with the papal government had so encouraged the democrats that a strong movement had set in toward republicanism. This culminated in the formation of a constituent assembly of which he was a member, and Feb. 8, 1849, the Roman republic was proclaimed. Between Mazzini, the doctrinaire at its head, and Garibaldi, the man of action, there were wide differences. Of administrative ability Mazzini had only a theory; Garibaldi was utterly ignorant of it in theory or practice. The republic was doomed to failure from the start, and after a short life of a few months it fell.

Before the end, however, Garibaldi demonstrated his military leadership by decisively defeating the French under Oudinot in April and the Neapolitan army in May, but in June he suffered a crushing defeat from the French. The greater part of this last month was occupied by the siege of Rome by the French. This siege was marked by great slaughter on both sides, but the defenders suffered most. The Garibaldini fought savagely, but their chief made more mistakes than usual and sacrificed his men unnecessarily. This caused the breach between him and Mazzini to widen. At the last of June Rome fell to the besiegers, and the republic was at an end.

Garibaldi escaped with about 4,000 of his men and started to penetrate through his enemies' lines to the Adriatic. Here his cunning and strategy learned in Brazil and Uruguay served him well. Anita had joined him and shared with her husband the adoration of his followers. But more than half his army, believing his cause lost, deserted him and sought their homes. Not disheartened, he continued on his way, slipping by this army and that, avoiding conflict where he could, traveling by night at times, getting succor from friendly communes. All this time the French were hot after them, while ahead lay the Austrian forces. At San Marino the fugitives, now only 1,500, footsore and miserable, were surrounded by no less than three armies bent on their capture. But at midnight Garibaldi led them through the blockade. They reached the sea at Cesenatico and took sail for Venice. Half an hour later the pursuing Austrians entered the town.

Off Commacchio an Austrian squadron attacked Garibaldi's little fleet of fishing boats and captured ten, but three escaped, and in one of these was the chief. These three boats landed and Garibaldi, carrying his dying wife, disappeared with his companions in the thickets. Friends helped him to a farmhouse, where the brave Anita, the constant companion and sharer of his fortunes, died in his arms. Hunted by the Austrian soldiery, Garibaldi ran from thicket to thicket at night, sheltered now and then in the day by patriots who risked their lives in so doing. In this way he reached the Apennines and approached Tuscany.

Aided by friends, he reached the other coast at last, visited his children at Nice, and then crossed to Tangier, where he stayed for six months. After this he embarked for the United States. On Staten island, in New York harbor, they still show you the remains of his little factory where he made candles and conducted a small business as a ship owner. Four years later he went back and bought the island of Caprera, where he remained at peace until 1859, when Piedmont and France made war on Austria. He was put in command of the Alpine cavalry. On May 8 he defeated the Austrians at Casale, and, crossing the Ticino, he scored a series of small victories, freeing the country as far as the Tyrol. When the armistice of Villafranca was declared he went to Como and wed the Countess Raimondi, but hearing scandal about her he left her immediately and started for central Italy. The Piedmont government forbade him to enter Romagna, and he retired to Caprera in high dudgeon.

Palermo Coup Startles Monarchs.

There he set about planning with his old friends Bertani and Crispi the invasion of Sicily. On May 5 he left Genoa with 1,070 men in two vessels. A week later he landed in Sicily and proclaimed a dictatorship. This more complicated the plans of Cavour, but he was powerless to stop his almost unwelcome ally. At Calatafima on May 15 Garibaldi defeated the Neapolitans and ten days later he received the surrender of Palermo with two forts, 20,000 men, and nine frigates.

The Palermo coup produced a profound sensation in every court on the continent. It was regarded as the precursor of triumphant revolution in every monarchy. Victoria and her prince consort shook their heads dubiously, but Lord John Russell had a different opinion. He better than any other statesman knew the Italian spirit. He knew Cavour and he knew Victor Immanuel.

Naples was in a bad way. To have lost Sicily was misfortune enough, but Francis II. realized that his whole kingdom was in danger. His chief adviser resigned. Revolt was spreading. Only the army could be depended upon. He offered a constitution, but the Neapolitans had had experience with Bourbon constitutions before. They were only scraps of paper. He called a liberal ministry. He appealed to Napoleon III. and was snubbed. He offered to compromise with Piedmont, and Cavour received the offer coldly. Cavour had his own designs on Naples, and besides that he knew that Garibaldi would not long remain in Sicily. He was right, for hardly had the royal army withdrawn from Palermo than he sent his army in two columns after them toward Messina. He had been greatly reinforced by his old lieutenant Medici, who brought from Genoa and Pisa several thousand men. It is an interesting fact that these troops were brought on three French steamers which an American lover of Italy, one De Rohan, had bought and rechristened respectively Washington, Franklin, and Oregon.

The Neapolitan troops were massed at Messina under the command of Gen. Clary and at Milazzo under Gen. Bosco. The latter gave battle as soon as the Garibaldians appeared, but after a fierce battle lasting several days, in which the losses on each side were severe, Bosco was defeated and had to surrender.

Garibaldi had come on in person and directed the fighting. He was everywhere appearing at the most unexpected places, encouraging his men, many of whom were under fire for the first time, not by shouting but by talking to them almost in a whisper. He often exposed himself almost unnecessarily, it seemed to some, but his fearlessness was a wonderful encouragement to his troops. In one place he and Medici were cut off by twenty horsemen and the lieutenant saved his chief's life at the risk of his own, but both escaped unharmed after killing several of the cavalry.

Between him and the straits which he had to cross to reach the mainland Garibaldi had to reckon with Clary, who was at Messina with 15,000 men in a strong fortress. The patriot army entered the town without opposition, and a few days later Clary signed a treaty with Garibaldi and withdrew his force to the mainland. The task of the dictator was now to get his men across the water without interference from the Neapolitan fleet. He had the transports, but the royal cruisers were watching him. He resorted to a ruse, gave the cruisers the slip, and crossed not at the narrows but thirty miles down.

Garibaldians Show Marvelous Courage.

Naples had a good army, but everywhere was chaos and dissension between commanders and between commanders and the ministry. There were 16,000 Neapolitan troops not far from Garibaldi's landing place, but he had no trouble in getting all his force over without discovery, and even forty-eight hours after the commandant of Monteleone, the first garrison town he reached, knew of his approach the garrison had not been increased, and the town fell with little fighting. Reggio next was taken with slightly more trouble.

Meanwhile a second Garibaldian army had landed at Favazzina, repulsing an attacking force and climbing the precipitous sides of Aspromonte for 3,000 feet, battling with a royalist detachment as they did so, and working westward to join the dictator at San Giovanni. Both these forces suffered terribly with heat during the day and bitter cold at night. They were without food or water for thirty-six hours on a stretch and the wounded were practically uncared for.

The devotion of these guerrillas, Italians from every province, French, English, and Hungarians, fighting for a common cause against superior numbers and generally under the most adverse circumstances, is beyond praise. Nothing but liberty will make men fight as they did, and there was probably no leader but Garibaldi who could have commanded such loyalty. Always at their head, fighting personally, sharing their fare when any was to be had, bestowing praise when deserved, singing with them at their campfires, this golden haired hero appeared to them the inspired leader of a holy cause.

All this time Garibaldi was receiving aid in another way. The spirit of revolt was spreading among the royalist troops. The red shirts were appearing on all the countryside. They mingled with the king's soldiers, sowing dissension. Peasants were flocking to the dictator's flag, and Garibaldi's name was on every lip. His prowess was everywhere exalted and spread terror among those not already converted to liberalism. Disloyalty to the constitutional ministry was now open. The approach of Garibaldi was received with enthusiasm. Even the king's officers were lukewarm to the royal cause, and it was known that the commander, Gen. Briganti, was in favor of negotiating with the invaders. He made a stand, hoping for reinforcements which did not come. Surrounded by Garibaldi, the Neapolitans threw down their arms and surrendered. They had the choice of going home or joining the red shirts. Thirty-five hundred men surrendered, most of them going to their homes stanch republicans from that day.

When the news got abroad that Garibaldi freed prisoners which he took two other large forces surrendered. Three strong forts with their cannon also gave up without a struggle and the cannon were turned on the Neapolitan fleet, which made off and gave Medici the chance to cross the straits with the last of the Sicilian forces.

The news of the advance on Naples spread like wildfire. Everywhere the republicans of Calabria rose to greet the dictator. Prison doors were opened and patriots, some of them noted and learned men, came blinking out into the sunshine of liberty which they had not seen for many years. Officials asked that Garibaldi extend his government to their cities and provinces.

Naples Crazed with Joy.

On Aug. 30 Garibaldi received the surrender of Gen. Ghio and 10,000 Neapolitan troops, the last force of the royal army in that part of Calabria. He pushed on toward Naples, being greeted everywhere by the enthusiasm of the populace. Not only was his army augmented by the way but they were given money and food, of which last they were in sore need. Alarmed at the news of the dictator's approach, Francis II. quit Naples on the evening of Sept. 6.

When the mayor of the capital came to welcome him to the city his nearest force was forty-eight hours away, for he had come forward with a few officers. Without waiting the arrival of soldiers, he went on to Naples, not accompanied even by a bodyguard, although he had to pass through several detachments of the Bavarian guards of the Neapolitan army.

Naples nearly went crazy with joy.

His first acts there showed his loyalty to his king. He handed over to the Piedmont admiral the Neapolitan fleet and invited the Piedmont artillery and Bersaglieri to help garrison the city. His design now was to march on Rome. Here he came again into collision with Cavour's plans, for the latter wished to do the same, but to do it first and to crown Victor Immanuel king of Italy there. Should Garibaldi forestall him in this it would bring about a serious clash with France.

While Garibaldi was organizing a government in Naples, Francis at Gaeta had strongly intrenched himself in a strong position, the front of his defense being on the Volturno river. He had about 50,000 men, good soldiers and well armed. During September and October Garibaldi had only between 15,000 and 20,000 men, and many of these were untrained fellows, the scum of the provinces which he had taken under his dictatorship. So strongly was the enemy situated that Garibaldi was half inclined, for once, not to give battle but to wait for Victor Immanuel, whose troops had been fighting their way through the papal states toward Naples and had already won notable victories over the forces opposing them. Called away to Palermo, he left the command to Gen. Türr, a vain and rash officer, who against his chief's orders tried to occupy and hold the town of Cajazzo, on the hills north of the Volturno. Although the royalists were pushed back, the victory cost the Garibaldini many men and valuable officers. A few days later the Bourbons retook the town and burned it. Garibaldi had returned in time to command at the battle which followed on Oct. 1 and 2.

Bourbon Forces Put to Rout.

This, the battle of the Volturno and the Arches, was the last great struggle of his force. It was marked by savage hand to hand fighting almost without cessation, in which great bravery was displayed by both sides. Garibaldi and his staff fought on foot for two days, cheering their men with words of encouragement and by their own deeds.

Time and again the battle seemed lost to them, but the chief's resourceful tactics saved them now at this place, now at that. It is doubtful if any other commander with such undisciplined troops so poorly armed could have held his ground for half the time Garibaldi did. Only the spirit which animated these patriots and the wonderful personality could have so prevailed. The Garibaldini fought like demons, and when it is considered that many of them were mere boys, some not over 12 years of age, the deeds they performed were wonderful. Some were armed only with scythes and pikes, but they charged wildly many times at solid ranks of well armed infantry and even batteries, carrying everything before them in their mad impetuosity.

At length when Garibaldi saw that the critical moment had arrived he let loose his 200 Hungarian cavalry and a body of Milanese troops in a headlong charge at the enemy's principal battery. They cleared the guns and cut through rank after rank of infantry. Directly behind them came 800 Garibaldini on foot, while in their rear followed the volunteers from the provinces. All the points which the patriots had lost in the previous day's battle were retaken, and the whole Bourbon force, in spite of its stoutest resistance, was pushed back step by step at the point of the bayonet until it finally was put in retreat.

Garibaldi's loss in men was about one-third that of his opponents. His wounded, however, were over 1,500, and they and the sick suffered terribly. When the disabled ones were taken to Naples they were met with neglect and ingratitude. The filthy town had no medical aid for them and they were not even furnished with proper food. The city which had gone mad with joy at the appearance of the dictator showed little friendship for the men who had saved it. Naples with its 500,000 inhabitants furnished only eighty recruits to the army which had delivered it from the Bourbons.

Garibaldi had given up his project to march on Rome, although Mazzini still urged it upon him. Instead on Oct. 4 he wrote a characteristically loyal letter to Victor Immanuel congratulating him on his victorious march south and inviting him to Naples. In this he anticipated Cavour's wish. A vote of Naples and Sicily for annexation to Piedmont resulted in the affirmative overwhelmingly.

Garibaldi and his force marched to meet the oncoming Piedmontese force and the king. Late in October he camped between the hills of Cajanello and Vajrano and there awaited the royal approach.

Garibaldi and his staff stood at the side of the road as the king's army passed. The royal army looked upon the dictator and his men with mingled feelings. Many cheered him and his ragged followers, but others passed them by with the contempt a regular has for a volunteer, says Trevelyan. Garibaldi spurred his horse on when he saw Victor Immanuel, and the two, reining up alongside each other, clasped hands. The king with his distinguished bearing and his uniform glittering with orders was a strange contrast to Garibaldi in his red shirt and his head bound with a colored handkerchief.

Garibaldi's greeting was loyalty itself. The king was polite but constrained. Cavour's advice and that of certain generals caused him to make Garibaldi feel that he and his men had finished their task. And it was so. He received orders to go to the rear.

The combined armies then attacked the Bourbons at Gaeta, besieging them all winter. Napoleon prevented the Piedmontese from using their fleet in the operations and tried to get England to do the same, but Russell kept his hands off. Victor Immanuel entered Naples on Nov. 7 with Garibaldi beside him.

Old Patriot's Last Days.

There is not much more to write. The Garibaldini, those whole souled patriots who had fought so many months on the smallest pay and sometimes not even on that, who had endured hardships untold in the service of Italy, were given a small gratuity and sent to their homes—if they had any. That is, the privates. The officers, such as were selected, got commissions in the army. Garibaldi was furious that his men were not kept as a separate force.

All he asked for himself was that he remain for a year in power at Naples. This the king refused. When the king was installed Garibaldi resigned his dictatorship. A few days later he boarded the Washington and steamed to Caprera. When he landed on his beloved isle he carried in his hand a sack of seed corn!

This is all he had to show for his years of labor for Italy. The king offered to give his eldest son an estate, an army position for another boy, a dowry for his daughter, and a castle and a steamer for himself.

He refused them all.

The day after he landed on Caprera he began working on his little farm, as though he had done nothing else all his life.

In 1861 he was elected a deputy, but he quarreled continually with Cavour, and he determined to have another go at the Roman government. At Palermo he raised 3,000 men, crossed the straits once more, but was defeated at Aspromonte, wounded, and taken prisoner. For five years he was quiet—for him—but in 1866, when Italy fought Austria again, he raised a volunteer army, and between July 3 and 21 he won five decisive battles over the Austrians and was about to move on Trent when Prussia put in her oar and demanded that Trent remain to the Austrians. Ordered by his superior to retire, he wired the one word "Obbedisco" ("I obey"). The taking of Rome still was a fixed idea, and in 1867 he made another attempt, but was arrested and sent to Caprera. He escaped and renewed his attack on Oct. 23. He captured Monterotondo, but the combined papal and French forces scattered his men and he was again arrested and sent home.

When the second French empire went down at Sedan Garibaldi took his legion to France and defeated the Germans at Chatillon, Autun, and Dijon. He was elected to the Versailles assembly, but resigned. He accepted a gift of $200,000 and an annuity of $10,000 from a liberal Italian cabinet and he at last retired to Caprera for good. In the sunshine before his cottage he sat and dreamed of his beloved Anita, of the wild days of the pampas, of the adventures by sea and land, of his struggles for Italy.

Thirty-three years ago this very month his attendants put pillows in his chair and drew him before the window to watch the glorious sunset. Two birds he had tamed came to the window and chattered to him. The attendants were about to drive them away, but he forbade them and told them always to care for the birds when he had gone. The sun's rays fell upon that hair once its own color but now whitened with years and sorrow. The eyes which had flashed fire on a hundred fields closed and the Jovelike head dropped on the breast. Garibaldi had gone on his last adventure.

HIS LETTERS
QUIN HALL

This is the seventh of a series of letters written by a moving picture actor to his lawyer friend in Chicago, procured under promise that the author's incognito would be preserved.

The sketches are NOT photographs.

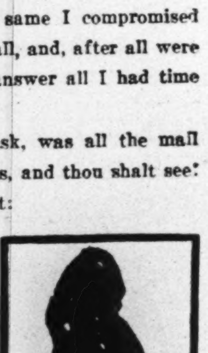
DEAR BOBS: Treasure this letter and all that you receive in the future from me, for from now, henceforward, and forevermore, you are the sole recipient of epistles from me. Why? Ah, thereby hangs a tale!

We'd planned to take some outdoor scenes the other day and were all ready to start, when the heavens opened and started in to discharge a lot of excess moisture. Finny, after saying a lot of things he'll wish he hadn't when the recording angel starts reading his diary, told me to go on home and report the next morning. This permission was received gleefully and acted upon by most of the company. But I was in a working mood, so, after a moment's thought, I decided I'd go back to the studio and answer letters. I supposed there must be a few, for valet had mentioned the fact that my correspondents were increasing. He asked me should he open them or just throw them away, whereat I had responded, with dignity:

"Just put them in that drawer, please. I'll answer them."

Today seemed the day for the task. The studio was bleak and deserted. Evidently all the directors had, by some freak of fate, decided to make that day an occasion for out of door labor. And, being disappointed, it was apparent that all of them, in fits of childish rage, had refused to work indoors and dismissed their people, as had mine own irascible boss. I hailed the solitude with joy and repaired to my dressing room, where, having divested myself of my damp outer garments and made myself comfortable with bathrobe and pipe, I settled down to the task—which I discovered to be a large one—of opening my correspondence. I had meant to read and answer all the letters, but when I saw the volume of the same I compromised by saying I'd read 'em all, and, after all were read, I'd go back and answer all I had time for.

Where, I hear you ask, was all the mail from? Read on, O Bobs, and thou shalt see! I quote from some of it:



"Dear, Dear, Dearest Mr. Carney: I am just back from the picture show and my heart is throbbing and palpitating even yet as I remember how you kissed the heroine at the end. You sure were grand, Mr. Carney. My girl friend that was with me agrees that you were simply elegant, and she said she was going to write to you for your photograph. But I made up my mind I would beat her to it, so please send me an autographed photograph. Write on it 'With love to Maizie,' will you, please? And would you mind writing to me personally and telling me how you learned to make love so grand. Of course, it must have taken experience, but what I want to know is, was your experience the real thing or just movie experience? I'd rather it was movie experience, Mr. Carney, for I hate to think you have honestly loved a lot of girls. Well, good-by, Mr. Carney. Please answer at once. X X X X X X X X X ! ! O O O O O O O O O O. You know what those mean, don't you?"

I'll be switched if I know what they mean! Do you, Bobs? Here's another:

"Dear Mr. Carney: What is home without a mother? I am not a silly girl. I am a woman. Not an old woman. And I would like to know if you have a mother. If you have not, I will be glad to be one to you. I am sure your acting would be better with the knowledge that I was waiting for you at home ready with a hot cup of coffee, or tea, or chocolate, or beef tea, or whatever your preference is, for you. Of course, I would not wish to perform menial duties, but I would see that you were always brushed and your tie straight, and like that, and I would be glad to be hostess for you at those select little parties I understand young men in your walk of life are fond of giving. I have one gown that is quite recherché, in which you would be proud of me. If the proposition interests you, dear Mr. Carney, as I am sure it will, please write me at once and I will make terms with you.

"ONE WHO WOULD."

And another:

"You Adorable Black Eyed Pet: This is just to let you know that we girls are simply dippy about you, and we have a club we call the Jim Carney club, and we have your initials embroidered on lavender ribbon which we wear tied about our throats with the initials in front. We go in a bunch to see all your pictures, and on one afternoon each week we meet at each other's houses and have fudge and tea and tell each other all the things we ever heard about you. What we would like you to do is this: We want a life size picture of you to set up to perform our initiation ceremonies in front of. Don't you think that would be swell? If you knew how we loved you, Mr. Carney, you would surely not sleep, nor drink, nor eat until you had sent us this picture. None of our friends knows what the initials stand for, and they call us the Just Crazy club.

"Adoringly.

"AN ADORER, secretary J. C.'s."

I'll just inflict one more on you, Bobs, and it's a short one:

"Mr James Carney, Blankety Blank Motion Picture Corporation, Los Angeles, Cal.—Dear Sir: This is to notify you that if I learn that my wife has joined that company I'll sue you for alienation of affection and prosecute you to the limit of the law.

"Yours very truly,

BLANK BLANKETY BLANK,

"President —— Coal company."

I had just finished reading this letter when, after tapping lightly, valet entered. As my blank stare met his questioning gaze, he smiled.

"You'll be wanting me to take care of those for you, Mr. Carney?"

"Yes," I said, with decision, "I'll be most decidedly wanting it."

As I told you before, Bobs, henceforth your letters are the only ones that go from this office unvaleted. As ever,

JIM.

HARRY T. MOREY

HARRY T. MOREY of the Vitagraph Company, who is quite a figure in the world of films, was born in Michigan and spent his early life in the middle and far west. He left the University of Michigan during his second year to go on the "legitimate" stage, where he worked with Robert Downing until musical comedy put out feelers and drew him unto itself. Here he made himself a general favorite, appearing with Marie Cahill, Raymond Hitchcock, and later becoming one of Weber and Fields' "family of fun makers," which at the time included such artists as David Warfield, Peter Daily, John T. Kelly, Charles J. Ross, Fay Templeton, and others. Still later he supported Anna Held in "Papa's Wife" and "The Little Duchess," was with George M. Cohan in "The Honeymooners," and with Montgomery and Stone in "The Wizard of Oz." He appeared last on the speaking stage with Louise Gunning in "Marcelle." Then the Vitagraph Company secured his services. Mr. Morey is a man of most attractive personality. He is virile, versatile, and generally interesting. Books are his passion, but he is fond of outdoor sports and is an indefatigable worker.

Answers to Movie Fans.

NIEMAND ZU HAUSE: Edwin August is with the World Film, New York. Gene Gautier with the Universal company, 1600 Broadway, New York, and Florence Turner with the foreign Pathe company. Of course I'm dying to know your real name, but I simply can't meet your conditions. Knock, knock, nobody home!

A. E. C.: As both Mr. Chaplin and Mr. Ritchie claim the honors, I must decline to enter the controversy. You have, you see, brought up another of those mooted questions.

E. B. A.: There is no doubt about it, Mr. Bushman certainly has a lovely, manly figure. No, I never noticed anything the matter with his teeth. Policy, for a time, made the Biograph people seek to conceal the identity of its players. Lately, however, I think they have changed their notions. I've been called many things, but this is the first time I've been designated as a "place where an outraged public may voice its wrongs." Thank you so, so much.

H. T.: Lillian Walker is with the Vitagraph company. She appears in pictures—not on the speaking stage.

E. M. W.: A letter addressed to Marguerite Snow, in care of the Metro Pictures corporation, 1465 Broadway, New York, will reach her. Many people were surprised to hear that she and her husband, James Cruze, had left the Thanhouser. They've been there a long time. Thank you.

C. MATHEWSON: Helen Holmes and Anita Stewart are not married.

BROWNIE: I shall be obliged to take the wish for the deed. I am not permitted to meet my correspondents. Awfully sorry.

A GIRL: Mr. Chaplin is not crazy yet, but he's apt to be some day if people don't quit wishing the willies on him. Jack Pickford is Mary's brother.

BETTY B.: Mr. Kerrigan is not married to Vera Sisson, neither does he beat his family nor forget to shave. What silly questions, Betty B.! I have no information regarding the private affairs of William Farnum.

B. P.: A letter addressed to Norma Talmadge in care of the Vitagraph company, Brooklyn, N. Y., will reach her. She probably will send you her photograph if, with your request, you inclose a quarter. Thanks ever so much!

LAW: With your double qualifications of expert swimmer and low hurdler, I should think you could easily obtain a position as extra with some motion picture company. If you'll send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope I'll mail you a list of the various firms, and be vurr' glad to do it.

B. B. B.: I'd love to accommodate you, but an ironclad office rule prevents my giving any opinion whatever on scenarios. Send a stamped and self-addressed envelope, however, and I'll be glad to send you an article on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios. You're welcome.

MRS. A. C. O.: If you have received no word regarding your scenario you are at liberty to dispose of it otherwise.

CURLS: Write to Mr. Kerrigan in care of the Universal company, Hollywood, Cal. Send a quarter with your request, though, Curls. (Are they natural?)

EDITH AND LAURA: So far as I know, William Shay is not married. He's with the William Fox Features company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Yes.

Voice of the Fan

ON HARRY MOREY.

They may all rave about Francis Bushman
  And Jack Warren Kerrigan grand,
Also smiling Arthur Vaughn Johnson
  And Harry Benham, the Thanhouser man;
Donald Hall surely is good looking,
  With his dark hair shot with gray,
But the grandest man in all the land
  Is handsome Harry Morey.

Because of his ease and his manly grace
Harry Morey in our hearts has won a place,
His acting always seems so real
We have already placed him "our ideal."
It is because his eyes so beautiful
Seem to look in our very soul
As we sit before the curtain
And watch the pictures roll.

Dear Miss Tinee: Last night I saw a picture. It was a wonderful picture. Of this I could have no doubt because the advertisement said so. In this photoplay the lead—the character of a scholar and student and a recluse—was played by a matinée idol who had less intelligence in his face than the average longshoreman, a man with fat, flabby jowls and drab bovine eyes that looked as if their owner could scarcely comprehend a sum so simple as two plus two are four.

And this play that I saw is but one of a million that are its equal—if not worse. And yet the eternal cry of the movie men is that they are giving the public realism—pictures from life.

Is it realism when a corpulent, overfed leading man plays everything from a scullery man to the president of the United States without once altering the facial makeup of his silly face?

Is it realism for lily faced girls, without an iota of culture, refinement, or intelligence showing in their placid faces, to work hard through three reels to delude the audience into the belief that the characters they are playing are wonderful, broad, clever women?

Bah! They delude only themselves!

Surely, Miss Tinee, you cannot but admit that the movie drama as produced today has a thousand shortcomings.

I hate the movies, Miss Tinee! They give nothing, they reflect nothing, and, worse—they stop at nothing!

ONE WHO HAS SUFFERED.

[There! There! There! Mother's child!]

The DIAMOND FROM TH

$10,000 for 1,000 Words or Less for an Idea for a Sequel to
"THE DIAMOND FROM THE SKY"
The American Film Manufacturing Company's Picturized Romantic Novel in Chapters.

This contest is open to any man, woman or child who is not connected directly or indirectly with the Film company or the newspapers publishing the continued story.

You are advised to see the continued photoplay in the theaters, read the story as it runs every week, and then send in your suggestion. By following the narrative in print and observing the action on the screen, you will be given a splendid opportunity to supply a suggestion for a sequel.

A board of three judges will decide which of the suggestions received is most acceptable. The judgment of that board will be absolute and final.

SPECIAL NOTICE:

Suggestions for a sequel will be accepted up to and including February 20, 1916. As it is the IDEA that is wanted, no attention will be paid to literary style. Contestants must confine their contributions to 1,000 words or less.

Send all suggestions to THE AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 6227 BROADWAY, CHICAGO, ILL.

One two-reel episode corresponding with the chapter of the story as it appears in The Sunday Tribune is released every Monday.

ESTHER COMFORTS THE WEEPING AND DISTRAUGHT HAGAR

[Copyright: 1915: By Roy L. McCardell.]

CHAPTER VIII.

"A MIND IN THE PAST."

A DULL, aching resentment burned in the bosom of Blair's mother as with a voice hoarse to her own ears she called to summon Blair to make his part of the bargain with the implacable visitor, who waited for them in the somber living room upstairs, with the photographs of the guilty thumb prints of Blair.

It was with a fierce resolve, in a sudden revulsion of desperation and despair, that Mrs. Stanley returned to the living room to tell her strange visitor, Hagar, to do her worst, let the consequences be what they might. For herself, the austere Mrs. Stanley resolved to strive no more for the sake of her dissolute and desperate son.

"I will make no bargain with this woman, even to save Blair from the gallows," was her grim thought. "Neither she nor the strange girl who was Dr. Lee's ward, and whom she now mothers at Stanley Hall, shall have social countenance from me."

But as she ascended the stairs to make known her resolve she heard the slam of a door and the sound of hurrying feet from the living room to the chambers at the back of the house. She opened the door from the stair landing to the living room. The center table was overturned and there were other signs of a struggle, but the room was empty!

Then a muffled groan, a low moan of pain, fell upon the ears of Blair's mother. The sound came from near the floor behind the fireplace. Mrs. Stanley pressed the spring and the wall with the fireplace turned out, and there in the semi-darkness of the Tory's hiding place lay the unconscious figure of Hagar. It was manacled with the sheriff's handcuffs that Vivian Marston had brought to the house after the tournament in mockery of Blair. The form of Hagar lay half reclining against the rifled family strong box. Mrs. Stanley picked up the key of the handcuffs, lying near, and unfastened the manacle on the wrists of the dazed and unresisting Hagar.

Then the judge's widow realized that here was the culmination of the wicked deeds of the son she had inculcated with a lawless desire for things that were not his.

She raised Hagar, dragged her out into the room, and closed the hiding place. She was not surprised to note that the photographs of the thumb prints were gone. She revived Hagar and regarded her stricken visitor, prepared for a harsh defiance with no thought of compromise.

But the whole expression of Hagar had softened to a pathetic, cowed wistfulness. Her face seemed younger, her eyes moist and pleading. She turned to Mrs. Stanley with outstretched arms and murmured, "Give me my child!" And then Blair's mother saw that the blow her son had dealt the strange visitor had deprived her of all realization of the present.

Mrs. Stanley had no suspicion of the import of Hagar's words, but she realized the crazed woman was no menace to either herself or her son, and she led her downstairs and to the door, where she set her on her way to Stanley Hall.

At Stanley Hall, in the gathering twilight, Esther waited for Hagar. It was a sad homecoming. The dull eyes of Hagar gleamed with recognition of the portals of Stanley Hall. But the face of Esther, the gentle, loving Esther, was the face of a stranger to her.

Alarmed and weeping, Esther led the moaning woman she deemed to be her mother up the broad steps and into the wide hallway of Stanley Hall.

Here a fierce, wild change came over Hagar. She sprang to the door of the library and threw it open. "See, he is in here!" she cried. "They have him in there, the child they stole and sold from me. See the diamond that blazes on his little breast! Take off the diamond! There is a curse on it for all our race! Take off the fine raiment, give him back his rags! He is my son!"

As it had been with Blair Stanley's austere mother, the wistful Esther sensed no importance in the wild pleadings of Hagar. Now, too, even the crazed mind of Hagar seemed to realize the library was empty and unoccupied, for she gave a wild cry and fell sobbing on the breast of Esther.

Summoning the servants, Esther had Hagar carried to her chamber. The blow Blair Stanley had dealt Hagar with the heavy poker had made no cut or external wound. She was soon in fevered sleep, and Esther was forced to leave her bedside at urgent summons from below.

There she found Luke Lovell, headman for Hagar here as well as at the gypsy camp, hidden in the mountains twenty miles away. Suspicioning that Hagar was ill both of mind and body, Lovell had already usurped authority. Even now he was ordering the wandering hunchback organ grinder from the place. But if Quabba was frail he was courageous. He was insisting he would not leave the place until he had said farewell to the strange grand lady who had spoken Romany to him and also farewell to her fair faced daughter, who had also bidden him to stay and be refreshed.

There was something so loyal and true in the hunchback's respectful gaze that, stranger as he was, it made Esther take his hand, after sternly dismissing the scowling Lovell, and beg the humble hunchback to stay. "Do not leave us," she whispered. "Something tells me you will be a friend, and we have no friends now, save perhaps our gypsy people." And even as she spoke Esther recalled the scene in the grandstand at the tournament and how this hunchback wanderer had warned Arthur that he had been betrayed.

At this juncture a carriage drove up to Stanley Hall. From this a strange figure alighted, the figure of a tall, lank, serious, side-whiskered Englishman wearing a plaid suit, with a heavy mourning band on the arm and a glistening white tropic helmet. This strange individual had a rifle in the carriage.

At the sight of Quabba's chattering monkey the lank Englishman grew wildly excited. "Some of their native wild beasts!" he exclaimed, and rushed back to the carriage for the rifle. It took some effort on the part of both Esther and Quabba to reassure the excited visitor that Clarence, the monkey, was not at all a wild beast of the Virginia jungle, but simply an itinerant organ grinder's friend, companion, and collector of external revenue.

Then the stranger made known his name and errand..

"I am Marmaduke Smythe, barrister, of London, England, solicitor and agent of the estate of the Earls of Stanley of Stanley castle, Warwickshire," he said. "Lord Cecil Stanley died a month ago from the infirmities of old age, leaving no heir in England, the succession falling to the eldest son of the elder branch of Stanleys of this place, Stanley Hall.

"I remember it well, for I was here to verify the American heir nearly twenty years ago. And a beastly experience I had, my dear young lady. I was ambushed by croaking savages and fell off a horse and was thrown—not off the horse—but figuratively thrown into the midst of a terrific and bloodthirsty feud between Col. Stanley and Judge Stanley, both rip snorting, bally fire eaters, as you Yankees way down east in Virginia say.

"So my errand, young lady, in these wild parts of the American border is to notify young Arthur Stanley—both Col. Stanley and the judge being dead—that he is the Earl of Stanley, and the title and estates await him in Warwickshire."

And then it was Esther's painful task to tell the strange caller of the accusations against the young man he sought, of his wild flight and disappearance.

"My word!" exclaimed the embarrassed London lawyer. "What a dreadful way you wild Yankees have of tomahawking each other, don't you know! If the American earl is a criminal in hiding I must notify the next of kin, the late judge's son, whom I distinctly remember as a vicious little beggar who bit me severely.

"In case his lordship, as I must call him, the fugitive, is captured by your white cap chaps he will undoubtedly be lynched, as is your invariable custom on the American frontiers here, I believe. Then the son of the late judge will be the Earl of Stanley.

"That is, providing, of course," the London lawyer added, "that this Honorable Blair Stanley, as he would be called with us, has outgrown his vicious propensities as a child. For I assume if he bites your prominent border ruffians he will be tomahawked or lynched or put an end to in some unpleasant manner. So you must excuse my taking leave, as I must notify the next of kin."

And he raised his tropic helmet politely and walked in a wide circle around the chattering monkey, Clarence, as though he rather doubted the alleged harmlessness of the animal he deemed a denizen of the local jungle.

At the gloomy threshold of Mrs. Lamar Stanley's house the London lawyer received further confirmation of his personal belief that Blair Stanley would never outgrow the sanguinary propensities of his childhood.

In the bitter mood that now obsessed her Blair's mother informed the startled lawyer that her son, now next in line for the proud Stanley earldom, had fled, no one knew whither, and she hoped to never see his face again. All she would say in reply to the barrister's nervous pleadings—for he dreaded a long search for the heirs of Stanley in barbarous America—was that Blair might be found at the home of Mrs. Burton Randolph, his cousin, in Richmond. And for that place

HUNG LI DEPRIVES THE TRAMP OF THE DIAMOND

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A bitter feud, engendered over an heirloom, "the diamond from the sky," found in a meteor by an ancestor, has existed between Col. Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley. The feud is augmented by the fact that the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American family. When his wife dies after having given birth to a daughter Col. Stanley buys and substitutes as heir a new born gypsy boy. Three years later the gypsy mother steals the colonel's daughter, who is being reared in secret, and obtains possession of the "diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the secret of the false heir.

When the daughter, Esther Stanley, whom Hagar has grown to love, grows up Hagar returns to Virginia with her, hoping to right the wrong done her and that she has done. She obtains the consent of Dr. Lee, Col. Stanley's old friend, to adopt Esther as his daughter in the hope that Hagar's son, the supposed Arthur Stanley II., will fall in love with Esther and so she will become mistress of Stanley hall, which is her right. Dr. Lee exacts as his condition that he keep in custody the fateful diamond. Dr. Lee warns Hagar that her son is a profligate, unfit for Esther, but she hopes for the best. Arthur falls in love with Esther, as does his boon companion, Blair Stanley, the cousin, who would be the rightful heir to the earldom were the secret known.

In endeavoring to steal the diamond from Dr. Lee Blair causes the death of the old doctor. Arthur Stanley assumes the onus of the murder, in the hope that he will himself escape and that Blair will live a straighter life. At a tournament Arthur, who has left a farmhouse where he has been working incognito, unseats Blair and crowns Esther Queen of Love and Beauty. Blair, jealous of the honor which he wished to confer upon Vivian Marsten, an adventuress, betrays Arthur. While the sheriffs are being informed Quabba, an organ grinder, handcuffs the sheriff to Blair and thus enables Arthur to escape.

Arthur, finding that a clubman who has been hunting at the hounds has been killed by the limb of a tree, changes apparel with him, and when the posse rides up the dead body is taken to Stanley hall before it is recognized that it is not Arthur's. Arthur thus eludes the posse. In the meantime Hagar, through a detective, has secured finger prints which establish Blair's guilt and Arthur's innocence of the murder. She proposes to Blair's mother not to divulge her secret on condition that Hagar and Esther are established in Richmond society and are received in Stanley hall.

A negro boy hunting owls finds in a nest in the top of a tree the Diamond from the Sky, which Quabba's monkey had taken up there and deposited for an egg which he had stolen.

lawyer took the first train from Fairfax. Buoyed by the hope that renewed associa- with her gypsy tribe might tend to re- re Hagar to reason, Esther departed that t with Hagar from Stanley Hall. She accompanied by Quabba, now her faith- attendant, and the sullenly insistent Luke ell. It was a sad return of their stricken en to the grieving Romany people.

Hagar recognized the gypsies as gypsies, she called on the names of those long de- ted, including the name of her dead hus- d, Matt Harding, who she evidently med was alive and threatening her. For n she spoke his name it was in grim re- and with bitter maledictions.

Quabba roused and drew his knife, and the menacing figure of Luke Lovell slunk back from the accusative moonlight into the shadows and was seen no more.

That night at this same hour Arthur Stanley, a fugitive and a wanderer, a stranger in a strange land, by his smoldering camp fire in a far western desert dreamed a wild dream that roused him with a shriek. He saw the fear struck face of Esther, and near her the sinister Luke Lovell, with his great gnarled hands stretched as though to clutch and crush her.

Mrs. Burton Randolph returned from her stay in Fairfax to find her friends in an attitude of delightful commiseration toward her. It had been generally agreed that "poor, dear Mrs. Randolph" was more to be pitied than twitted over the contretemps that had marred her last grand ball in Richmond, the occasion when a great diamond of fabulous value had been wrenched from the neck of her visitor, Miss Vivian Marston of New York, and then the hue and cry after a young man wanted for robbery and a murder that had ensued thereafter.

Mrs. Randolph confided to her dearest friends that her life seemed fated to be one of turmoil and tragedy. And she told the select few, who told the select many, of the dramatic climax of the tournament at Fairfax, in which the "delightful, romantic young murderer," as she described Arthur Stanley, had turned up in mask to bear off the prize and to escape when he was just about to crown Esther—whom Mrs. Randolph described as "a pretty, unknown little creature"—as queen of love and beauty.

So instead of finding herself pitied in society in Richmond Mrs. Randolph found herself envied as a social heroine in these "delightfully dreadful affairs." So as the beautiful wistaria was empurpling her house and grounds Mrs. Burton Randolph announced a wistaria fête, and all Richmond society was nervously expectant of more delightfully dreadful occurrences.

QUABBA ASSURES THE STRANGE VISITOR THAT THE MONKEY IS NOT A WILD BEAST

But although the wistaria fête was a wondrously brilliant affair, according to the society columns of the Richmond papers, no untoward event occurred to mar the pleasure of the day—somewhat to the disappointment of society, which rather expected such events now at all affairs that Mrs. Randolph graced with her presence.

Blair Stanley, with plenty of money, but keeping sedulously away from Mr. Abe Bloom's temple of chance, turned up in Richmond in pursuit of Vivian Marston, with whom he was still infatuated. He knew the risk he took, for it was evident some one in Richmond had secured from Abe Bloom the check that, besides being worthless, had the fatal print of his thumb upon it. For the photograph of this check and thumb print, together with photographs of his thumb prints taken from Dr. Lee's study, had been in the possession of Hagar Harding when he had struck her down.

But such was his fierce passion for the luxurious and beautiful Vivian Marston that Blair walked in the shadow of death for her sake.

For herself, Vivian Marston had lingered in Richmond leading an existence that was puritanical and galling to her in the vapid restraints, as she deemed them, of conventional southern social restrictions. Her one strong, eager, compelling desire, a desire that held her in provincial Richmond, was her desire for a star—her desire for the diamond from the sky.

Once in all its blazing magnificence it had shone upon her breast. Her thoughts were upon it by day, and at night her dreams were bright like gold and red like blood—a barbaric background for the dream diamond of these vivid visions.

Vivian sank her head upon Blair's breast beneath the wistaria bough. She tempted him with languorous glance and alluring lips. "Get and give me the diamond and I will be yours!" she whispered. And Blair, much as he had longed for the baleful jewel himself, now longed more for this woman.

"I shall never rest till I get it for you!" he replied fiercely. And he would have kissed her to seal the contract, but she drew herself from his arms, and he knew that her caresses were only to be purchased by the diamond, be the price of the diamond lives, souls, or honor!

But the luxurious and vivacious Vivian was a practical person. She did not depend upon the romantic, if desperate, efforts of a lover to alone secure for her the star of her desire. She consulted the businesslike and equally eager brothers Bloom. To the gape-mouthed Abraham and Isaac she confided the romantic story of the diamond and the confirmation of its great intrinsic value, which she had learned from Blair Stanley and others while in Fairfax.

"The diamond from the sky, as they call it, disappeared in Richmond, torn from your neck by the hands of an unseen thief the night of Mrs. Randolph's ball," said Abe Bloom, the gambler. "The chances are a hundred to one it is still hidden in this town. Whoever stole it will want money on it, that's reasonable enough to assure. It will turn up."

"It ith enough to make a man put a thine in hith windowth thaying 'Hikheth Pritheth Paid for Big Diamondth and No Questionths Athked!" remarked Mr. Ike Bloom, who lisped when he was excited. And excited he was when he heard the romantic history of the Diamond from the Sky and its price. But especially did its price excite him.

"It shan't thlip through my handth again if I geth hold of it," he added. "I wouldn't lent it to the queen of Spthain!" And as he said this he gave his brother's "lady friend from New York," as he called her, a meaning glance.

"Let bygones be bygones!" Abe Bloom snarled at his brother. "Vi didn't lose it on purpose. I have telephoned for Tom Blake, whom I consider the smartest detective in this country. He does what you pay him to do and keeps his mouth shut. If the diamond is in Richmond, Blake will find it."

In a few moments the suave and reticent Mr. Blake arrived. Placed in possession of all the facts the Blooms and Vivian could give him, he remarked that he would do his best, and the first and last meeting of the syndicate to find the diamond from the sky broke up and the detective departed. He was followed shortly afterward by Miss Marston of New York, whose Richmond society friends would have been shocked beyond expression did they know she paid an occasional secret visit to the establishment of Abe Bloom, gambler!

Meanwhile, where is the diamond from the sky? It is not a pearl to be cast before swine, nor is it fated to remain the tinsel plaything of a negro lad who is a herder of swine.

In Arthur's now frayed and dirty dress suit, all the dirtier for its jail stains, Mr. Strap McGee makes across country, cursing his luck. He pauses by a pig pen to play a grim and intensely practical joke on a negro boy bent over the sty. Mr. Strap McGee picks up a barrel stave and applies it to the person of the bent over negro lad. Then Mr. McGee notes the boy, in sudden pain and fright, has dropped some bauble plaything into the swill of the swine. Mr. McGee is not fastidious. He fishes out the bauble.

It is the diamond from the sky!

It looks good to Mr. McGee and he flees with it at his best speed, followed by a shower of rocks from the colored pig boy, bereft of the sparkling thing he found in an owl's nest.

Richmond is not far away and Mr. Strap McGee has some loose change he won at gaming in the jail. He proceeds to imbibe, biding his time to dispose of the bauble hidden in his rags. But when he drops into the curio shop, opium den joss house maintained by Chinese acquaintances his tipsy vanity impels him to show the bauble to the crafty Hung Li, priest, den keeper, and tong leader.

It is a fatal thing to do, for luck has been bad with Hung Li and his friends. The police have closed their gambling joint and shut down on opium smoking. Hung Li believes that the god of the sky, the great god Lung, needs propitiating, and then he will bring back good luck in plenty.

Has word of the diamond from the sky traveled to China and back? The effigy of the great god Lung is in its sanctuary in the next room, and Lung is the god of the sky. The body of a strangled tramp is dropped through a trap door, and the diamond from the sky is hung about the neck of the great god Lung!

This night Mrs. Burton Randolph would a slumming go. Blair and Miss Marston are of the little party, and Tom Blake, the detective, is to be their guide. A significant glance of caution and silence passes between the detective and Miss Marston when they meet again.

The Chinese quarter, with its joss house, is the first place they visit. The wily Hung Li wishes no visitors to the inner sanctuary of his joss, the great god Lung, but Blake will not be denied. He says his friends have come especially to burn incense for good luck before the great god Lung. And so they enter the sanctuary and behold on the breast of Lung the diamond from the sky!

Detective so he is, and, possessing great and evil powers in the eyes of Hung Li, Blake and his friends are forced from the place. The ladies, Mrs. Randolph again in a "state of nerves," are sent home, and Blake, from the nearest telephone summons Abe Bloom and his brother.

Meanwhile an English lawyer has arrived at the Randolph house seeking Blair Stanley. Determined upon his quest, the lawyer gets directions and arrives at the joss house. Hung Li and his confreres will have none of the London lawyer. But the exasperated Marmaduke Smythe will not be denied. He says he knows the persons he is searching for are inside this beastly Chinese place.

Here now he is, reinforced by the excited and money proffering Abraham and Isaac Bloom and the equally urgent but more self-controlled private detective, Tom Blake.

But all the while a desperate man is climbing the fire escapes at the back of the Chinese den. He has noted a curtain draped window behind the joss. A crash of glass is heard within. The frenzied Hung Li breaks from the invaders and rushes into the sanctuary, followed by the other Chinese, the two Blooms, the detective, and the bewildered Englishman.

A hand through the broken glass behind the idol has torn the diamond from the sky from the neck and breast of the great god Lung. With a demoniac scream the frenzied Hung Li seizes a keen Chinese sword at the foot of the idol and aims a swift blow at the disappearing hand.

Woe and bad luck forever for the unfortunate Lung Hi! The blow has missed the despoiling white hand and has severed the head of the great god Lung. Another slash in excited frenzy and down comes the burning altar light, and the flimsy furnishings of the sanctuary and the whole den itself are a roaring blaze of fire.

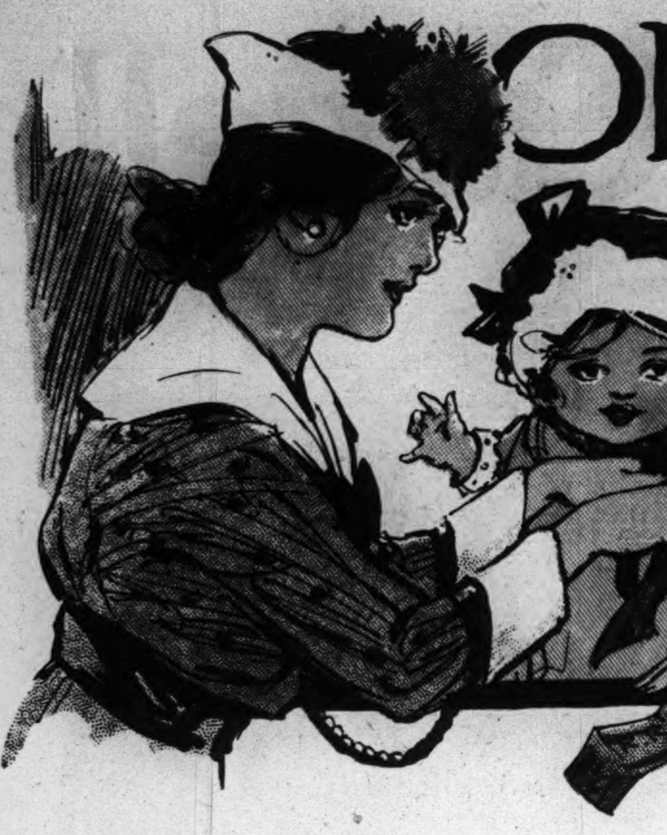
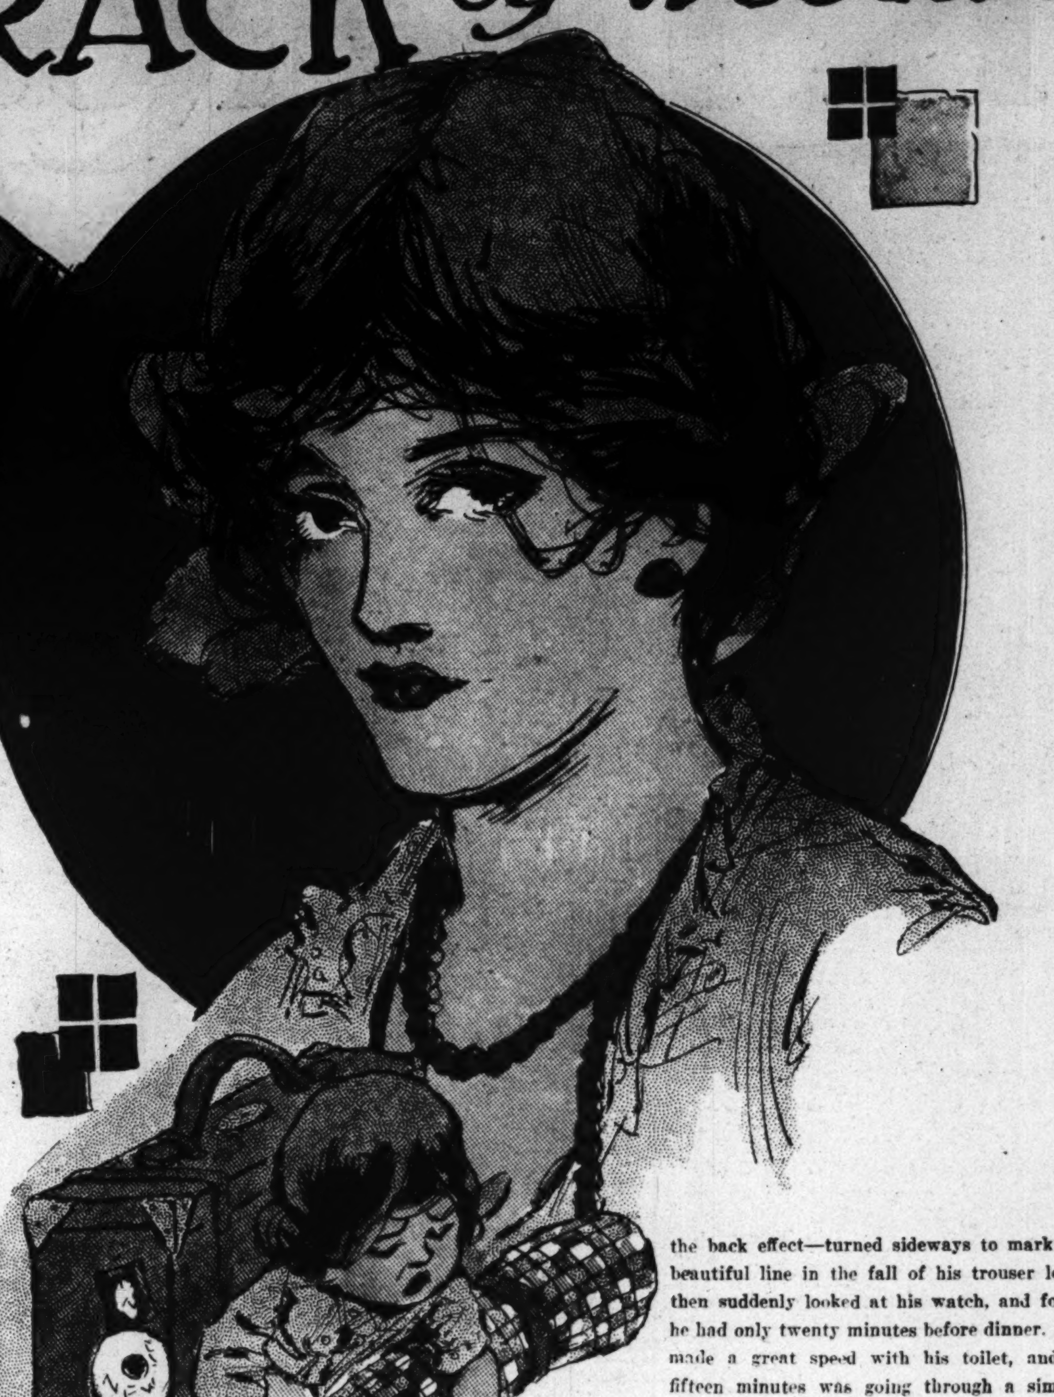
ON the RACK by Woodward Neele





Baggage and Babies May Be the Same; but Luggage and a Baby—That's a Different Thing Again. Bachelor Cronies, Mr. Soper and Major Slimm, Found Luggage and a Baby to Be Excess Baggage.

THE day was cold and the station drafty. Clarissa Fagg, a mature damsel of 16, who prided herself upon her ability as a nursemaid, cast her eye around in search of further wrappings for the baby—already half mumified. To say she cast her eye is unfair. Nature had already cast it for her. At any rate, she fixed it on the arch of the station roof, and at the same time laid her hand on her mistress' traveling rug, which was lying on a trunk a little behind her on the right hand side. In this rug she swathed the sleeping baby till only the expert eye of a mother could have distinguished him from a bundle of rugs.

Outside the station two hansoms, with clattering horses and silent wheels, had just discharged their respective fares. These were strangers to one another, but each told the porter to label his luggage to C——, so it was piled on the same trolley. The porter said there was a through coach to C——, and led the way with the luggage. For two single men there was a good amount of it—hat boxes, gun cases, golf clubs, rugs, and portmanteaux, and one had a cycle.

Charlie Soper was tall, young, and fair. Maj. Slimm was 6 feet 2 in his socks, and at least four feet around; and the two, one wheeling his machine and the porter with the traps, made quite an imposing procession. At any rate, they impressed Clarissa Fagg, who gaped upon them with her mouth and brought up in the rear admiringly.

The porter was a man who knew his work. He found a "first smoking" for the gentlemen and hauled the trolley alongside, then made a show of feeling the footwarmers, and went running down the platform in search of hot ones.

It was at this precise moment that an old woman, hurrying for a train, slipped and fell with her basket of oranges. The fruit rolled in all directions, and Clarissa, whose heart was in the right place, however her eye may have erred from the straight path, popped the baby on the trolley while she helped the old lady to her feet and dived after her oranges.

So it came to pass that she was out of earshot when Charlie Soper said, "Put the small things in here, porter, and be careful of the rugs," and before the last orange was back in the basket the trolley had been whisked to a distant van, and the baby had become the joint possession of Mr. Soper and Maj. Slimm. But the baby on the rack was not more unconscious than those two gentlemen.

As the train moved off there was a stir on the platform—a woman running—some one calling out.

Charlie looked out of the window. "Some one missed the train, I fancy," he remarked.

"It's a woman," said the major, popping his head out as Charlie came in, "and she seems to be in hysterics."

He watched till the platform glided out of sight, then settled into his seat and retired behind a newspaper. In a few minutes the paper dropped onto his knee and the major slept. Charlie lowered his paper when he saw the other man fairly off, and deliberately stepped into a dreamland of his own, along a path he had trodden more and more frequently of late, and where he wandered hand in hand with Nellie Seymour. Oh! these day dreams! Sweeter, rosier, more to our fancy than those that come by night, but as fleeting, as elusive, and as vain!

As Charlie pulled at his pipe he wondered how he dared to dream that his dream might come true. He recalled the past. The never-to-be-forgotten day when he first made her acquaintance, and her father's, on that homeward voyage. The long, lazy days that followed, when they sat together, walked together, and talked—oh! talked endlessly, lightly, seriously; talked of things great, and of things small, till the night would creep on, and the stars come out, and a silence would fall between them, which to him, at any rate, was throbbing with things unutterable. But to her—ah! that was it! Who could tell of what she was thinking?

And then the nights when they danced together, or she sang! And in town, had they not met on the same sweetly familiar footing? Always such good friends—that was the worst of it—if she were not so horribly, frankly friendly! How could a man tell, when a girl looked at him so straight, so brightly, with such speaking eyes that said—nothing? Well, there was but one way to test her real thoughts, and that was to throw himself at her feet. He was going down now to her old country home for the first time, and let the chance but offer, he would seize upon it.

He had brought for her a precious bit of china—Nellie adored china—carefully packed in shavings in its wooden case, and rolled for greater safety in his rug. When they were alone he would give it to her and then, if he could, if he only dared—

Charlie fell to earth with a crash as his fellow traveler awoke with a stifled snort. The major was the first to collect his forces.

"Are we getting near C——?" he asked.

Charlie looked at his watch.

"Ten minutes more ought to see us in," he said.

"Do you know the country around here at all?" continued the major, wide awake now and inclined to chat.

"Very slightly," said Charlie; "I have only passed through in going north."

"Oh," said Maj. Slimm, "then you will not know the whereabouts of Benton Manor. I am going—"

"Benton Manor?" interposed Charlie; are you going there? That's rather funny, for I'm going there myself."

"Very odd," laughed Maj. Slimm. "Nice people, the Seymours. You know them well, I dare say?"

"Fairly well," said Charlie, and eyed his companion. Why was this fellow going to the Seymours? Was he a rival? The yellow tiger in the lover was stirred.

'Curious how one runs against people," moralized the major. "I met the old man last summer in the Highlands. He was staying with some friends of my friends. I saw a good bit of him then, and never saw him again till I ran against him in town last week. Said he had some good shooting down here, and offered me a day or two."

" Charlie wondered if he had met Nellie, and then wondered how to ask the question. It was very simple, but he could not say it. He framed a sentence and voiced it inwardly to see how it sounded. The longer he waited the harder it was to say.

"Have you met Miss Seymour at all?"

It came out quite suddenly before he realized he was speaking.

"Yes, several times. She was with her father. A charming girl," said the major, and repeated reflectively and with unction—"a very charming girl."

"He does admire her," thought Charlie. "The brute." A huge dislike of the major filled his breast. He hated him.

"Here's our station," said the major, pitching his cigar stump out of the window, serenely unconscious that the other man wanted to kick him.

A dog-cart was waiting for the two men. The man knew Charlie and touched his hat. "There's a cart down for the luggage, sir," he said.

"If you don't mind waiting a minute," said Charlie to the major, "I will send a telegram. I quite forgot to leave my address for my letters to be forwarded." He went to the office, but returned immediately.

"Impossible to send any message," he reported. "The clerk says the instrument has been affected by a thunderstorm this morning and there's no communication with town at present." He sprang into the dog-cart, and in another moment was bowling along the smooth white road with Maj. Slimm, while the porter piled the luggage onto the cart.

One! Two! Three! Four! In went the things. A bundle of rugs, not strapped, seemed in danger of falling to pieces. The porter tucked one loose end in, then looked closer, started, and exclaimed!

"Oh, heavens! A baby!"

"A what?" said the groom, coming around from the horse's head. The porter showed him a glimpse of yellow curls just inside one end of the bundle. The groom whistled.

"How'd it get there?"

"It's a rum thing to find in any gent's luggage, said the porter; "but it's there right enough, just as I took it out of the carriage, and I'm not going to interfere."

"Then am I to take it up to the manor?" asked the groom.

"Of course," said the porter; "'tain't your business to ask about it, and 'tain't mine. Whos'ever it is, it ain't my kid, and I ain't going to get it shoved onto me. I've six of my own." He looked around. There was no one about. "There's no one seen it but you and me. If you takes my advice you'll shut your mouth, same as me. I cleared that bundle out of the carriage along of the other things, and I'm bloomin' sorry I ever looked inside it."

"It's a rum go," said the groom, "but I ain't meaning to adopt of it, so we'll both keep it dark."

The porter tucked the baby up, and found it a secure position among the other luggage and watched the cart out of sight. And the baby still slept profoundly. Two miles of jolting up to the manor failed to disturb it, and it was carried up with the other things into the bachelors' quarters at Benton Manor, where it lay snugly in a corner of Charlie Soper's room—a human bomb.

When Charlie came up to dress he was in high feather. Nellie had smiled upon him, and had blushed when they met. He almost fancied she had returned the pressure of his hand, and her fingers had certainly come into contact with his own in the passing of a teacup. Moreover, she appeared indifferent to Maj. Slimm's very apparent admiration.

Charlie's surroundings ministered to his mood. The bright firelight played on the polished furniture, a couple of lamps threw a more reliable light, and in their mellow glow he preened himself before the long cheval glass. He twisted his mustache, first up, then down, and critically noted each effect. He smoothed his glossy hair with the palm of his hand. Had he been the major he would have used a hand mirror at this stage, and anxiously scanned the back of his head, but Charlie's thatch was thick and crisp, and no crown as yet looked out like a rock at low water.

Mr. Soper's attention passed from his head to his necktie. He lengthened the bows fastidiously, pulled his coat and craned to see the back effect—turned sideways to mark the beautiful line in the fall of his trouser leg—then suddenly looked at his watch, and found he had only twenty minutes before dinner. He made a great speed with his toilet, and in fifteen minutes was going through a similar pantomime in his dress suit.

A gleam of fire in his shirt stud carried his thoughts with lightning rapidity (via diamond rings) to Nellie and the present he had brought for her. Had it traveled safely? He looked for his rugs. This greenish bundle was not his. How came it here? He laid it on the bed side by side with his own neatly strapped roll and carelessly unwrapped it.

"Good heavens!" he cried, "a baby!" dropping the corner of the rug and starting back. The baby gave a little grunting sigh and opened its eyes for a brief second, while Charlie's heart settled down to its normal beat. He felt better able to cope with it in this condition.

"A sleeping baby is better than a roaring lion," passed through his mind. He fancied it was a scriptural quotation. The first shock once over, he gave way to rage. Who and what was this baby and why was it smuggled into his room? It must be got rid of at once; but how, and where?

It seemed to have come with the luggage, but it was certainly not his, and he was not going to be made a laughing stock, and perhaps have his chances with Nellie spoilt, through this ridiculous baby. The only thing he could think of was to leave it secretly in the major's room. It was, perhaps, playing rather low down, but if it was not the major's baby, neither was it his, and so—! He grasped the child, huddled in its rugs, and tiptoed across to the major's room opposite, hoping to find it empty. The major, however, had also found it necessary to linger over some finishing touches. He opened his door at that instant, and the two men met on the threshold.

Maj. Slimm looked inquiringly at the bundle in Charlie's arms. At this critical juncture a small white hand with five waving tenacles of fingers appeared from the wraps, and a smothered cry was heard.

"The deuce!" said the major, starting back.

Charlie's plot was nipped in the bud. He looked piteously and appealingly at his fellow man, who stood grinning facetiously.

"I found it in my room," stammered Charlie at last. "It must have come with the luggage. It isn't mine, so I was coming—" he stopped for want of an excuse. He really could not say, "because I hoped it was yours." But Maj. Slimm guessed it. His grin faded. He fixed Charlie with a hostile eye, and the two men regarded one another, while the tentacles waved between.

Then the major said clearly and decisively: "That baby does not belong to me, and I won't have it planted down in my room."

To point his remark he turned, locked his door on the outside, and walked down to dinner with the key in his pocket.

Then the gong clanged and the baby whimpered simultaneously. As the gong ceased a rustle of skirts was audible in the corridor.

Charlie fled into his room. The baby was crying loudly by this time and he shook it frantically to and fro. A wild idea of smothering it with the pillow and disposing of it at once for all flashed across his brain. He was in a liberal perspiration, and his collar was fast losing its pristine freshness.

There came a tap at the door and the smooth voice of Mr. Seymour's man made itself heard.

"Mr. Seymour sent me to tell you dinner is served, sir."

"Oh, come in, Robins," called Charlie. It was no use hiding the baby; it could be heard, anyway.

Robins came in with a perfectly impassive face, as though he were not at all surprised to find Mr. Soper swinging a screaming infant in his arms, with about the same action a groom employs in emptying a pail of water. As a matter of fact, he was not surprised, having previously scrutinized the scene through the crack in the door and doubled himself up hilariously before knocking.

"For goodness sake, Robins, do take this baby," implored Charlie. "It isn't mine. I found it in my room. I don't know how it came here. It must have got mixed up with my things."

Robins preserved a discreet silence.

"Don't stand staring," went on Charlie, getting angry again, "but do something. Invent some plan to get rid of the little brute! I can't go down to dinner and leave it howling here!"

"I think, sir," said Robins, after serious thought, "you had better explain to Mr. Seymour. It'll 'ave to come out, sir, sooner or later. There's no concealing of a baby."

Charlie groaned.

"If I might make a suggestion, sir," continued Robins, "I think you had better 'ave a toothache or a 'eadache, sir, and ask to be excused going down. Mr. Seymour'll take more kindly to an explanation after dinner. He's been kept waiting now five minutes, and he don't like it, sir."

This sounded ominous, and Charlie was only too glad to defer the explanation.

"And if you like, sir, I can send up one of the women——"

"No, no!" exclaimed Charlie, "I cannot have the whole household told!'

"Very good, sir," said Robins, resignedly; "as you please. I'll bring you up a bit of dinner myself, and I think if we could administer a cup of milk to that baby it might leave off screaming. I really think it must be 'ungry, sir."

"Robins, you're a genius!" said Charlie, and Robins departed on his errands of mercy.

Mr. Seymour was looking impatiently at the clock when Robins appeared to say that Mr. Soper had a violent toothache, and begged to be excused from dinner.

"Then we will not wait another moment," he exclaimed, rising with alacrity.

"Oh, poor Mr. Soper!" said Nellie, "how he must be suffering!"

Maj. Slimm grinned sardonically and offered his arm.

"Oh, wait one minute, father," cried Nellie, "while I fetch my cocaine. I know it will cure his toothache. Robins can take it up." She ran off. At the same moment an elderly woman—the housekeeper—approached Mr. Seymour. She was stout and red flustered in manner. "If you please, sir," said she in a loud, frightened whisper, "there's a porter named Fagg and his daughter come up from the station, and they say we've a—a baby here, sir, as belongs to them—at least, to Mrs. Jones, the doctor's wife—and the nurse girl's there—and they lost it in London—and he says one of our gentlemen's brought it here! All this without explanatory stops and accompanied by scared glances at the major.

"What is this all about?" said Mr. Seymour aloud. "Do take time and explain yourself. Do I understand you to say one of my guests has appropriated an infant and brought it to my house? Preposterous! Maj. Slimm, do you know anything about this?"

"Well—er—er," stuttered the major, pulling his mustache, "the fact is, I—er—believe Mr. Soper has got a—er—a young child upstairs."

"Soper!" exclaimed Mr. Seymour.

"Mr. Soper!" cried his sister and a friend of Nellie's, who completed the party.

"A baby upstairs!" shrieked Nellie, who had come back in time to catch something of the major's words. "Do let's go and see it." And in another moment she and her friend were careering upstairs, the aunt panting behind in the interests of propriety. Maj. Slimm followed more leisurely, and Mr. Seymour ordered Clarissa Fagg and her father up for purposes of identification.

Charlie was very busy. He was seated on a low chair, with the baby gripped firmly between his knees, supporting it under the arms with his hands. Robins knelt immediately in front, and was solemnly administering milk with a teaspoon, and regularly spilling half the contents down the youngster's chin. Both men had their mouths slightly open under the tension and were too intent on their labors to look up till a burst of merriment from the door startled them.

Robins dropped the spoon—full of milk—onto Charlie's knee, and Charlie only held on to the baby by a miracle. He gave himself up as a lost man, but Clarissa Fagg bounded forward, seized the baby, kissed it nearly to suffocation, and—saved the situation.

That happened some time ago. Nellie Seymour is now Mrs. Charles Soper, and it is quite the usual thing for Charlie to travel with a baby, but it is no longer on the rack.

Neither is Charlie.

UNOSTENTATIOUSLY, without fanfare of trumpets and a demand for attention, the United States government is conducting a movement calculated to make the term "citizen soldiery" mean something. The movement now concerns itself more accurately with the education of young citizens into potential officers of a volunteer army.

To this end a series of summer "student military instruction camps" are being held at central points for the several major divisions of the nation. These camps for 1915 are located at Ludington, Mich.; Plattsburg, N. Y.; Chickamauga Park, Ga., and Monterey, Cal. They are open to high school boys, college students and graduates, and young men generally similarly equipped with the basis for military instruction.

The camp at Ludington, Mich., is typical of the student instruction camps. It opened last summer with an attendance of about 125 young men from Chicago and surrounding territory. The camp is operated by officers of the regular establishment of the United States army, and is to be considered distinctly an official institution.

The Ludington camp is located on the east shore of Lake Michigan, 177 miles by water from Chicago. While the camp is operated with strict military discipline, there are features of camp life considerably more attractive than the drill ground of a military post of the "regulars."

At Ludington the young "citizen cadets" find fishing, boating, bathing, dancing, lessons in fencing and horsemanship, and interesting lectures by men high in the military service. Among those who addressed the students last year was Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood.

The vicinity abounds with interesting resorts and many of the young men attending the camp have induced their parents to take their vacations at neighboring points.

The camp will open this year on July 5 and continue to Aug. 8.

The day at Ludington goes something like this:

Reveille	6:00 a. m.
Breakfast	6:30 a. m.
Police camp	7:00 a. m.
Drill	7:30 to 8:15 a. m.
Lecture	8:30 to 9:15 a. m.
Drill	9:30 to 10:15 a. m.
Target practice	10:30 to 12 m.
Dinner	12:30

It will be noted that the morning's cool hours are filled to the utmost. The rest of the day is given over to special work to those who care to volunteer for it, and the amusements that may seem desirable.

This year the students of the camp will take part in a war game.

Present returns indicate that not less than 400 young men will be in attendance at the camp this summer.

To those young men who are eligible the student instruction camps offer a valuable vacation at small expense. The requirements are simple. The applicant must be "of good moral character, sound physically, at least 5 feet 4 inches in height, and between the ages of 18 and 20, in universities, colleges, and the graduating class at high schools—and other schools so rated—or graduates of such schools."

The cost for the period of five weeks will be $17.50 for subsistence, the uniform costs from $5 to $10. A deposit of $5 will be required of each student to pay for any loss or damage to government property which goes to make up the equipment of the camp. This is returned to the student, if he incurs no loss, at the end of the encampment.

Young men considering attendance at this summer's session of the instruction camp may receive official information by addressing the adjutant, central department, United States army, Federal building, Chicago, or other army departmental headquarters.

To those who finish the prescribed course certificates are issued by the war department. The department also keeps a record of these young men, holding their names and addresses for ready reference should the time of the country's need make a call upon them necessary.

"To the nation these camps furnish an excellent means of fostering the spirit of patriotism and of spreading far and wide a better knowledge of the military history, the military policy, and the military needs of the country, whose welfare demands that its citizens be educated in just and correct views of these vital considerations," observed an officer in high authority, discussing the very present needs of the nation.

This system of camp training has been in effect for a number of years, although it has just passed what might be well termed its probationary or experimental period. The graduates of the camps are made members of the Society of the National Reserve Corps of the United States, which is the closest thing to effective "citizen soldiery" that the country holds.

The movement bears the indorsement of the nation's highest authorities, including President Wilson. "I am very much interested in the successful working out of the idea of these camps," said the president in placing his approval of the plan. "I believe the students attending will derive not only a great deal of physical benefit from the healthful, open air life but also that they will benefit from the discipline, habits of regularity, and the knowledge of personal and camp sanitation which the experience in camp will give them."

Former President William H. Taft has put himself on record in indorsement of the student camps in the following terms:

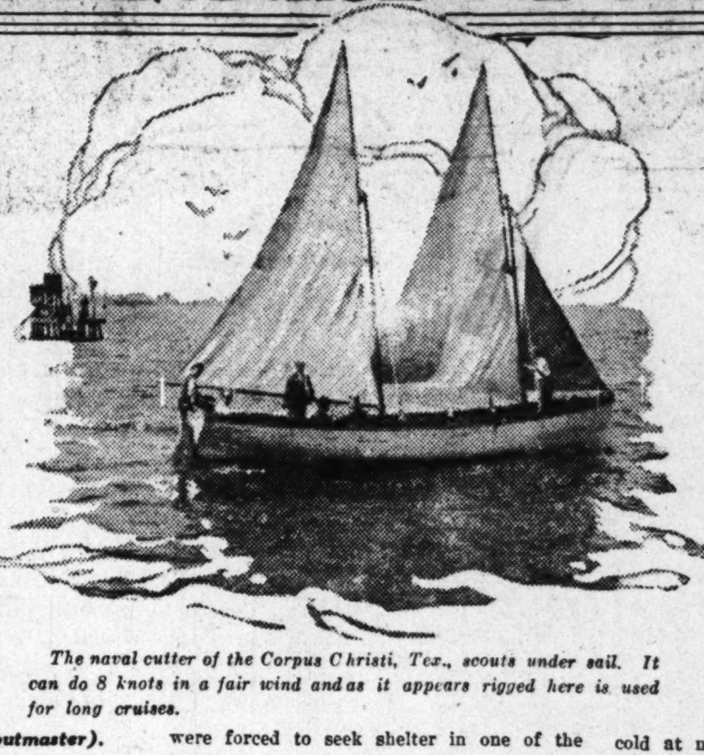
"For young men who have a taste for outdoor life and military training—and, indeed, for 'roughing it'—I can conceive no better opportunity for them to gratify this taste than to accept the invitation of the war department. They can be sure it will be no boy's play if they go into it, but it will not only give them substantial knowledge of the principles of military science but an opportunity for physical development and muscular training, and a regular life that will contribute greatly to their health and strength."

It has been pointed out that the result sought in these camps is not militarism but the training necessary to patriotic defense, "which will be found not in the arguments of diplomats but in the acts of soldiers."

The TRAIL of the BOY SCOUTS

SCOUT SAILORS IN TEXAS.

"The Trail" from time to time receives from scouts and scoutmasters in widely separated sections of the country accounts of their activities. When these accounts present material of general interest and value to the movement they can be presented in this department. Here is a story of the seamanship activities of Troop No. 1, Boy Scouts of America, Corpus Christi, Tex.



The naval cutter of the Corpus Christi, Tex., scouts under sail. It can do 8 knots in a fair wind and as it appears rigged here is used for long cruises.

By I. C. Kerridge (Scoutmaster).

CORPUS CHRISTI is a city of 18,000 inhabitants and is situated on Corpus Christi bay, on the Texas coast. Corpus Christi is a health resort to which thousands of tourists flock every summer to enjoy the gulf breeze and the excellent fishing, bathing, and boating. Corpus Christi bay is about eighty miles in circumference.

The picture shows one of the thirty foot naval cutters presented to the boy scouts of Corpus Christi by the navy department, for their use in sea scouting and in teaching them seamanship. The picture shows the scout crew leaving on one of its Saturday afternoon cruises on the bay to learn how to handle the sails and steer. With a good southeast wind the boat has been known to make eight miles an hour. This cutter is considered the safest boat on the bay, as the scouts have been caught out in a forty mile wind and have never had an accident of any sort. The scout who has the best control of the cutter and can manage the sails is appointed captain of the boat every three months.

As can be seen in the picture, it has a mainsail, foresail, and jib. If at any time the wind dies down ten of the scouts act as oarsmen, as there is a place for five oars on each side, which comes in real handy sometimes.

During June, 1913, the boy scouts covered more than 1,000 miles of inland waterways, and were the first to pilot a sail rigged boat up the intercoastal canal from Corpus Christi to Galveston, a distance of 250 miles. They went to Galveston accompanied by several boatloads of Corpus Christi boosters and a brass band to celebrate the opening of the intercoastal canal. The band and boy scouts paraded the principal streets of Galveston. On their return trip they encountered a squall and, as the waves were so high, they were forced to seek shelter in one of the bays.

Last summer these boy scouts sailed across the bay, a distance of sixteen miles, and established camp under a grove of live oak trees for a period of ten days.

In August last year the scouts established camp at the Epworth league grounds and entertained a visiting troop of boy scouts and took them for a cruise to Port Aransas, where they catch the silver king, or tarpon.

The scouts have planned a voyage up the intercoastal canal to Houston, Tex., a distance of about 300 miles, to establish camp with the Houston boy scouts.

The scouts hauled the cutter up on shore in April, scraped the barnacles off, caulked it up, and gave it several coats of copper paint and one coat of white paint inside and out. They also cleaned the sails and greased the masts and fitted it with new stays and shrouds, and also with new tow lines and ropes for handling the sails.

They have purchased a twelve foot row boat to tow behind the cutter and it will be used for making landings in shallow places. They expect to make several moonlight cruises on the bay this summer and take their friends along.

Around the Camp Fire.

When you go to camp be sure you are prepared. Don't go off half equipped and then suffer for it through the whole outing.

In the enthusiasm of departure in the heat of the day the boy scout is prone to pay little heed to warm clothes and bedding. It can get mighty cold at night in the middle of the season. Plenty of blankets sure. A sweater probably will prove comfortable.

Don't forget a cake of soap—and on second thought take another. The generous use of soap has seldom injured any boy's hands, and often it will help a lot to prevent ivy poisoning and nettle rash.

Then there are the can opener, the salt and towels, and a really watertight match box, all items that are likely to be overlooked. It is a good thing to inventory the tackle box before starting off fishing, too. A certain young man once suffered the painful experience of taking everything along for a bass casting excursion—all except his reel.

CELEBRATING THE FOURTH.

Right now probably every boy reader of this page is making his plans for the big Fourth of July.

For a long time it was considered a good deal of fun to make all the noise possible with guns, cannon, firecrackers, torpedoes and explosives in other forms on the "glorious Fourth. Then year by year hundreds suffered from the inevitable accidents resulting from explosives in the hands of children and inexperienced persons. Each year many lives were lost and thousands were injured and maimed and left crippled for the rest of their days.

The Chicago Tribune, followed by other publications, some years ago began a movement for the "Sane Fourth," a celebration of the Independence day anniversary of July 4, 1776, none the less patriotic, but with due regard for fingers, hands, arms, legs, eyes, ears, and lives.

The result of this Sane Fourth movement has been a mighty conservation of humanity. Annually the total of life and injury tolls has been reduced. The death rate of the Fourth is decreasing as intelligence spreads.

This year when most of the civilized peoples of the world are busy destroying each other with gunpowder the inane and purposeless burning of powder in the celebration of the Fourth would seem peculiarly futile and foolish. Why make a noise? The biggest cannon cracker ever made wouldn't amount to much alongside the roar of a forty-two centimeter gun. Any boy can find a world of things to do for fun on the Fourth and abstinence from the fire cracker and gas pipe cannon will not rob the day of its joys.

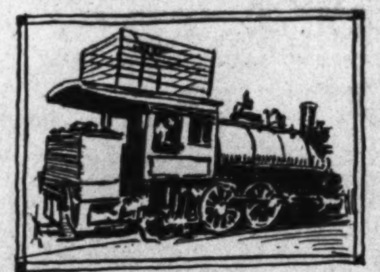
Be Sane and stay in one piece.

POPULAR SCIENCE

TRAIN DISPATCHING BY WIRELESS.

OUT where the transcontinental railroads cross the big stretches of the western plains and mountains the biting blizzards, the snows, and the sleet often play havoc with the telegraph lines, breaking communication and preventing the transmission of train orders.

For a number of years the Union Pacific railroad has been conducting experiments with wireless telephone and telegraph installation for the transmission of orders. Dr. Frederick H. Millener, research electrician, is in charge of the laboratory and is the inventor of a wireless telephone which is rapidly progressing beyond the experimental stages.



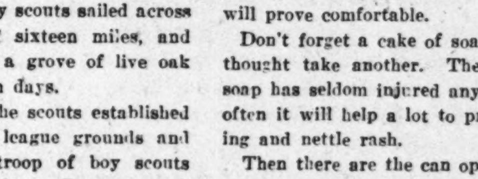
Engine with Wireless Antennae.

The miles of railway yards at the Union Pacific terminals and shops at Omaha and sundry divisions of the main line to the west are the experiment ground of Dr. Millener's labors.

A locomotive has been equipped with aerials and it has been proven possible to transmit messages to a speeding train at considerable distances within the range of the big sending station in the Millener laboratory. The biggest wireless coil in the world has been built by the staff under Dr. Millener.

A series of wireless stations are projected to give the railroad wireless dispatching facilities clear across the country from Omaha to the terminals on the western coast. No linemen are needed on the wireless and snowdrifts are powerless as long as the aerials are kept in operation. The possibility of transmitting detailed signals to the engineer in the cab, whether he be in the yards or 200 miles out at the other end of the division, from the dispatcher's office opens up a new future in railroad operation.

MY ADVENTURES AS A SPY



By Sir Robert Baden-Powell, K. C. B.

Founder of the Boy Scouts.

IT was early morning; the gates were just opened; the workmen were beginning to arrive, and several carts of material were waiting to come in. Seizing the opportunity of the gates being open, I gave a hurried glance in, as any ordinary passerby might do. I was promptly ejected by the policeman on duty in the lodge.

I did not go far. My intention was to get inside somehow and to see what I could. I watched the first of the carts go in and noticed that the policeman was busily engaged in talking to the leading wagoner, while the second began to pass through the gate. In a moment I jumped alongside it on the side opposite to the janitor, and so passed in and continued to walk with the vehicle as it turned to the right and wound its way round the new building in course of construction.

I then noticed another policeman ahead of me and so I kept my position by the cart, readapting its cover in order to avoid him. Unfortunately in rounding the corner I was spied by the first policeman, and he immediately began to shout to me. I was deaf to his remarks and walked on as unconcernedly as a guilty being could till I placed the corner of the new building between him and me. Then I fairly hooked it along the back of the building and rounded the far corner of it. As I did so I saw out of the tail of my eye that he was coming full speed after me and was calling policeman No. 2 to his aid. I darted like a red shank round the next corner out of sight of both policemen, and looked for a method of escape.

The scaffolding of the new house towered above me, and a ladder led upward on to it. Up this I went like a lamplighter, keeping one eye on the corner of the building lest I should be followed.

I was half way up when round the corner came one of the policemen. I at once "froze." I was about fifteen feet above sea level and not twenty yards from him. He stood undecided, with his legs well apart, peering from side to side in every direction to see where I had gone, very anxious and shifty. I was equally anxious but immovable. Presently he drew nearer to the ladder and, strangely enough, I felt safer when he came below me, and he passed almost under me, looking in at the doorways of the unfinished building. Then he doubtfully turned and looked back at a shed behind him, thinking I might have gone in there, and finally started off and ran on round the next corner of the building. The moment he disappeared I finished the rest of my run up the ladder and safely reached the platform of the scaffolding.

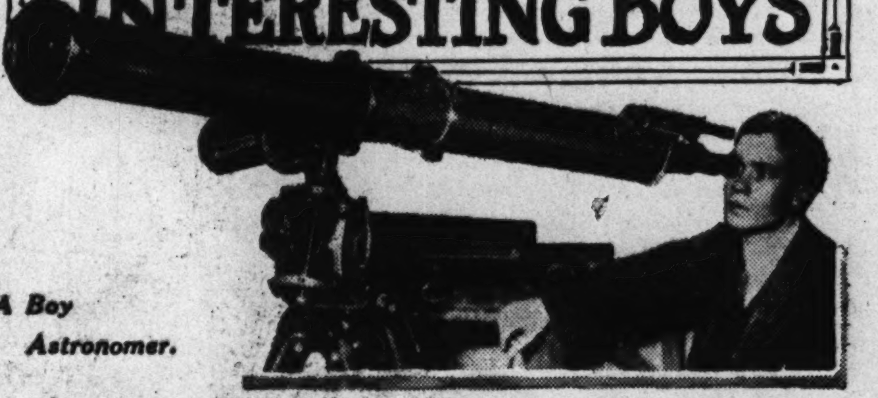
INTERESTING BOYS



A Boy Astronomer.

AN astronomer at the age of 7 years, an accepted scientific authority before he was 15, and a world known observer now at 19 years—that is the story of Frederick C. Leonard of Madison Park, Chicago, certainly an interesting boy.

"I have been interested in the stars ever since I can remember," Mr. Leonard relates, "and the study of them is just a part of my nature. I didn't begin to do any serious observation work until in the summer of 1908." He was 12 years old then.

This young astronomer has the good fortune to have been able to work at the great Yerkes observatory on occasion, however, after he had already won national recognition by his work with his much more modest observatory at home. Leonard's first equipment was a spy glass and a dictionary. Then he came into possession of a work on astronomy, and finally he now has a large, efficient telescope.

The youth has contributed many highly technical and authoritative articles to scientific publications, both in America and abroad. Also he has organized an astronomical society. The society organ was first issued on his observatory typewriter, with a series of carbon copies for the other members. Later it grew into a fullblown publication with a regular press run and a mailing list.

Leonard's unusual success in the pursuit of astronomy may be credited to two elements—his inborn aptitude and close application. He has had no time for baseball and the sports of boyhood.

But he's had a lot of fun with the stars.

The RETURN of CODADAD.

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS

By Wm. DONAHEY

The king of Harran was the father of fifty sons. Prince Codadad, one of the king's sons, was born and brought up in a distant country. Codadad goes as a stranger to his father's court and offers himself as a soldier in the king's army. The king does not know Codadad is his son, but becomes fond of him, making him governor of his sons, who soon grow jealous of him. By a clever trick the princes lead their father to believe they are lost through the carelessness of Codadad. The king orders Codadad to go in search of them, and one day while looking for his lost brothers Codadad comes to a castle where he finds a beautiful woman at a barred window, who tells him she is the prisoner of a giant who will surely kill him. The giant appears, and, drawing his sword, Codadad goes to meet him. He kills the giant and with the lovely woman goes to liberate the giant's prisoners, among whom he finds his forty-nine brothers. The woman, who is a princess driven from her own home, tells her story, and Codadad marries her. He tells his brothers who he really is, and they, being more jealous than ever, stab him during the night and flee. His wife goes to get help, and on her return finds that Codadad has vanished.

THE doctor and the princess searched everywhere, but no sign of Codadad could they find. He had disappeared as completely as though the ground had opened and swallowed him. Believing that her husband had been carried away by some wild beast, the princess gave herself up to tears and cries of woe. The kind hearted doctor persuaded her to return to his home with him, where she could rest, and she accepted his invitation. When she was feeling better, the physician asked her to tell him her story.

He listened with the deepest interest and when she had finished, said, "My dear lady, you should avenge your husband's death. Go to the king of Harran and tell him how your husband has been murdered by his jealous brothers. The king is a wise and just ruler and I am sure he will listen to your wrongs."

The princess was much cheered by the good doctor's words and agreed to follow his advice if he would accompany her.

"Gladly," cried the doctor, "I will gladly go as your protector." So early next morning, mounted on camels, the two set out for Harran. On arriving in Harran they went at once to an inn and asked for the latest news of the court. They were told that the king was greatly worried over the absence of one of his sons, Prince Codadad.

"It seems that the king did not know Codadad was his son," said the porter at the inn, "until the princess, his mother, arrived at court from a distant land and informed the king of the fact."

The doctor thought it would be wise for them to see Codadad's mother first, before visiting the king.

"Now," said the good doctor, "you must stay here at the inn, for if the king's wicked sons should see you, they might wish to do you harm, fearing you would tell the king how they had murdered their brother. I will go and make an appointment with your husband's mother, so you can go to her and tell her your story."

The doctor at once set out and soon arrived at the palace, where he asked for Princess Pirouze, Codadad's mother. He was directed to her apartments, where he told one of the slaves that he had news for the princess of her lost son. The slave told him to wait and hurried away. Presently he returned and told the doctor that his mistress wished to see him at once. He followed the slave into a large room, where Princess Pirouze sat, surrounded by her attendants. The princess received the doctor kindly and asked for news of her son.

The doctor told the princess about Codadad and his brothers, and when he told how cruelly the young man had been stabbed by his wicked brothers, his mother fainted away. When she had recovered the doctor told her of Codadad's marriage, and of the Princess Deryabar, and of his strange disappearance while his wife had gone for help.

"Your kindness shall be rewarded," cried the grateful mother. "Go to the Princess Deryabar and tell her that the king of Harran will soon receive her as his son's wife."

The doctor thanked Pirouze and left the room. When the poor mother was left alone she burst into tears, for she felt sure that she would never see her son again. While she was still weeping the king of Harran entered the room and at once the princess told him the whole story, as she had heard it from the doctor.

When the king heard of the wicked deed of his sons he was very angry and ordered that they should be arrested and thrown into prison. He told his grand vizier to go to the inn where Codadad's wife was staying and to bring her and the doctor both to the palace.

When the princess of Deryabar arrived at the palace she was received with great respect by the king, who at once took her into the presence of Codadad's mother. Princess Pirouze received her daughter-in-law with much affection, embracing her many times. At the request of Codadad's father and mother the princess repeated the story of their unhappy adventures and of her husband's disappearance and begged the king to punish the wicked brothers for their cruel treatment of one who had rescued them from death.

"Though the murderers are my sons," cried the king, "they shall certainly suffer for this wicked deed."

In order that the people might know that he was acting justly, the king told his grand vizier to inform the public of Codadad's murder and that the forty-nine princes were to die for the crime. The king ordered that public prayers should be said for nine days, and on the tenth day he declared that the young princes, his sons, should die.

The execution was delayed, however, for suddenly a great army of enemies came marching upon the city. The loss of Codadad was now deeply felt by the king, for this son had been a gifted brave soldier, who was greatly feared by his enemies. However, the king bravely marched out with his army and a great battle soon was fought outside the walls of the city. Although the king of Harran and all his soldiers fought bravely they were slowly driven back by the other army, which was much stronger in numbers.

Just as the king's army was about to be defeated, a body of horsemen suddenly appeared and fell upon the king's enemies with such force that they were soon driven off, leaving a great many dead upon the field. The king of Harran was very grateful for the sudden change of fortune, and when he rode up to thank the brave strangers for their timely aid, he was filled with the greatest astonishment to find that their leader was no other than his supposedly dead son, Codadad!

The news of Codadad's return and of how he had turned defeat into victory for his father traveled very rapidly and when he rode into the city at the head of the army, he was proclaimed a great hero on every side.

There was a happy meeting between Codadad and his mother and his wife and when he heard their story the king demanded of him to tell what had befallen him—why he had vanished so strangely and how he had recovered of his wounds.

"Well," cried the happy prince, "when the princess left me to go in search of the doctor a peasant passed by, and seeing that I was badly hurt, he picked me up, placed me upon his mule, and carried me away to his own hut. He dressed my wounds and took such good care of me that I finally pulled through and soon gained all my strength back again. As soon as I was strong enough I gave him all the money and jewels I had with me and after thanking him for his kindness I started off for the palace of Harran. While I was on my way there I learned that a host of enemies was about to attack the city of Harran. I quickly persuaded the soldiers of the villages I passed through to join me and, as you know, we arrived just in time."

When Codadad learned that the young princes, his brothers, were about to be beheaded, he begged his father so earnestly to pardon them that the king finally consented. That very day the young princes were released from prison, Codadad himself taking off their chains and gladly forgiving them for their unkindness to him.

The good doctor was heartily thanked and when he left the city his camel fairly staggered under the load of gold and presents Codadad had given him. The king built a magnificent palace for Codadad and his beautiful wife, and they lived there in peace and happiness for many years.

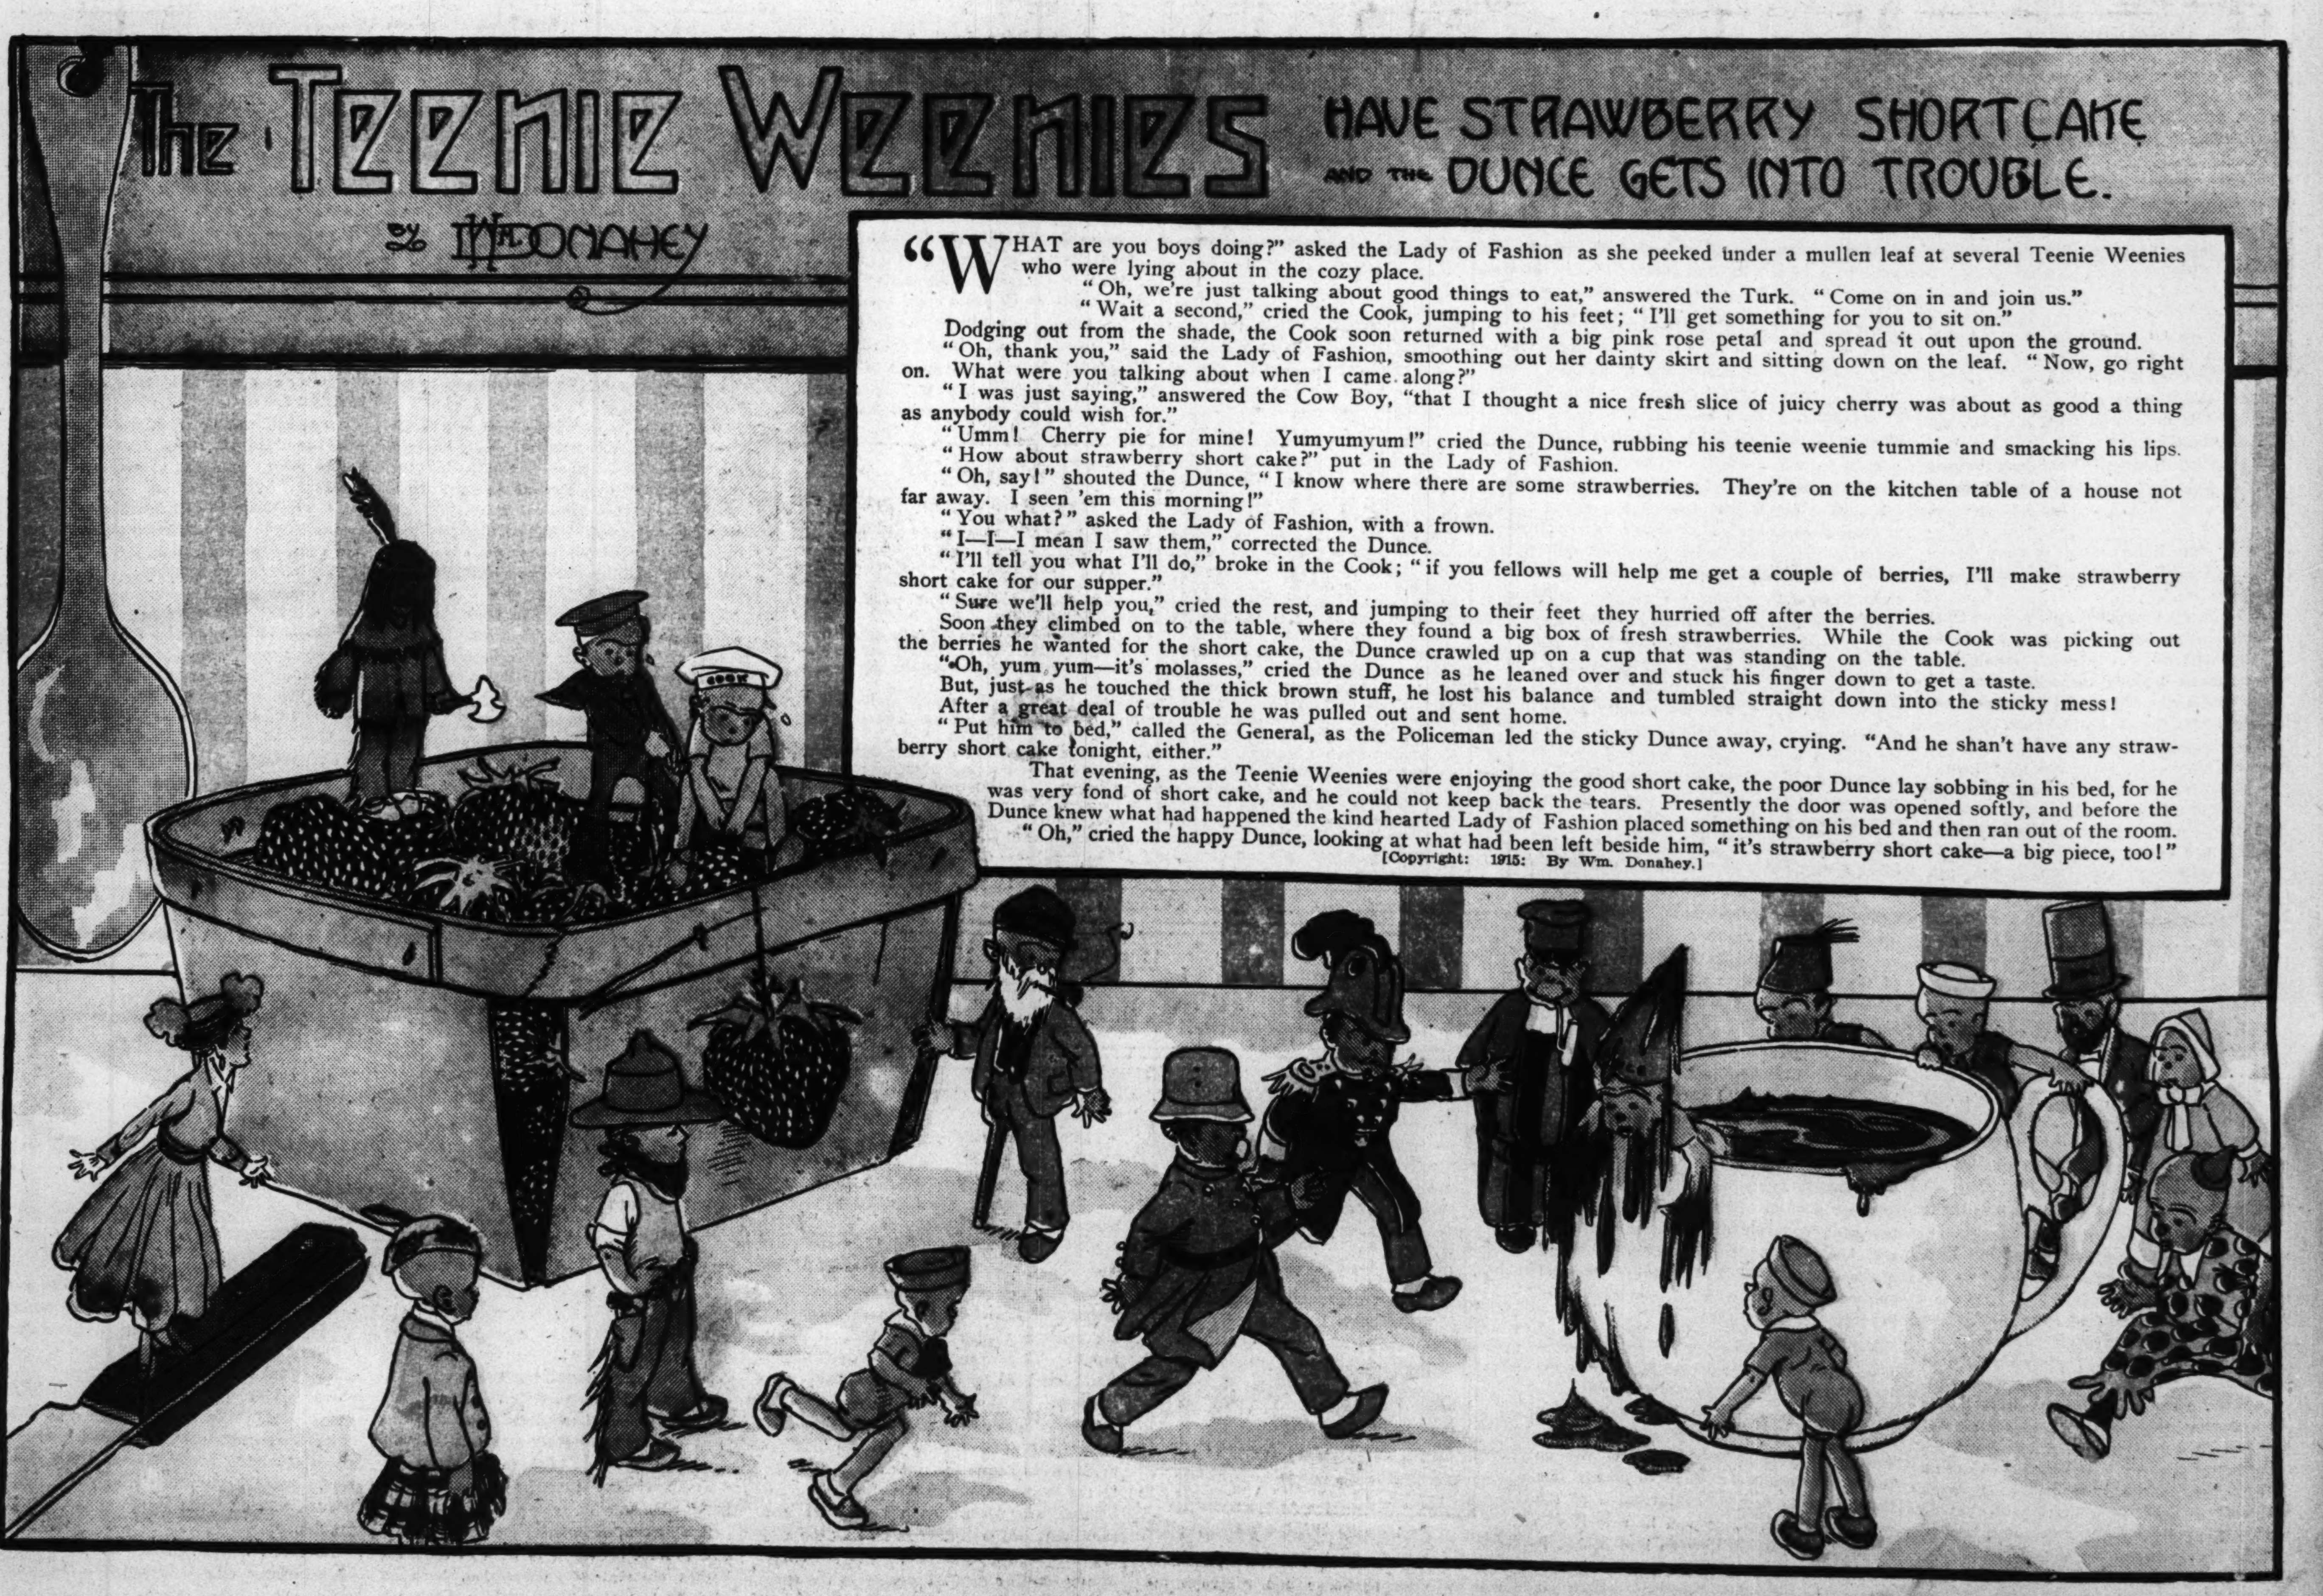
The TEENIE WEENIES HAVE STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE AND THE DUNCE GETS INTO TROUBLE.

By Wm. DONAHEY



"WHAT are you boys doing?" asked the Lady of Fashion as she peeked under a mullen leaf at several Teenie Weenies who were lying about in the cozy place.

"Oh, we're just talking about good things to eat," answered the Turk. "Come on in and join us."

"Wait a second," cried the Cook, jumping to his feet; "I'll get something for you to sit on."

Dodging out from the shade, the Cook soon returned with a big pink rose petal and spread it out upon the ground.

"Oh, thank you," said the Lady of Fashion, smoothing out her dainty skirt and sitting down on the leaf. "Now, go right on. What were you talking about when I came along?"

"I was just saying," answered the Cow Boy, "that I thought a nice fresh slice of juicy cherry was about as good a thing as anybody could wish for."

"Umm! Cherry pie for mine! Yumyumyum!" cried the Dunce, rubbing his teenie weenie tummie and smacking his lips.

"How about strawberry short cake?" put in the Lady of Fashion.

"Oh, say!" shouted the Dunce, "I know where there are some strawberries. They're on the kitchen table of a house not far away. I seen 'em this morning!"

"You what?" asked the Lady of Fashion, with a frown.

"I—I—I mean I saw them," corrected the Dunce.

"I'll tell you what I'll do," broke in the Cook; "if you fellows will help me get a couple of berries, I'll make strawberry short cake for our supper."

"Sure we'll help you," cried the rest, and jumping to their feet they hurried off after the berries.

Soon they climbed on to the table, where they found a big box of fresh strawberries. While the Cook was picking out the berries he wanted for the short cake, the Dunce crawled up on a cup that was standing on the table.

"Oh, yum yum—it's molasses," cried the Dunce as he leaned over and stuck his finger down to get a taste.

But, just as he touched the thick brown stuff, he lost his balance and tumbled straight down into the sticky mess!

After a great deal of trouble he was pulled out and sent home.

"Put him to bed," called the General, as the Policeman led the sticky Dunce away, crying. "And he shan't have any strawberry short cake tonight, either."

That evening, as the Teenie Weenies were enjoying the good short cake, the poor Dunce lay sobbing in his bed, for he was very fond of short cake, and he could not keep back the tears. Presently the door was opened softly, and before the Dunce knew what had happened the kind hearted Lady of Fashion placed something on his bed and then ran out of the room.

"Oh," cried the happy Dunce, looking at what had been left beside him, "it's strawberry short cake—a big piece, too!"

The New CRINOLINE OUTLINES in SUMMER SUITS and FROCKS

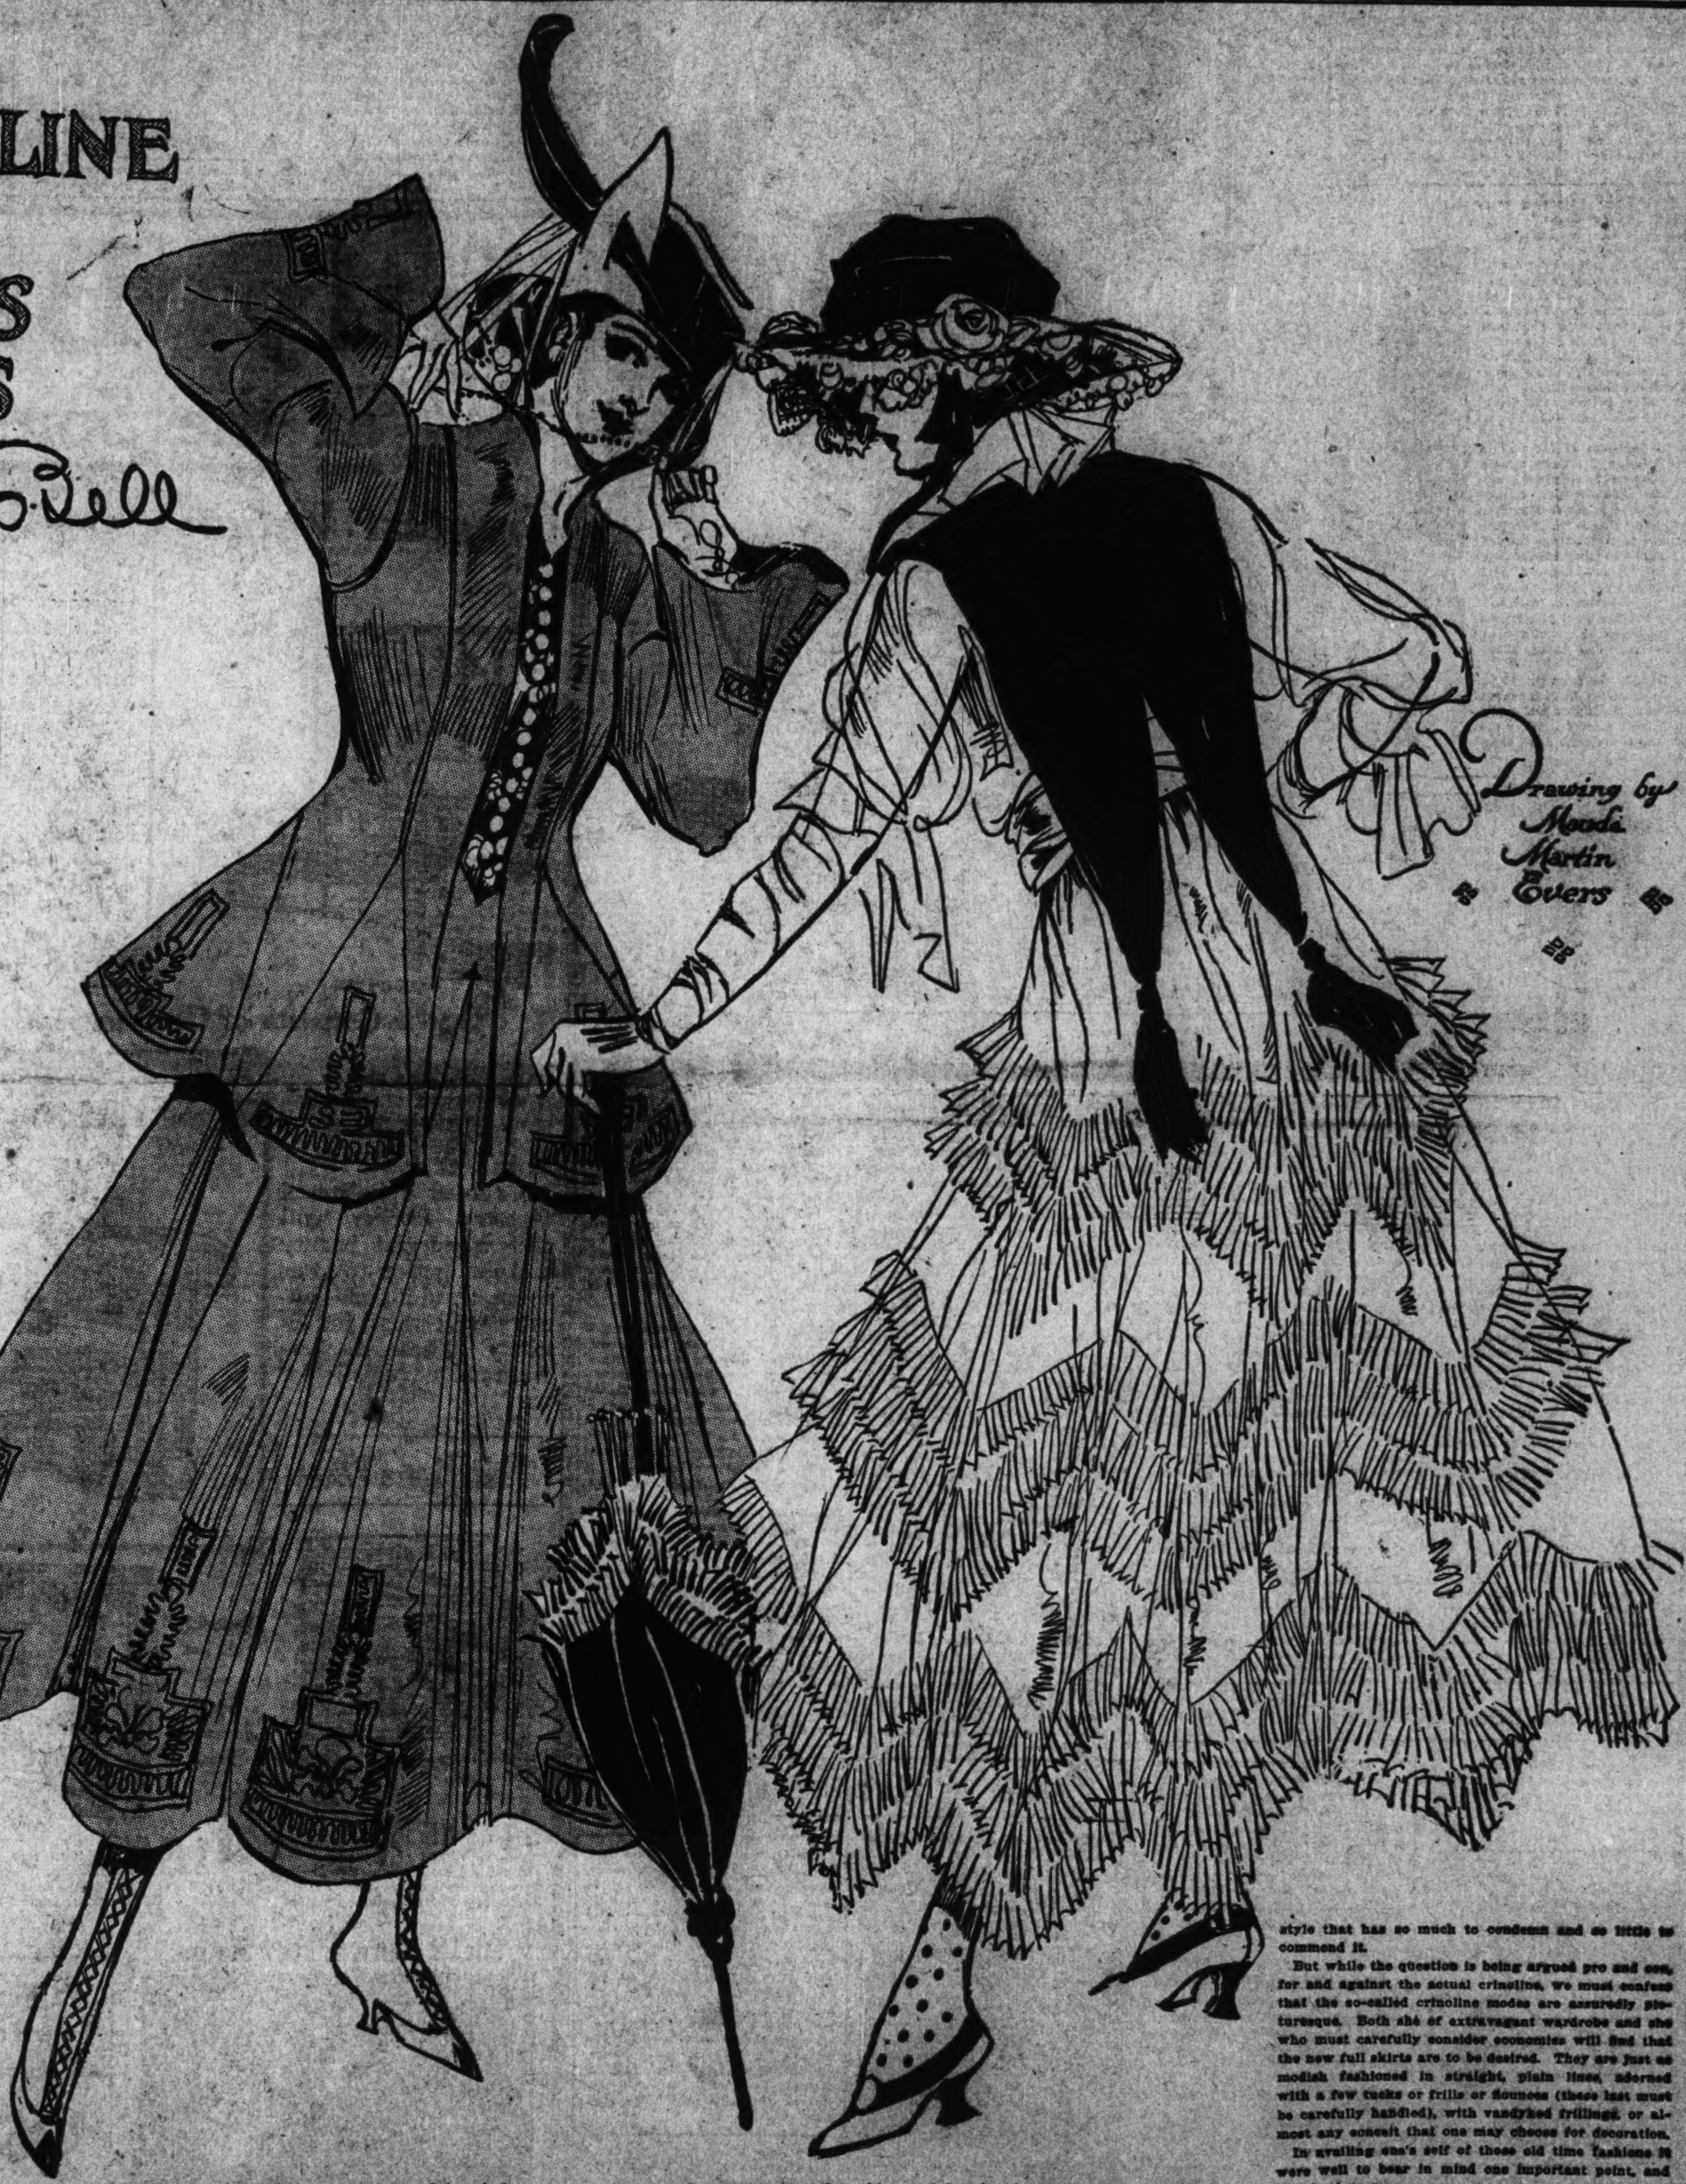
by Valérie Bell

The advance news, notes, and illustrations of THE TRIBUNE Fashion Department, prepared under the supervision of VALERIE BELL, will be found to be absolutely authentic and reliable. Only the latest and best will be presented; and it will be found oftentimes that TRIBUNE readers are thoroughly posted upon the newest things in the fashion world even before such have reached the counters of the local shops.

Styles designed by VALERIE BELL and cleverly illustrated by Maud Martin Evers are especially planned to be worn by any type or build of figure. They will differ from the ordinary fashion plate in that they will be equally suitable for the maid and the matron, the plump and the slender; and, being always in advance of current styles, can be adopted with confident assurance that they will not become passe after a short time.

Special features for the home dressmaker, hints and helps, will be given due consideration.

TRIBUNE readers are privileged to consult with VALERIE BELL by letter on any matter concerning dress and fashion.



Drawing by Maud Martin Evers

Tailored model of hand woven Chinese pongee and braided with self colored soutache, in which the godet is cleverly employed.

One of the new full skirt models, closely fitted about the hips and gored to the knee.

HAVE you seen the latest manifestation of fashion—that fad for full skirts, the fullest that we have had for ever so long? And don't you think that these bouffant skirts, with hems anywhere from four yards around for a tailor made to as much as six yards in a supple silk or mousseline weave—don't you think that they are strongly reminiscent of the days when crinolines were worn?

They are, and the point is that crinolines are being worm!

Not the old time hoop skirt, though; far from it. The newest thing achieves the same quaint outline in a much modified form and without the swinging and swaying hoops that made their wearer seem like a perambulating haystack.

The new effect is achieved in the cut and the ruffling of the underskirt. Cleverly and closely fitted around the hips, gored to the knee, there is a full circular flounce from there down, and this is just a foundation for ruffles, shirred or plaited, put on in straight around rows, vandyked, or following perpendicular lines, according to the fancy of the maker or wearer.

For tailor mades the drop skirt is fashioned of taffetas, a soft, supple chiffon taffetas, and the ruffles are about as often of ribbon as of the piece silk. For cotton frocks—and this is the season when the cotton frock is in the highest favor—the drop or underskirt, matching the outer, is of lawn or of chambray, or any of the soft weaves that do not require special stiffening to make them "stand up" to their work. They must be firm, but not stiff. That is imperative. With the drop or underskirt provided for, the set of the outer skirt is assured.

There are so many different ways of achieving the desired fullness in the skirt that one can follow any fancy provided only that sufficient material be employed.

The tailored model at the left is one of the few models that have found their way from Paris within the last few days. Here the use of the godet, that triangular gore shape that the Parisian tailor so much advocates, is employed with conspicuous cleverness. At the first glance one sees that it affords an unusually adaptable model for the remodeling of one of the somewhat scanty cut tailor mades characteristic of the last season. While the original is fashioned of one of the hand woven Chinese pongees and braided with a self-colored soutache, the present penchant for combining two or more materials will find excellent expression after this mode. Where the costume is of cloth or serge or any of the plain surfaced woolen weaves the V shaped godets can be inserted in silk or satin to match in tone. A backing of crinoline or a lining of percaline would be recommended where taffetas or satin is used, so that the new material shall have at least as much weight and body as the woolen part of the gown.

A smart effect could be gained by using a striped material, having the stripe run horizontally, for the godets, or a plain material used in a striped costume.

Now, as for the actual crinoline itself—the kind our grandmothers knew—several models have already appeared with this adjunct. They have been looked at, talked about, and that is about all. None of the fashionables on either side of the water has evinced the slightest desire to be the one to lead the revival. Several of the French houses, followed by a few of the leading New York dressmakers, have launched modified models, these usually having a fine, flexible featherbone run somewhere in the drop or underskirt; sometimes one row, occasionally two, but so far no more.

Dressmakers may advocate the crinoline, for novelty is the life of fashion, and fashion changes are the life of the dressmaker's business. But I question seriously whether the American woman will adopt a style that has so much to condemn and so little to commend it.

But while the question is being argued pro and con, for and against the actual crinoline, we must confess that the so-called crinoline modes are assuredly picturesque. Both she of extravagant wardrobe and she who must carefully consider economies will find that the new full skirts are to be desired. They are just as modish fashioned in straight, plain lines, adorned with a few tucks or frills or flounces (these last must be carefully handled), with vandyked frillings, or almost any conceit that one may choose for decoration.

In availing one's self of these old time fashions it were well to bear in mind one important point, and that is sleeves.

There is nothing that so definitely dates a gown as the sleeve, its size, its style, its character, and the way it is set in. The long, sloping shoulder is already declared passé, the natural shoulder line having completely supplanted it. Semi-occasionally one sees the drop shoulder, with the sleeve put in anywhere between the elbow and just below the shoulder joint. But this is so evidently a holdover from former styles that in the ordering of a new gown it is an item to be well avoided. No reason in getting a new gown why you should not avail yourself of the latest hints and ideas that present themselves, so why spoil a new design with an old fashioned sleeve effect?

The tailor made costume also presents the deep, rounded arm's-eye, with a sleeve that offers several suggestions to those who are keen to note the novelties. The cleverly arranged flare at the wrist, the lack of fullness at the top, and the general appearance of room and airiness make it especially adaptable for summer time use.

To be well informed, to know how to live economically and well, to dress according to the dictates of fashion, to be entertained--these are worthy ambitions which may be realized by a thorough reading of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, the world's biggest and best magazine-newspaper.

If you haven't time to read THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE thoroughly today, save its many sections for leisurely reading throughout the week.

Mouth Hygiene a Beauty Precept says Antoinette Donnelly

In the carrying out of her work Miss Donnelly will be in consultation with Dr. W. A. Evans, former health commissioner of Chicago. All matters relating to personal hygiene and physical culture will have his advice. The formulas and recipes will be submitted to him. He will not allow anything harmful or any habit forming drug to enter into them. If you have any problem of beauty, personal hygiene, and physical culture upon which you wish advice and need help, write to Antoinette Donnelly, care of this paper. Inclose stamped envelope for personal reply.

[Copyright: 1915: By Antoinette Donnelly.]

SIMPLY brushing your teeth will not keep your mouth hygienic, because the use of mouth washes and powders is confined more or less to a portion of the surface of the teeth. Of course, your teeth should be brushed thoroughly after each meal, and any particles of food that might lodge between the teeth should be removed by the use of dental floss.

But the hygiene of the mouth means keeping the gums stimulated. It means chewing food properly. It means prevention of pyorrhea as far as possible. It means keeping your tongue free from tartar and bacteria. It means the use of fruit acids to stimulate the flow of saliva. It means going to a dentist twice a year at least to have tartar removed from the teeth and to keep cavities from growing in size. It means the use of a good mouth wash, and many other things.

In early life the jaws should be carefully examined by your dentist to see that the upper and lower teeth fit well together. When the upper and lower teeth don't fit together extra strain is placed upon certain teeth and the sockets are liable to injury and infection.

Your gums and teeth require exercise to keep them strong and healthy. Hasty swallowing of soft food and insufficient chewing are the cause of poor teeth and gums. Every day you should eat some hard, crusty, resistant food.

To keep the gums and the sockets of your teeth stimulated give them a vigorous brushing with a stiff brush. The bristles should be short and of different lengths, so that the innermost crevices of the teeth may be reached. If your gums are sensitive use just a moderately stiff brush until they can bear more vigorous treatment. Remember, this is the gums I am talking about, not the teeth. Brush with a rotary motion. In this way you stimulate the circulation and increase the resistance of the gums and remove from the teeth at the gum margins tartar accumulations while they are soft and easily removed by a stiff brush.

You can see the value of this when you realize that mouth washes and powders pass only over a portion of the surface of the teeth.

You should get your dentist's advice as to whether you should use an acid or alkaline mouth wash. Before teeth are badly damaged or eroded food acids are more cleansing than alkaline washes. These food acids are found in grape juice, orange juice, lemon juice, apples, and vinegar.

If you will eat an apple every evening before you go to bed, and follow with proper brushing, you will not only cleanse your teeth thoroughly, but you will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night, which is the time when most damage is done to teeth.

The best alkaline mouth wash there is is lime water—made from coarse, unslaked lime. Another good mouth wash is a weak solution of bicarbonate of soda and common salt (equal parts of each, a teaspoonful to the pint).

Pyrrhoea has become amost universally prevalent. While it is not always due to conscious neglect, still often it is due to neglect of mouth hygiene. A weak solution of fluid extract of ipecac, two drops in a half glass of water, used as a mouth wash before retiring, will act as a preventive, and perhaps as a cure, in the earliest stages of this trouble.

Few people realize the importance of keeping the tongue clean. Your tongue accumulates tartar and bacteria, especially near the root. Use tooth powder on your tongue and brush it as you would your teeth. Food acids are especially serviceable in cleansing the tongue. A weak solution of vinegar is good. When you brush your tongue seize it by the tip with your fingers enveloped in a clean towel and pull it well forward.

You would be surprised to know the number of diseases—including many so-called rheumatic affections and other obscure chronic diseases—that result from not keeping the mouth sanitary.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers.

MATILDA: Of course you want to be just as good looking at close range as you are three feet away and nothing will add so much to your appearance as a clear, firm complexion. It has its source in healthy habits, proper eating, deep breathing, a natural amount of sleep, and perfect cleanliness. Blackheads are merely pores which have become clogged with the day's deposit of dust. A hasty rub with a wash cloth or a dab with cold cream will have no effect whatever. Scrub your face thoroughly at night with hot, soapy water, using a camel's hair complexion brush, and when perfectly clean rinse your brush and then use it to rinse your face thoroughly. Then massage with a good cold cream or skin food.

BERTHA: The half closed condition of your eye may be caused by the muscles in the eyelid being weak. I suggest your consulting an eye specialist who will know just exactly what to tell you to do for it. A girl of your height and age should weigh about 119 pounds. You are about eleven pounds under weight, so I should start at once, if I were you, to build up my body. Eat fat producing foods such as butter, cream, bacon fat, cereals, and vegetables, and drink cocoa and chocolate. Sleep all you can and do not exercise unnecessarily. Get lots of fresh air and take a nap in the afternoon if it is at all possible to do so.

READER: For permanent relief nothing is as effective as the electric needle for the removal of superfluous hair and where the superfluous hair is on the face the electric needle is always recommended. No, you should not use a pin or needle to remove the particles of food that lodge between the teeth. You are liable to scratch the enamel and cause decay. It is best to use dental floss for the purpose.

CAROLINE: The purest and best soap only should be used on the face. I should use the pure imported castile soap if I were you. Scrub your face thoroughly with a complexion brush, using plenty of soap and warm water and dry thoroughly before using the skin food. Massage carefully for about fifteen minutes each night. I shall be glad to send you my formula for skin food and instructions for facial massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

JENNIE: I am afraid you will have to give up all those "adorable" bonbons if you want to have a peach and cream complexion, Jennie. No amount of tonic will overocme such a condition. You must first be careful of your diet. Do not eat rich and spicy foods. Be out in the air all you can. Walk at least three miles a day. Drink plenty of water between meals and guard against constipation. There is no better medicine for purifying the blood than fresh air and sunshine.

ALICE: The little red pimples which have formed under the skin on your nose are one of the varieties of skin disease. I suggest your consulting a skin specialist. Apply cold cream before putting the powder on your face. A good grade of rice powder is best. "Pink eye" is catarrh of the eye due to a microbe. You must be careful in using towels, so that it will not be conveyed to others. It would be best to seek medical attention.

ROSE: A good exercise for removing double chin is to stand erect and twist the head first to one side, then to the other, stretching in each direction just as far as possible. Then drop the chin slowly on the collarbone. Follow this with a quick movement that is not a jerk. This brings all the muscles into play. Repeat ten times night and morning, gradually increasing to fifty times. Do not tire the muscles too much at first. Also, massage the neck once daily. Move the thumbs with a rotary movement from the center of the chin to the ears. It requires untiring effort to reduce a double chin.

Coincidences I Have Known.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on "The Most Striking Coincidence of My Life." It may be sad or funny, but it must be real. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Coincidence Editor, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

She Repeated Incident.

About eight years ago my little brother, while walking backward, fell in a tub of water and had a narrow escape from drowning. About an hour later I was relating the incident to one of my friends at the same time walking backward as my brother did. I was not aware that another tub was in my path, and just as I was saying, "And in the tub he went," I fell in and got a good ducking.

The Saw Came Back.

A coincidence that proves that this world is not so large after all, happened in Danville, Ill., a year ago. In 1905 I was working on a building in Pretoria, S. A.

One day the foreman, Jack Rilt, missed a saw that he prized very much. Nine years later on a building in Danville I was working on a porch. Another carpenter was sent to help me. During the day his saw fell down. I was about to hand it to him, when I saw "Jack Rilt" stamped on the handle.

"Sacka bona Jack," I exclaimed to the saw, loud enough for the present owner to hear.

The man looked at me in great surprise. When I told him the original owner valued that saw very much and was anxious to find it, he protested the foreman gave it to him.

Met Childhood Playmate.

I was born just before the civil war broke out, in the little town of Waverly in southern Illinois. With the war came refugees from the south. Among them was a family I will call Partridge, in which there was a daughter, Rose, about my own age, with whom I occasionally played.

These are all childhood memories, for our family left Waverly before the close of the war and before I was 5 years old. I have never been back there since.

Nearly thirty years later I made a pedestrian trip through the south. One day as I was walking along a not much frequented road in an extremely rural region in southern Tennessee I was overtaken by a man on horseback, who at once slackened his speed to mine, accosted me pleasantly, and in accordance with the universal custom of these regions began a most minute inquiry into my personal and family history. When he found that I was from Illinois he asked me if I knew a town called Waverly. I replied that I was born there.

"Did you ever hear of a family named Partridge?" he asked with a considerable degree of interest.

"As a child I knew a little girl named Rose Partridge," I answered.

"Well, if you'll come into this house with me"—we had by this time come to a farmhouse near the road—"you can meet her again; she is my wife."

Accepting his invitation, I turned into the house with him and met the Rose Partridge of my early childhood.

How I Keep My Hair.

How do you keep your hair from falling out? By brushing, clipping, and singeing? How often do you do this? Do you clip and singe your hair within a certain phase of the moon? What shampoo and hair tonic (other than proprietary articles) have you found best? Do you massage your scalp and how? Do you know a way to wave your hair without the use of curling irons? Have you found something to make your eyebrows and eyelashes grow? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Have Helped My Hair." Address Antoinette Donnelly, care "The Tribune," Chicago.

Kept Busy This Spring.

I take advantage of the rain to wash my hair. Whenever there is a brisk shower I soak my scalp thoroughly with melted castile and then, holding my head out of the window, I rub and rinse well. I have been doing this since I was a child and my hair is wonderfully preserved.

K. G. R.

An Egg Shampoo.

I have found that the following method is an admirable one for keeping the hair clean, bright, and healthy:

Use no soap. Take two eggs and beat them to a froth. Apply as you would a liquid soap and rub in well. Use the whole quantity and be sure to rub in the scalp well. Of course, the hair must be thoroughly wet before applying the eggs and the most important feature is to rinse thoroughly. Be sure no egg remains on the hair, as this causes stickiness.

This removes dandruff in most cases and creates a healthy growth of luxurious hair. It does not remove all the natural oils as does soap. Warm water is the best. Good for hair that is too oily and hair that is not oily enough. It puts the hair in its natural condition.

This method has been handed down for about seventy-five years from my mother's folks.

Bacon and Salt.

Upon my recovery from scarlet fever two years ago my hair came out in handfuls until I was almost bald and I tried the following remedy which a farmer's wife was kind enough to give me: Melt a small slice of bacon and add enough salt to make a paste. Rub this on the scalp and allow it to remain on over night. Do not rub soap on the hair, but make a thick lather and then wash your hair in the soapsuds. I found tar soap to be the most beneficial. I also massaged my scalp every night with my fingertips with a rotary movement. I continued this bacon and salt remedy, with the shampoo following, every week for three months and I was amply rewarded with a luxuriant growth of hair.

My "Puppy" Love Affair.

Of course you loved violently, passionately, and intensely, and perhaps secretly, at 16. When you met that puppy love ideal years later did you have to smile at the idea of his or her ever having inspired blissful and roseate dreams in your romantic young head? How did he or she turn out? Tell us about the evolution of that first absorbing love if it turned out funny. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune." "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published.

Wonders How He Did It.

My first love affair was when I was 16. Every night I would go to an open air moving picture show, which was near the place I lived at the time. My one dream of happiness would be, instead of watching the show, to sit and gaze rapturously at the piano player. I see him now and then and wonder how under the sun he could ever have fascinated me as he once did.

Mule Shatters Love Dream.

At 16 I fell violently in love with a tall, dark, handsome boy of 25—so violently, in fact, that I could neither eat nor sleep, and in school I despised my books because they interfered with my day dreams.

One day a circus came to our town and my beloved asked me to go. I dressed in my best and the band seemed to make my heart pound harder than ever with sentimental love for the big, handsome chap at my side. All went well until a clown announced that anybody that could ride the mule he was exhibiting would receive $10.

My beau's face seemed to beam with eagerness and to my humiliation he climbed down the seats, walked boldly into the ring, and attempted to ride the mule. Of course he was thrown off every time he mounted the creature's back, and the crowd cheered and clapped.

As for me, my dream of love was gone. My face burned to see my ideal in such a ridiculous performance, and I stole out of the tent like a whipped dog, every hope on earth buried.

I am now a forlorn old maid, while my lost ideal is married, with a beautiful wife and everything heart could desire—wealth, social position, and the respect of everybody.

Dad Didn't Like Clair.

When I was 16 Clair was 17. He was always wishing for steady employment, though now I know he was not in earnest. He frequently walked to and from school with me and called nearly every evening. My folks resented this, but he declared to me that he couldn't stay away longer. I gloried in such fidelity.

All went smoothly enough until one fatal evening I went with him to the depot to meet his sister. Her train was late. It was after 10 and was raining hard as we walked toward home under one umbrella. Suddenly we came face to face with a man. Clair, with my umbrella, was dashing under an electric light a block away before I recognized his pursuer as my father. I waited alone in the rain until dad came and took me home under his umbrella.

Dad never spoke of the incident and Clair never came back or returned my umbrella. When I meet him now I can hardly realize that I ever counted him as a friend even. He still does odd jobs occasionally while I am a dignified school teacher

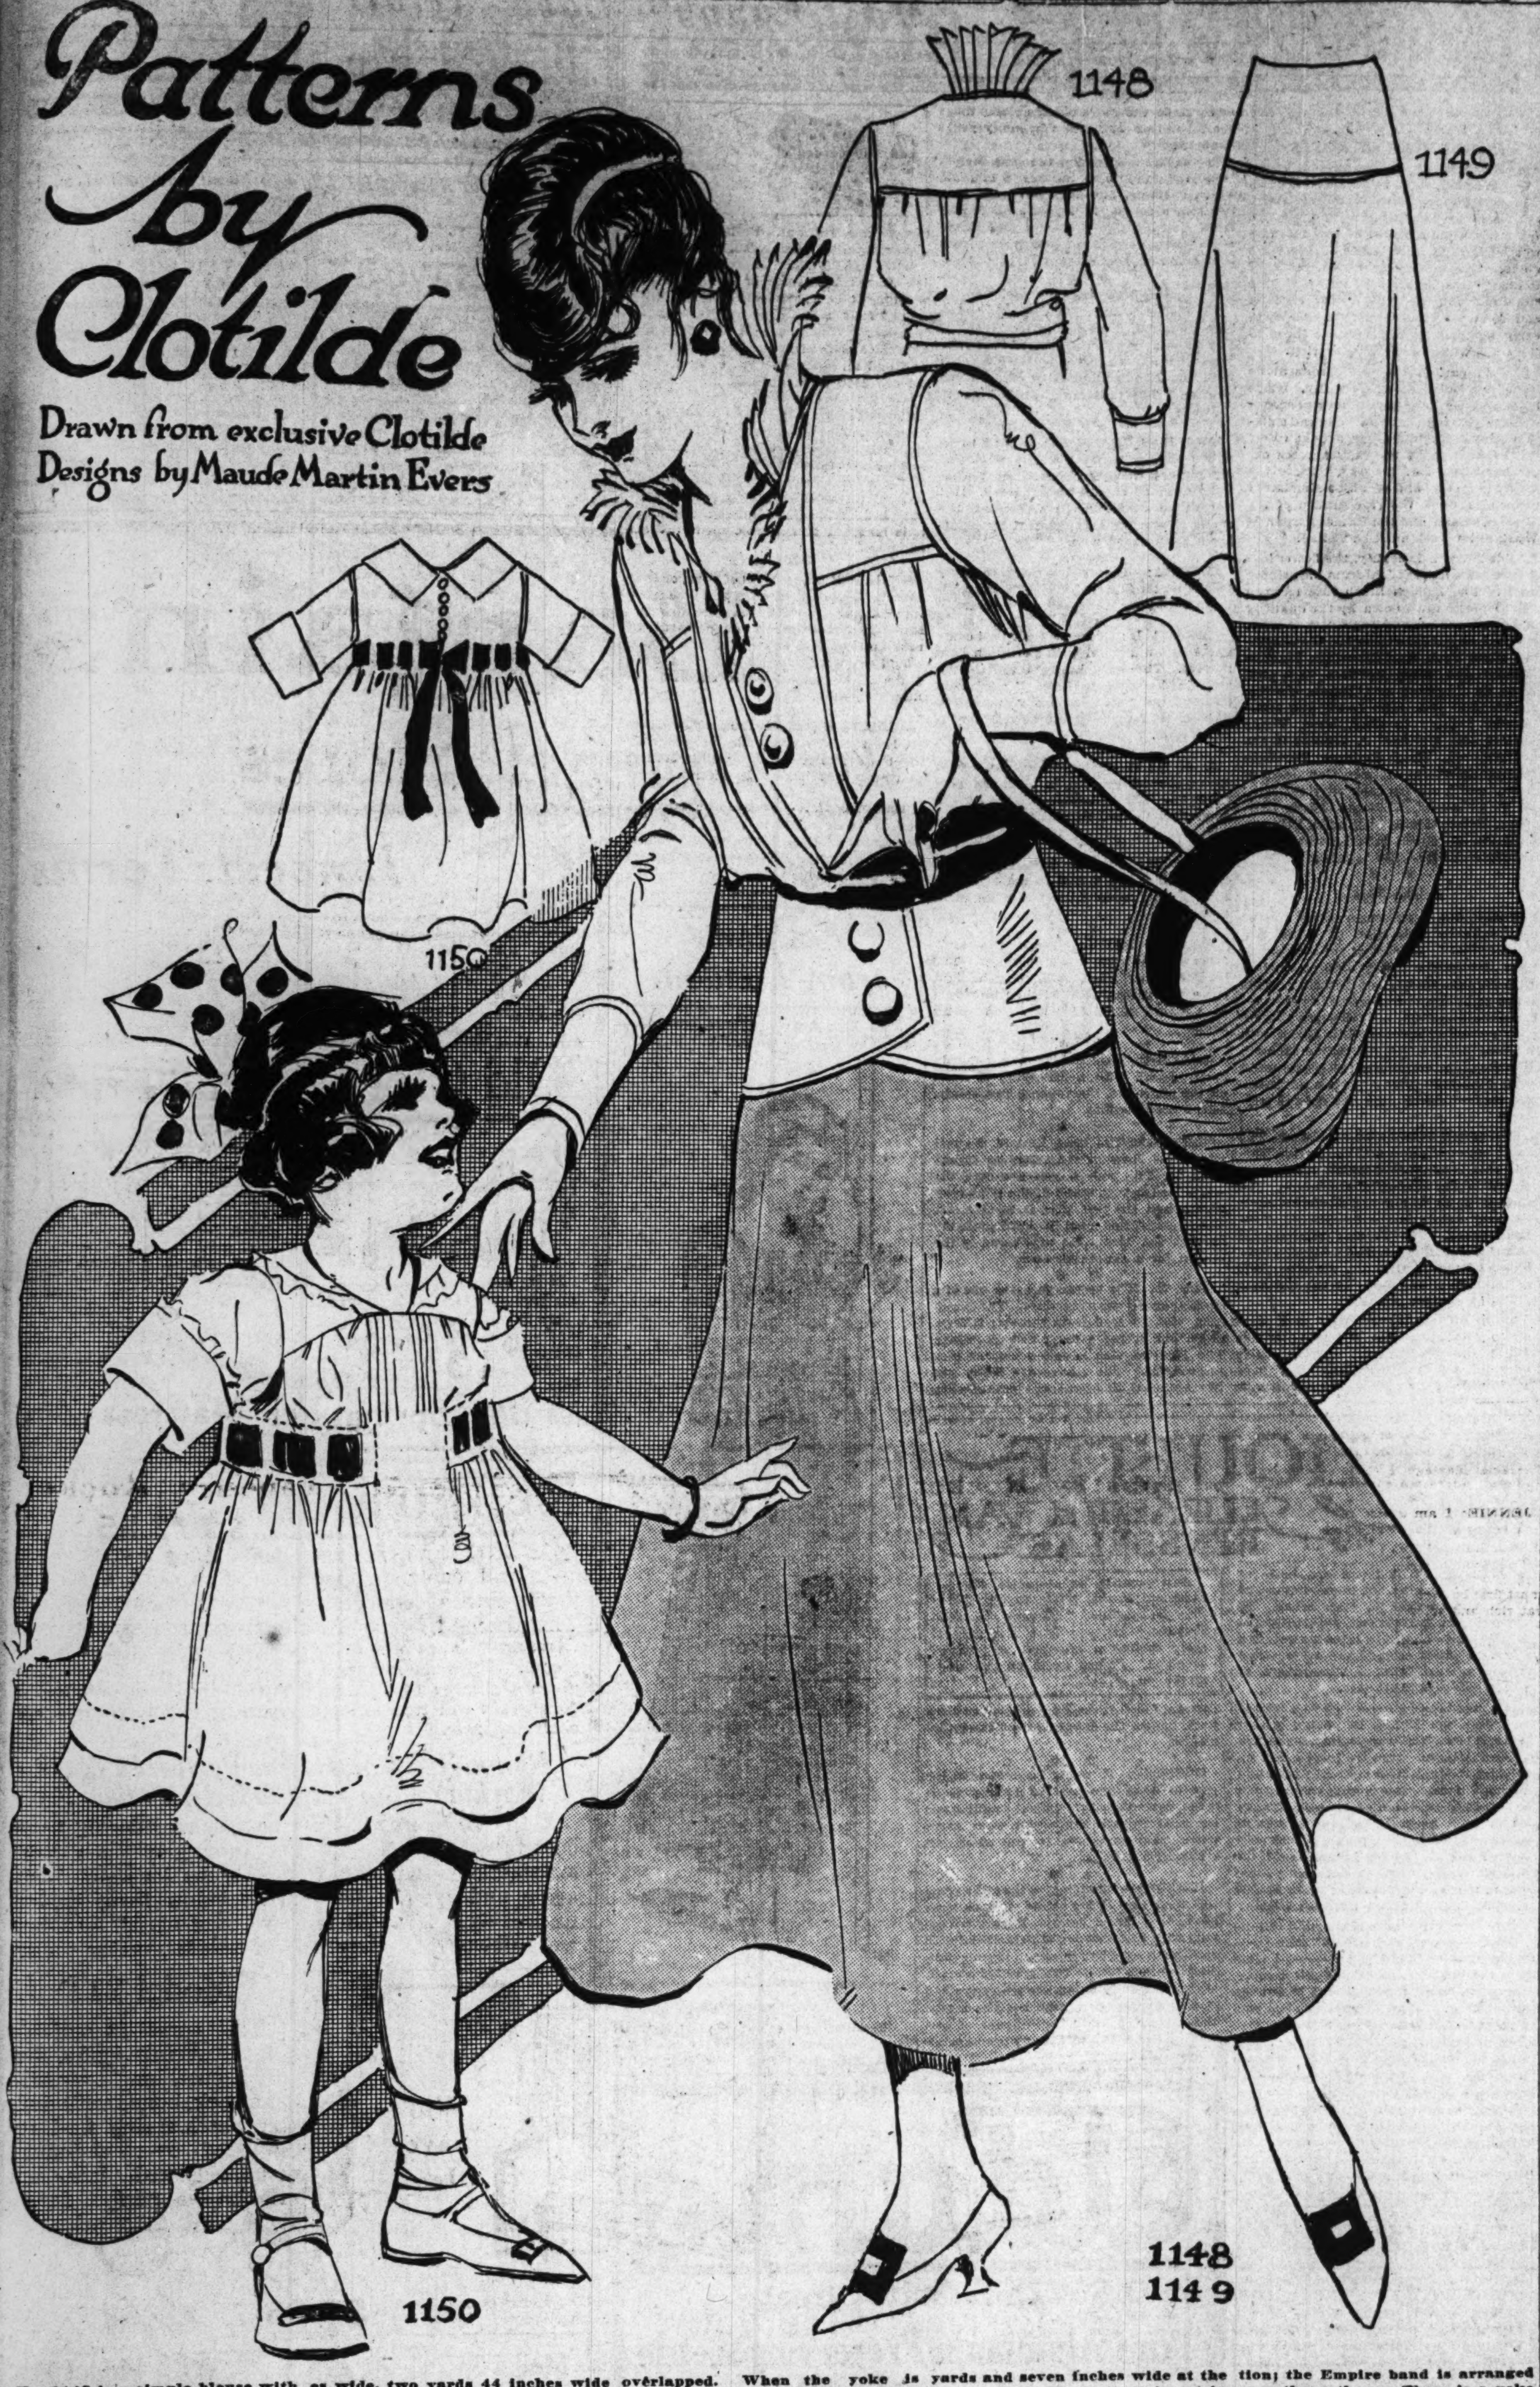
Patterns by Clotilde

Drawn from exclusive Clotilde Designs by Maude Martin Evers



No. 1148 is a simple blouse with plain yoke and full lower portions; the vest is joined to the front edges. The sleeves may be made either in full or in three-quarter length. The frill is included in the pattern. For the medium size there will be needed two and a quarter yards of material 36 inches wide, two yards 44 inches wide for the blouse, one-fourth yard 36 inches wide for the frill. The pattern is cut in sizes from 34 to 42 inch bust measure.

No. 1149 is a three piece skirt that can be made either with or without the yoke. The front edges are finished with hems and are overlapped. When the yoke is used it is arranged over the skirt, but the front edges are free that the yoke may be lapped and closed separately. The finish is made at the raised waist line. For the medium size there will be needed five yards of material 27 inches wide, four and three-eighth yards 36 or 44 inches wide. The skirt is three yards and seven inches wide at the lower edge. The pattern is cut in sizes from 24 to 32 inch waist measure.

No. 1150 is a dainty little frock that is adapted to a variety of materials. At the front the skirt and the body portion are cut in one, but at the back the skirt is separate and joined to the body portion; the Empire band is arranged over the gathers. There is a yoke at the front, but the backs are quite plain. The sleeves may be made either short or long. For the 4 year size there will be needed three yards of material 36 inches wide, two and one-half yards 44 inches wide. The pattern is cut in sizes for 2, 4, and 6 years.

TWO demands that every woman makes today where clothes are concerned, and those are that all her garments must be pretty and they must be practical. Practical, that is, for the uses for which they are designed, and pretty in cut, in line, and most especially in coloring.

For this is a season where color is supreme, and one must take careful cognizance of the relation of color to design. For example, a frock that will prove prettily simple made up in a rose pink, a Nattier blue, or some one of the sulphur tones, will fail entirely of its effect if developed in cinnamon, ete de negre, deep navy, or in black.

The clever designer keeps this point in view, and aims especially to invent styles that shall be applicable with equally good results to almost every shade on the current color card and to well nigh all the fashionable materials suitable to such uses. For the many outing occasions of the summer time—travel, camping, sports of every kind—the blouse and skirt, either separate or en suite, offer many attractions. Made after the dainty design illustrated, the strictly practical aspect assumes a touch of daintiness and trigness, while the indispensable touch of color contrast may be supplied in the belt.

the blouse; and with the present penchant for yokes and the yoke effects on both blouses and skirts, the matter of fit and adjustment is easily accomplished. In the simple little blouse (No. 1148) illustrated the severely plain appearance of a yoke waist is cleverly transformed by the V neck and the vest that closes in double breasted effect with two large buttons. One can adjust the shoulder line to suit the figure, the slender wearer being careful to avoid the drop effect of a too large size, while her plumper sister can stand the low placed armseye much better. The sleeve is fitted without any fullness at the top, one of the marks of the late summer modes.

The skirt (1149) repeats the yoke effect, if desired, topping a circular cut, and the two buttons that afford front fastening match those on the blouse. Made up in any of the new cotton gabardines, voiles, panamas, linens, or piques, any color will develop well in this design; while as for the recognized outing materials in light-weight woolens, such as Palm Beach cloth, drap d'ete, and such, this design will prove an admirable choice.

An altogether admirable simplicity characterizes the special designs invented for little girls nowadays. More and more is there displayed a preference for simplicity of daintiness; and where expense is no object the sheerest of materials are fashioned with just a few handrun tucks or a little fine hand embroidery for trimming effect. The work of the laundress, too, is kept well in view in the making of the small frocks; and garments that can be easily laundered and as quickly ironed are chosen by mothers who endeavor to make the summer household work as light as possible. So it is that the mass of lace ruffling and frilling, the flounces and general "frillinesses" that characterize the small girl's fashions are reserved for the party frocks; and the garments of everyday wear are selected with a view to a clever combination of daintiness and simplicity.

Short waisted empire effects—those of the first empire, be it understood—seem especially applicable to the small maiden, since they bring the desired plain and smooth fit over the shoulders, and the necessary fluffy fullness in the skirt. The top of the skirt is adjusted by means of groups of handrun pin tucks, the center front running up to the neck in semi-princess effect; and an embroidered beading, ribbon run, combines both belt and sash effects. A deep tuck above the hem affords provision for the lengthening of the frock, a matter that needs must be taken into consideration when planning garments for the fast growing

How to Order Your Clotilde Patterns.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Artistic and sensitive.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

PERSONS born this week are under the sign of Cancer (the crab). Domesticity is the chief trait of all people born under the sign of Cancer, so say astrologers.

If you were born on June 28 your nature is distinctly maternal. If you are married and your wife is of another sign you will have a stronger hold upon the affections of your children than she has. Whether man or woman, single or married, you are extremely fond of dress and finery. And your artistic ability shows itself in your excellent taste in dress and in your home arrangements. Again, this artistic temperament shows itself in your impracticability regarding financial matters. You can arrange flowers, place furniture, and twist a piece of old ribbon so that the last word in artistic decoration is accomplished. Poetry and love are your basic nature. This shows in everything you do.

If born on June 29 the good book Horoscopes doth say that you are an idealist. And you are extremely sensitive to disappointment in your ideals. You are sensitive to environment and feel keenly the mental and physical states of others. Material things do not trouble you deeply. You have a strong love nature and you expect love from others. You are apt to be misunderstood because the difference between "heart hunger" and wild desire is not always manifest to the average mind.

If you were born on June 30 the spiritual nature within you is strong, according to the signs. You love to rule and you are self-reliant. You are extravagant in your ideas and in the expenditures into which these ideas lead you are evidenced most strongly in your inability to be satisfied with a cheaper substitute of any sort. You are loving. You expect love and you usually get it.

If you were born on July 1 a strong will and a domineering tendency, coupled with a nature kind, loving, loyal, and true, belong to you, if there be anything in astrology. You are adaptable, independent, and reserved. You are a natural psychometrist. Your psychic powers and intuitions are unusually strong. You have a tendency to delve into occult matters. As far as worldly or practical things are concerned, they are the least of your worries. It is hard for you to lead a single life. Therefore, you should marry early.

The most notable feature of July 2 folk is a spirit of nonsticktoitiveness. They will go at a thing with vim and vigor, but on the slightest interference will desert it entirely for a new endeavor. Like the crab (the Cancer sign), once you are routed out of a hole you avoid it ever after.

If July 3 is your birthday you are addicted to silent spells. When you feel like talking you will talk. But no one can force your speech. Your sensibilities are fine and you possess an unusually keen perception. You have a strong appetite for knowledge and you are not easily discouraged in the attainment of it. You are fond of water travel. You have literary talent.

People born during the first three days of the week have a natural aptitude for the business of interior decorating, landscape architects, modistes and milliners, or any other form of decorative art. Those born during the latter part of the week make good physicians and nurses.

The most perfect mate for persons born during this time is supposed to be one born in Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22). Congenial mates may also be found in Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 21). The most unsympathetic sign with Cancer is Capricorn (Dec. 21 to Jan. 20). So if you believe in signs you would better be a bit chary of marrying a woman or man born during that time. However, it is well to bear in mind love overcomes every obstacle in case you have your heart set on a Capricorn man or maid.

Never Had Party.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a married woman 20 years old, and my hubby wants me to have a little party on my twenty-first birthday. Now, Miss Blake, I never went to a party and I don't know how to make it. What would I serve to eat at a birthday party, how shall I invite the girls to my party, and what games would you advise me to play? I am very sorry to bother you, but what are you going to do if you have no one to advise you? Will I have to set the table as soon as the guests come? Please write and let me know. MRS. W. S."

Write out invitations simply worded to the effect that you are going to have a little birthday party and would be much pleased if Miss or Mr. Blank would come and help you celebrate. For the games and party menus I would suggest that you go to the public library and look in some of the leading woman's magazines where departments are conducted on entertainment. You will get many valuable suggestions for your party. I am sorry that I have not the space here to be more explicit. There are books on games, too, that you will find most helpful toward making your party a success. I hope you have a pleasant time at the party and I wish you many happy returns of the day.

Nobody Knows Her Name.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young man 20 years of age and almost daily I see a young lady who appeals to me very much and to whom I should very much like an introduction.

"I have asked my landlady about her, but she does not know her and as I am a total stranger in the city it seems as though there is no way of becoming acquainted with this girl.

"What would you advise me to do?

"E. G."

Don't you know any one in the neighborhood who might know the girl? Have you tried looking for her at church? If she lives near you she probably attends one of the churches in the neighborhood. I cannot think of any other way that you could meet her, for, of course, you couldn't speak to her without an introduction. I wish you the best of luck in getting acquainted.

Doesn't Care to Die Old Maid.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a 16 year old girl and in high school. There is a boy I admire very much. I know him only by name. I admire him because he isn't afraid of work and he doesn't smoke. I have found out that those kind of boys are rather rare.

"He is, I should say, about 17, dark and good looking. Why is it that my girl friends have boy friends and are not any better looking than I am, and still they do have them? If this boy likes me very much, is it his place to get an introduction or is it my place?

"I crave the company of the opposite sex, but I told my girl friends I would die an old maid. If you please, I don't believe I care to die that way now that I have found a 'hymn.' M. P.

"P. S.—If this letter is printed, won't you just sign the letter thus: M. P. Please don't let me be an old maid, and thank you. M. P."

There's no danger of your being an old maid, my child. You're going to have just as many boy friends as your chums have as soon as you are old enough. But you're too young now. If this particular boy wants to get acquainted with you he will ask some one to introduce him to you. He probably realizes that you are too young to be accepting the attentions of young men now. Don't worry about not being attractive.

Supply Is Exhausted.

"Dear Miss Blake: I should be so grateful for a copy of 'The Love Letter of a Soul' if you have any. I am asking for an old gentleman here. The copy which was in a few Sundays ago I have accidentally mislaid or destroyed.

"M. A. F."

I am sorry, but the demand for the issue of THE TRIBUNE containing the "Love Letter of a Soul" was so heavy that the reserve supply has been entirely exhausted, so that it is impossible to send you a copy.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—a romance in the life of a relative, acquaintance, or perhaps in your own life? If there has come within your experience of life a love story about which you've said, "That's stranger or more romantic than any story I have read," write it out and send it in at once. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every real love story published. You need not mention names, and your name will be withheld if you wish. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Her Dream Came True.

AS a child I had dreamed of blue eyes, the large, tender kind. They haunted me continuously. First I was fearful, then gradually I learned to love them and told them all my childish troubles. I talked to the eyes for hours at a time. My mother often chided me for having such foolish notions.

As I grew older the attraction grew stronger and every night I repeated after my prayers:

"O eyes of you, so true and blue,
Look for the eyes that are looking for you."

I cared nothing for my many admirers and at school I was called the frozen lily.

My mother, a young widow, anxious to get me off her hands, was quite disgusted at my lack of interest, and often asked what I could be thinking of to let so many chances of a good home pass by. I hardly knew myself, but always the eyes would come between.

In Johnstown, Pa., at the time of the last flood our home was in danger and mother and I, with many others, were taken to a place of supposed safety, but suddenly, without a moment's warning, the bank gave way and we were thrown into the water. I seemed to go down for miles, and then shot up and out of the water.

Opening my eyes, I found myself looking straight into the eyes I had been looking for all my life. We recognized each other at once and instinctively we clasped each other and sank down, down, down, I cared not where. I had found heaven.

We were rescued, as was my mother, who told me it took the strength of two men to release our hold.

Later I insisted upon seeing him. Greatly to my mother's disgust, I could not rest until I did. He had been hurt, his face was bandaged and he had on a plaster jacket. When I did see him, upon being taken to his cot, looking so white but O so happy, he said, as simply as though we had been lovers for years, "Where have you been so long? Didn't you know I was waiting for you? In fact, I cannot remember the time I was not looking for you." And I never thought of blushing or hiding my face, but only said, "Yes, dear, we found each other near death's door, but it was worth it, and now we have all life before us."

Well, we have been living in a town in Michigan for years. We have three children, and now those beautiful eyes have lost their light, due to an explosion, but he says I am his eyes and through me he sees all that is beautiful and good. He is still my lover, as I am still his soul mate. E. L. B.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

Did you ever know a woman who proposed? "The Sunday Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your name will not be published. Address, Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

A Little Gilr Helps.

One day my little niece and I were going into town on the train, when a Mr. Hall, a young man who had been attentive to me for some time, joined us. At the next stop a bridal couple got on with their enthusiastic friends. This interested my niece very much, and after a thoughtful moment she looked at me and said, "Aunt Eleanor, are you going to marry Mr. Hall?" "Tell her yes, Eleanor," he whispered—and I did, and we did, and we are yet. L. H.

Just a Slip.

The sidewalk was slippery. I asked a young woman to go out with me. On our way to the car she slipped. She looked at me, angered, and said: "Why didn't you support me?" I retorted, "I've never had the chance, but you name the day when I can assume the duty and I will be delighted." In three weeks we were made one. Did she propose? J. K.

With a Glad Smile.

If women don't propose, who does? This man didn't seem to even get a chance to refuse. A young couple were eating chicken in a restaurant.

"You see," he explained, as he showed her the wishbone, "you take hold here. Then we must both make a wish and pull, and when it breaks the one who has the bigger part of it will have his or her wish granted."

"But I don't know what to wish for," she protested.

"O, you can surely think of something," he said.

"No, I can't. I can't think of anything I want very much."

"Well, I'll wish for you," he explained.

"Well, then it's foolish to waste time with the old wishbone," she interrupted with a glad smile; "you can have me." E. L.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR REMOVERS ARE DANGEROUS

Don't use poisonous so-called superfluous hair removers.

You may escape permanent injury if you use so-called hair removers, but you cannot escape an increased growth because after each removal the hair is bound to grow out more bristly and in time it will become so coarse that nothing will remove it but a razor.

The only safe way to remove hair is to devitalize it. It is useless to use pastes or rub-on preparations because they only remove hair from the surface of the skin. DeMiracle, the original liquid depilatory, devitalizes hair by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin.

Imitations of DeMiracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that DeMiracle alone contains which give it the power to rob hair of its vitality. Remember DeMiracle is the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails. Insist on the genuine DeMiracle and you will get the original liquid hair remover. Others are worthless imitations—refuse them.

DeMiracle is sold at all good stores, including the Public Drug Company and Buck & Rayner's five stores. The truth about the treatment of superfluous hair mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. B, Park Ave. & 129th St., New York.—Advertisement.

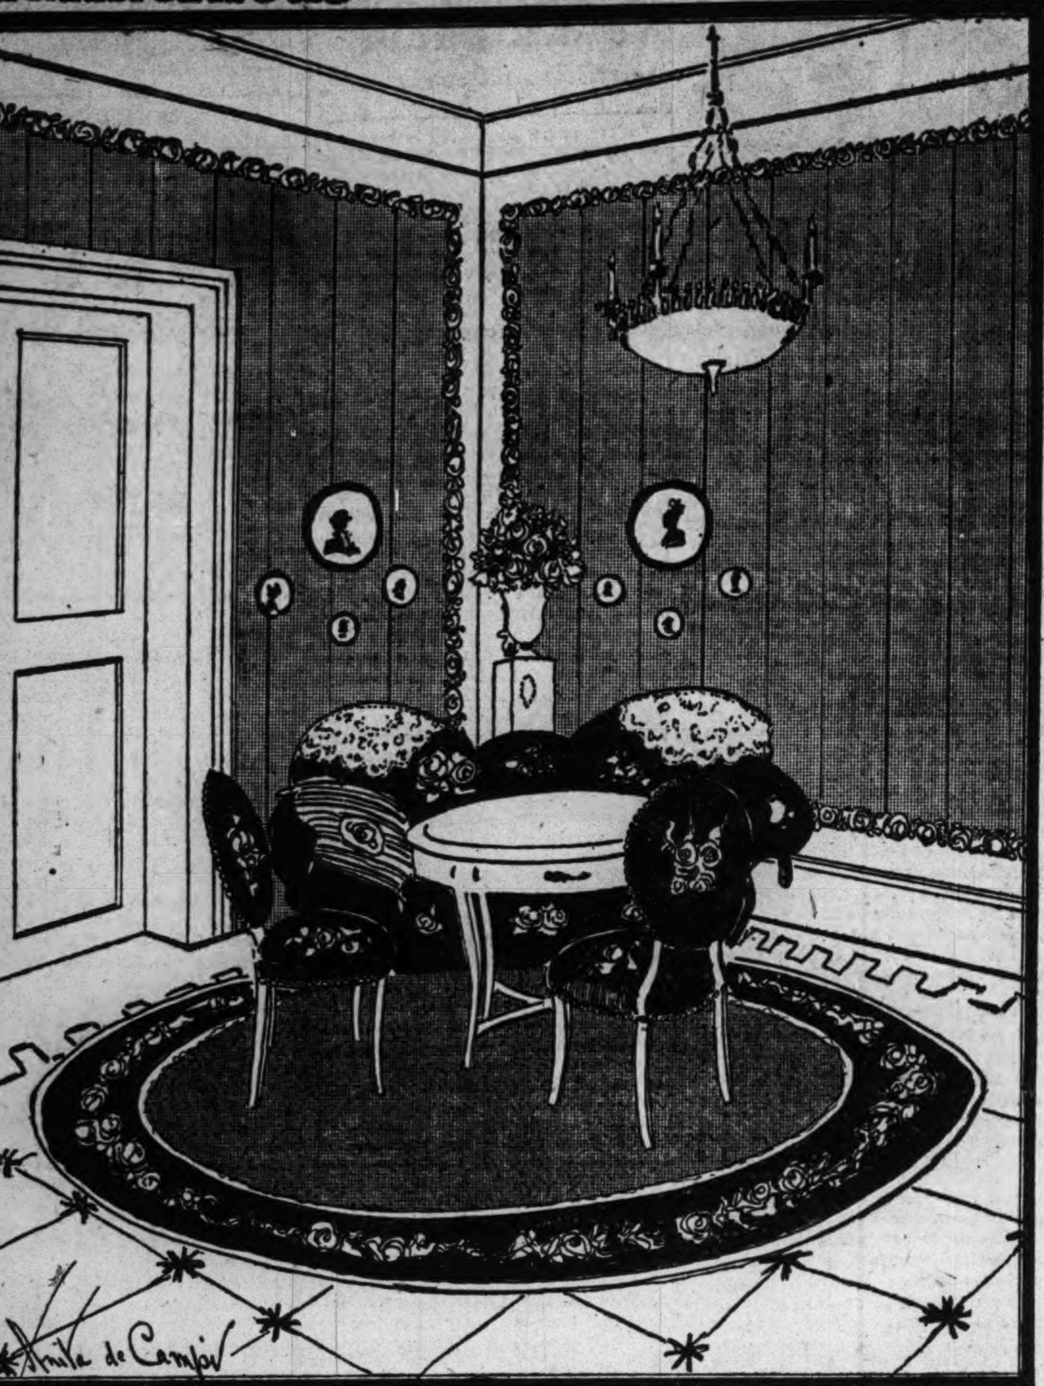
The Home Harmonious

A Bavarian Dining Room.

Anita de Campi



BLACK HORSE-HAIR, FIGURED WITH PURPLISH FLOWERS

SHOCKINGLY ugly are the descriptions of some of the new interior decorative schemes, and yet when you see them actually carried out they're not quite as bad as might have been expected. [Good beauty aids anyway—they "make the corners of the mouth go up."]

Imagination balks at conceiving anything artistic, for instance, in the following description of a room that was "executed" by an American artist who fortified himself for the deadly work by a sketching tour extending from southern Italy to the north of Holland. Here it is—the latest cry issued from the tender throat of a calliope:

The room in question is a Bavarian dining room. The ceiling and part of the side walls are red—that peculiarly light bright yellowish red commonly known as vermillion. Cut into this are large doors of green wood intricately carved and touched up with high light spots of yellow, and a tracery of red lines. One side wall is almost completely covered with purple and white tiles, and the same purple tiles form a frame, instead of a woodwork, around the windows.

The serving table, placed close to the windows so that its luster may not be diminished for lack of light, is a pronounced golf green, not nearly as dark as the grass green doors, and the large center table with double drop leaf ends is of glowing clear blue with polychrome ornaments. To all this is added some gay fabric covers for chairs and bench, printed in luminous tones of vivid red, yellow, purple, green, and blue—just to brighten up a little, I suppose.

Is it any wonder that amateur decorators are encouraged to try their hand at the decorative business? Few could aspire to do anything more grewsome than the above. Yet, the picture of the room described is beautiful. Note that the picture is a halftone, printed in sepia on a cream ground.

Among other new schemes is one with a pronounced deep violet side wall, with white ceiling and white woodwork. The whole thing is accented with green. The purple wall paper has narrow strips of green worked into it, and each wall space has a frame-like effect made of a rather wide band of green leaves with a few flat pink flowers twined among them.

The room, which is a sitting room, has a desk in it of birch, ornamented with little edgings of black. Above the desk is a picture of a vase full of flowers, on a black ground, framed in greenish gold, and hung by green silk cords and tassels, from two pegs that are driven into the wall [there is no picture moulding]. Before the desk is a wing chair upholstered in striped black and green linen, with a purplish looking apple on a twig blocked on it at intervals.

One corner of the room has quite a unique furnishing of its own. This is made up of a sofa, a table, two chairs, and a rug, all seeming to vie with one another in point of roundness. The seats of the chairs are round, the backs of the chairs are round, the double backs and arms of the sofa are round, the table is round and is placed directly in the center of the round rug. The sofa is backed up "catti-cornered" to the wall, and just above it at either side of the corner is a collection of family silhouettes in round black frames.

It has altogether a counterfeit air of quaintness that is not unamusing, like a modern girl in some sort of a period masquerade costume and who remains smartly up to date in spite of her clothes. The furniture is upholstered in black horsehair figured with purplish flowers. It is one of the latest upholstery fabrics. The rug has a purple center edged with a wide black border, on which are strings of multi-colored flowers. The spindle legs of the furniture and the table are birch, and a narrow framing of birch color is at the edge of the black border encircling the rug.

A mixture of needle work and paint is a decorative medium that finds favor among the maddest freaks of the decorative artist. It offers unlimited possibilities for extravagance in subject design and startling effect that constitute the so greatly to be desired "originality" of the day.

The material on which the decorating is to be done is forced to play a part in the work. For instance, in an immense decorative piece of handwork representing Cleopatra, the heavy Nile green satin on which it is done forms the watery background. Cleopatra, in the center in sumptuous robes and extraordinary feathered headgear, carries a lotus flower in her hand. From somewhere springs a cactus plant, with a monkey on it holding a scarlet apple. At either side of the reclining queen is a vivid black and green cobra, joyfully licking its fangs. One brown slave wriggles a tambourine, and one more decoratively black, seated near by, beats a round tomtom around which his legs and feet cling in a melancholy coil. His bloomers are blue, his turban is emerald green, and his beard is pale purple, matching in tone a drapery piece that winds itself about his middle parts. Back of him, just below the monkey on the cactus, is a long black strip zig-zagged with red. On one great big leaf, painted red, embroidered with pointed blue veins and bordered with yellow, is what looks like a purple kingfisher with its head coquettishly turned to show its open beaked profile.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

More of that? Well, in a dining room where the woodwork is white and where there is a triple window, the space at either side of the window is covered with a panel of mustard colored rajah silk, ornamented with a design comprising a parrot, a horn of plenty sprouting a crown, and a butterfly. In one case the parrot has a cerise head, a yellow and white body, and a red tip across its long tail. In the other the parrot's head is green, body white and red, and tail tip green. The birds measure from tip to tail at least six feet.

Part of the embroidery is done by laying in spots of bright colored satin, and working heavy silk and worsted threads on and around them. The ranker the choice of color, the greater the eclat. Cerise and tomato color are fine, bilious yellow green and orange color, etc. The rule is to be as clashing as possible.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. E. W. T.: The compliments of yourself and your friends in regard to this department are accepted with much pleasure. If you use buff in your hall, instead of clear yellow, it will not "scream" at the pink in the bedroom opening into it. Use oyster green paper in the double living room. If your side walls are plain, figured curtains are good; and vice versa. It is best to make the lamp shade of thin silk. Chintz curtains showing flat foliage and flowers in green, carmine, and plum color, and lined with buff silk, would be nice. Curtains casement length, that is, to the sill only, have been and are the fashion, but the prediction is for full length ones.

K. J. H.: Have the lower part of your dining room a Pompeian red, with the upper part cream, slightly tinged with pink, and border it with a Greek key border. This will make a striking contrast and a decided change from what you now have. If possible, do away with the plate rail.

MRS. F. B. M.: Use putty colored walls in your living room, with your mahogany furniture upholstered in green silk velvet. Carry the same color through into the dining room with black woodwork, but enliven it by using strips of Japanese paper, printed in bright colors on a black ground, in the narrow spaces which you have indicated between your three windows in the curve on the south side. Why not reserve the velour portières until fall?

MRS. A. D. W.: It is unusual to hear of an apartment lighted by skylights instead of windows. No, I should not use brown for the side walls. Keep to silvery grays instead. These will be cool looking when the sun is high and full of pale, mysterious shadows by the light of the moon. Choose Japanese grass cloth throughout. There is an inexpensive Japanese linen on the market that would do for your curtains. It comes in deep night sky blue, flecked with white foliage. Use light colored furniture, preferably ash. It would be interesting to make a moon parlor, instead of a sun parlor, of one of your rooms.

MRS. J. F. L.: No, of course you do not want to discard your practically new net curtains because they are eight inches too short for the windows in your new apartment. Let the shortage be at the top, and us a valance of drapery material to cover it.

Tactless Remark I Never Forgot.

After the Fox Trot.

A girl friend was dancing with a perfectly "impossible" dancer. After several useless flounderings she remarked she was too tired to dance longer. At the following intermission her brother came up to them and asked quite innocently,

"Did Mary dance you as recklessly as usual? She'd simply waltz the feet off of any fellow, unless he's an awkward 'impossible.' Then she simply says she's tired, and quits." E. K.

Not Bad Enough for That.

Just as I was preparing to leave, after having made a late afternoon call on a lady, rain began to fall.

My hostess said, "It's beginning to rain; you had better stay for dinner."

I replied, "O, thanks very much, but it's not bad enough for that."

And I never knew just how that sounded until I had gotten to the street.

MRS. A. K. G.

What was the most tactless remark you never forgot? Maybe you made it yourself. Maybe you heard somebody else make it. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper only, make your anecdote short, and address it to the Tactless Remarks Editor, "The Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts will be returned.

The Retort Tactless.

"I made a tactless remark last week when a friend called up to invite my husband and I to a "500 party" and added: "If you haven't any one to leave the baby with, bring him along. We'll do our best to entertain him," I answered glibly. "Well, maybe we will. He never needs much entertaining." K.

Hubby Horned In.

A friend of mine sent me a pretty piece of burnt wood made by her. A few days later she called, and I, pointing to the present, said: "I'm mighty proud of it." My husband, thinking I had bought it, said: "I've my opinion of any one spending money for such trash."

The GARDENER AT WORK

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

IN THE TIME OF ROSES.

THE fame of the rose gardens of the Wooded island in Jackson park has spread far and wide. Specialists on rose growing point to the Wooded island as a model of the varieties worth planting in the Lake Michigan regions. The delicately tinted roses of Pennsylvania and Maryland pine for mountain soil and the milder climate, and if one would have roses to be a joy in early summer he must choose those to stand the winter and the late spring.

Lincoln park has a rose garden at its south end looking its best today. Humboldt and Garfield parks have gorgeous displays proving that cold rains and a discouraging spring did not injure the roses. In the west parks the raguss roses are the handsomest of the city, but for the hybrid perpetual and ever blooming hardy roses this week the rose garden of the Wooded island and the formal garden at Washington park must be visited.

Aside from their beauty, the flower lover can learn a great deal from the printed labels. The Maiden Blush rose trees in all the parks are known by the quantity of flowers and buds of fragrant rose color. In the rose gardens there are the charming white Frau Karl Druschki, Blanche Moreau, and Mabel Morrison, dark pink Anne de Diesbach and Magna Charta; bright pink Mrs. John Laing and Mme. Gabriel Luizet; carmine, Mme. Victor Verdier and Marshall P. Wilder; in the brilliant red, Ulrich Brunner, Baroness Rothschild, Fisher Holmes, Gen. Jacqueminot, and lovely in their way the Mrs. R. G. Crawford, Hermosa, Marie Baumann, Prince Camille de Rohan, Princess Adelaide, and Gloire de Margottin. These are the roses for Chicago gardens.

In the Parks.

Washington park conservatory has an extraordinary exhibition of cleroden-extraordinary exhibition of clerodenphea hysophylla, torenia Fournierii, Justitia carnea, spirea, and begonias. This is the most important display of the handsome clerodendron, a dark green climber with sprays of creamy white bloom with inner petals of crimson, ever shown here. Having right conditions the Washington park gardeners have a number of blooming plants trained over fan shaped trellices.

The potted hydrangeas are superb. The great white blossoms, tinted purple, violet, rose, and pearly white, seem to be placed in the shadow of a rainbow. The Cuphea is an uncommon flowering myrtle, very dainty in the foreground of the hydrangeas. The Torenia reminds one of an Alpine blue gentian, while the rosy bloom of the Justitia, the white feathers of the spirea, and coral of the begonias make an artistic picture.

South of the Washington park conservatories are the gigantic Maiden Blush rose trees. All week with the wealth of mock oranges (syringas) they have perfumed the air. Moisture and sunshine have made the mock orange bloom more beautiful this June than in many years gone by.

In the formal garden the rose season is at its glory with thousands of pink, white, carmine, and dark red buds and full blown roses. It is just a short way from Cottage Grove avenue and Fifty-sixth street, convenient to travelers from the north and west sides.

Answers to Queries.

AT HALF WAY: The monardo or bee balm is a rich flower in midsummer. If you have a large plantation of it in your yard let it alone and you will be delighted with the handsome display of dark red flowers. The humming birds like to visit it.

MRS. HASELTINE: It is hard to repair a shaggy border. Get to work and dig out the dying sections. The pheasant's eye pink cannot be surpassed. If it has failed something is wrong at the roots. Vary the arrangement by planting alyssum seed now.

AURORA: Plenty of room to grow means better flowers. Weed out the seedlings until your plants are a foot apart.

MRS. C. L.: Torenia Fournieri compacta is an annual with porcelain blue flowers. The half hardy torenia does well in hanging baskets. Thunbergia (Black Eyed Susan) makes a decorative basket. It may be white or yellow with black eyes.

J. A. B.: If cucumbers refuse to get along several seasons in your lot give them up. The soil must lack the correct properties to feed them. Try something else.

READER: Tobacco dust and nicotine preparations are useful to meet the rose bug. Every rose grower has the same troubles.

ROGERS PARK: Pinch the buds from your pansies and geraniums. The best tonic is "plant food," or you might try a tablespoonful of kitchen ammonia in a quart of water when you water them.

READER: Tausendschon is a hardy rose. Spray with a fine spray to wash off the plant lice. Use tobacco dust freely. Roses need feeding.

GLENCOE: Use lawn lime in the soil where the lilies of the valley ar struggling for life, unless you are sure the soil is healthy. A stand of the lilies may crowd, and the best plan is to thin out. The unusual hot spell in April probably hurried the bloom too much and is the reason for a short crop now.

* *

MRS. Z.: It is clever to make use of a small space by growing vines. The cinnamon vine is free from insects; foliage thick, shiny, and glossy; flowers, white. The Madeira vine is called the climbing mignonette. The leaves are fleshy and heart shaped, and pendent stems of white flowers are fragrant. Both of these are grown from tuberous roots, 5 cents each.

The Garden Editor will give expert advice on planning gardens, organizing garden clubs, and planting flowers, vegetables, or shrubs. Address The Garden Editor, "The Tribune."

MRS. HARMON: The calycanthus is the Carolina allspice or sweet scented shrub. It is a handsome brush with glossy foliage and does well in a shady location. The blossoms are fragrant chocolate colored flowers, inconspicuous, and bud all summer. The bruised flowers are used to scent linen.

CONGRESS PARK: The common tobacco plant has a luxuriant leaf and an inconspicuous flower. Given space it grows to be a decorative feature. The nicotina of the garden belongs to the tobacco family, but its habit of growth is more delicate and its flowers resemble the petunia. It is fragrant and is welcome in the late summer.

SUBURBS: The marvel of Peru, or four o'clock, is sturdy, cleanly, and free from insects. The dwarf marigold has the same good qualities. An entire border of rose and crimson flowered four o'clocks would be suitable for the beds close to the garage. Marigolds would do. Do not mix the plants.

READER—Potentilla fruticosa is a useful low shrub bearing yellow flowers during the summer. It does well in borders and its silky foliage is distinctive.

THEODORA N.—A mass of campanula and larkspur would look well against a background of Zea Japnica, the striped Japanese maize. Five cents' worth of seed will be enough.

ETIQUETTE by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

INTRODUCTION is an art, both for the one making the introduction and those presented to each other. To make an introduction gracefully and to receive it in the same manner is a proof of much social knowledge—either innate or acquired. Awkwardness on either side is unfortunate.

If a man is being presented to a woman and both are seated he should always rise and bow. The woman remains seated. If two women, who are seated, are introduced to each other they may both bow without rising. If a young woman, who is standing, is presented to an older woman or to a general group of women all seated those to whom she is thus presented may all remain seated. But if the woman thus presented is decidedly older than the seated women, the latter should rise when the introductions are made.

The simple formula of introduction as "Mrs. ——, may I present Miss —— or Mr. ——?" Or, "Mr. ——, I want you to know Mr. ——." Don't answer, "Pleased to meet you." Say "How do you do," or "I am so glad to meet you. I've heard of you from so and so."

Then begin a conversation about something of immediate interest. "Small talk," as it is called, is a great help at the beginning of an acquaintance. People who have not the gift are apt to present a stiff, unfriendly effect at a first meeting.

G. G.: The one who goes away makes the farewell call, or says good-by over the telephone, or sends what is called "the P. P. C. card." P. P. C. stands for the French phrase, "pour prendre conge"—"to take leave." In any of these three methods of farewell the one departing takes the first step. I am sorry that your inquiry came too late for me to answer it, as you asked, in last Sunday's TRIBUNE. Try to get any questions you may want answered in this department sent to me a week before the date you need the information.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

ELSIE G.: It would be advisable for you to have two sets of calling cards made, one with your name and address on the card and the other with your name under your mother's, to use when you make calls with her.

* *

JIM: If you want to give the girl a present send her either some flowers, or a book, or a box of candy. If your friendship with her is somewhat tinctured with sentiment send her flowers. If your companionship is intellectual give her a book. If you are jolly comrades who have had good times together send her the candy. But do not commit the blunder of presenting her with a gift of any permanence or intrinsic value.

Rengo Belt Corsets

THERE is an enormous demand for a corset that will control superfluous flesh and mold the figure into a comfortable and yet fashionable line. This demand brings to the front the Rengo Belt Corset, which has been made especially to meet these requirements. The manufacturers of the Rengo Belt Corset have given the large figure careful study, and have produced a corset that will transform the figure, giving it graceful and charming lines.

Rengo Belt Corsets Are Perfect in Their Workmanship and Perfect in Their Fit

In the years that we have been offering these corsets we have found that they give the utmost satisfaction—that the women come back for them again and again. We feature below three models in sizes from 20 to 36 that we offer at $2, although we believe that they are of much greater value.

Model 211

Model 215

A thoroughly practical and perfectly fitting corset that may be worn by the large class of average figures who appreciate style and comfort. It is very modestly priced at

Model 215

Model 213

For the figure requiring a low bust, long over hip and back; rubber inserts over abdomen add strength to the corset; made of good quality coutil, lace and ribbon trimmed—perfect fitting model that is very low priced at

Second Annual Silk Sale—Tomorrow

Just about a year ago we held our first Annual Silk Sale. Those who attended will remember it as one of the greatest silk events ever conducted. The crowd was beyond our expectation—almost beyond our control. The preparations that were made for that sale were inadequate, and as a result our stock was cleaned out at 1 P. M. on day of sale. A wonderful silk-selling record was established on that eventful day.

We are determined that this year's sale shall find us ready with a stock that will help establish a still greater record. We have made preparations of a still more extensive kind, buying on an even more gigantic scale. Tomorrow you will find counter after counter loaded with the richest, most desirable and most beautiful silks of the season. Many of the silks in this sale were priced by us up to $3 per yard.

We reserve the right to limit quantities. None sold to dealers.

This Is Unquestionably Our Most Sensational Sale of Silk Remnants

None sent on approval and no mail orders will be filled.

This is a sale of high class broad silks, each and every yard perfect and guaranteed to give satisfactory wear. Read every item, for these offers mean sensational savings to you if you intend to buy silks this year. Many are very choice lots from this season's best selling silks, in qualities that we have been selling regularly from $1 to $3 a yard. Second Floor.

The weaves are new, the colorings are stylish and the price simply beyond comparison when considering the qualities. Please note the width of these silks; also observe that all are in desirable lengths—2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 yards in each piece—and there are thousands of different pieces for every wanted and every imaginable purpose. Sweeping Reductions on Women's Suits

WOMEN who have postponed buying their summer suits will find their opportunity here, tomorrow. The reductions that we are making on these most desirable garments are radical—the values presented are extreme. And in every instance the styles are strictly up-to-date, the materials and colorings those favored by Fashion.

The arrival of summer makes an attractive suit no less a necessary portion of the properly gowned woman's wardrobe. For street wear, for travel, for all around service, the suit is unapproachable. When such smart suits can be had for such low prices, you cannot afford to be without one.

At 18.75—smart suits in navy taffeta, in short, fancy and semi-tailored models. Collar and vestee are of white faille silk. We illustrate one in a semi-tailored style, with belt, having tabs, finished with white buttons; skirt is circular, with side plaits; sizes for women & misses; special at 18.75

At 12.50—suits for women and misses, in poplins, gabardines, serges and shepherd checks; coats are flare peplum and plain tailored; skirts are circular and plaited; collar and cuffs are trimmed with faille and taffeta silk; colors are navy, black, green, sand and checks; special, 12.50

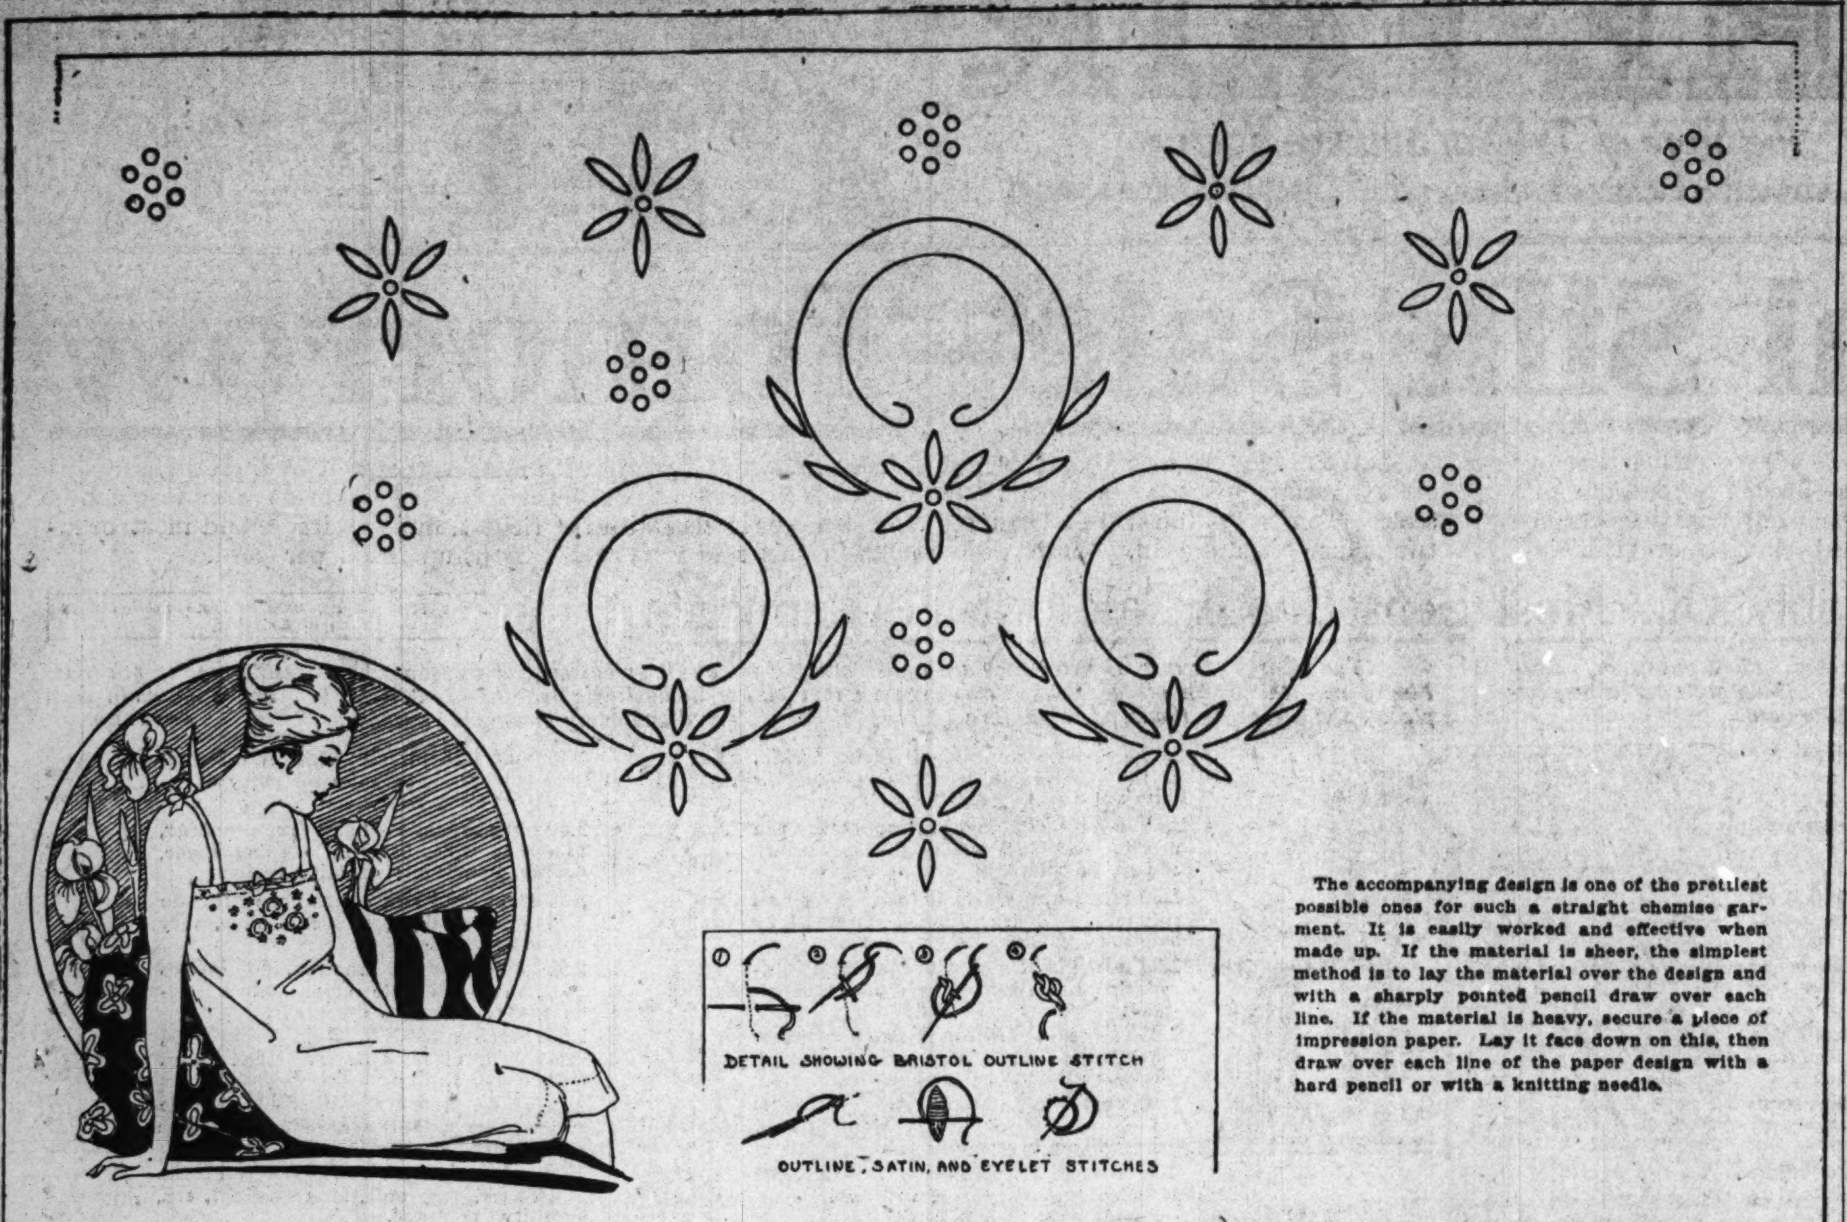
Embroidery Design for Straight Chemise with Shoulder Straps.



DETAIL SHOWING BRISTOL OUTLINE STITCH
OUTLINE, SATIN, AND EYELET STITCHES

The accompanying design is one of the prettiest possible ones for such a straight chemise garment. It is easily worked and effective when made up. If the material is sheer, the simplest method is to lay the material over the design and with a sharply pointed pencil draw over each line. If the material is heavy, secure a piece of impression paper. Lay it face down on this, then draw over each line of the paper design with a hard pencil or with a knitting needle.

The Tribune Cook Book

by Jane Eddington

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"KEEPING things" makes half the work of summer cooking. Heat is a more effective preservative than cold for a great number of these things. Sterilization makes food safer to eat than the best refrigeration, even could we get a home icebox which was an ideal refrigerator. After eighteen or at the most twenty-four hours the soups, sauces, meats, and stews of any sort are not perfectly safe foods if kept in a refrigerator, and they will keep this long outside if sterilized by heating up, and for a week if heated every day. Deterioration sets in a considerable time before it is apparent.

The handles on most iceboxes can be pushed down half an inch or more when the doors seem to be closed tight. It is a great economy to see that they are pressed down as far as they will go. Try it. There is never any need of soft butter when there is an ounce of ice in the box, or even after it is all melted, if this is attended to.

To lack of care of icebox and pantry are due practically all those little or big health upsets during the summer time from which so few people escape. The fewer cooked foods kept in the refrigerator the better, and nothing should be put in until thoroughly cold, and then it should be covered, but not too tight. Neither raw nor cooked food should be put into a tightly covered vessel unless the air in it is sterile, whether this is to be set in the icebox or kept outside. Never put meat away in paper, but on a covered dish, with or without the waterproof paper over it.

Nearly all of the vegetables, fruits, and berries will keep better if washed before they are put in the refrigerator and well spread out, although it is better not to wet cauliflower or cabbage. Lettuce, celery, and radishes keep better in a damp newspaper than in the ordinary icebox, and cucumbers often begin to shrivel after a day or two there. The latter may be kept in frequently changed water, stem end down. Eggs should always be washed. The ice box is a safer place for any food when all foods put into it are either sterile or clean from washing.

"Bad buying is the root of extravagance, but bad keeping turns the extravagance into waste little short of criminal," says one who has written at length on all the ways of keeping things, most of which are not included among the facilities of city apartments. Access to air or a draft of air is one of the most desirable things for the keeping of most foods, due caution being taken to protect them from dust, dirt, and animal life. Four footed animals are counted friends, but the six footed and more are anything but friends, and those with false feet are the worst of all, because often too small to see with the naked eye, yet we must remember that they make keeping things a great problem. Heat alone hinders their birth, life, and activities.

Sour Milk Dishes.

Even pasteurized milk should sour by the third day in the ice box. The chief use for this where not much cooking is done must be always the cottage cheese, but it is better to sterilize it or heat it to boiling point before it sours; pour it into cups which have first been wet with cold water and then leave, covered after cool, outside the ice box to turn. When it has clabbered, eat with sugar and nutmeg, and add berries if you choose. This is more attractive to eat than casually soured milk and has high value as a health dish. People who think they dislike sour milk may not recognize it when so prepared and eaten with plenty of sugar.

Cottage Cheese Accompaniments.

Eat cottage cheese with jelly, mixed with cucumber dices, minced nuts, chives, or onion juice, with tomatoes in a salad, or with spices. Salt before straining off whey, and then add a little cream and butter. Peppergrass chopped fine, when it is obtainable, adds especial piquancy, and chopped pimento is sometimes used when the cheese is made up into balls to be served on lettuce. Plain cottage cheese is good in brown bread sandwiches, the bread well buttered first. The mixture with cucumbers is also good for sandwich filling. Cottage cheese combined with bread and fried is a famous Italian dish. Green peppers are sometimes stuffed with this cheese and fried. Cottage cheese may be cured and keeps fresh but a short time. Wrap in paraffin paper to exclude the air and put in refrigerator.

Cheese Cakes.

The quality of a cheese cake varies just as the cottage cheese of which it is made varies in dryness or wetness. Some cooks prefer a dry cheese, in which case their cheese cake or pie or custard, call it what you will, may have a chalky dryness that is not palatable. One cup of cheese, one egg, and from one-quarter to one-half cup of sugar are good proportions for a cheese cake, but two eggs to a cup of cheese is better. A bit of cream improves the texture, and the cake is finer if the cheese is sifted, usually. The lemon flavoring, juice, and rind, which many people use, does not make so palatable a cake to my mind as one flavored simply with a little nutmeg. A tablespoon or a little more of flour may be added to every cup of cheese if it is rather damp.

Keeping Bacon, Cake, and Cereals.

It is no sign that the health inspectors should look at your icebox if sliced bacon deteriorates in it within a few days. Slice your own bacon and keep it between times in as airy and cool a place as you can.

In damp, hot weather cake is likely to mold quickly. If it is two or three days old it is best to prevent this by heating it and letting it cool thoroughly before putting it in the cake box, or it may be steamed for half an hour and then dried in the oven for a few minutes. Sponge cake is always freshened by toasting, and is good toasted and buttered. Waxed paper around a cool cake in a cake box keeps it fresh. Most cake keeps better in a stone jar, which should be dried and sunned frequently.

Cereals thoroughly heated and kept in sterilized jars will not become infested with weevils, or any of those black pests so familiar to housekeepers. This should be done as soon as a package comes into the house.

Mothers' Society
Conducted by Tribune Readers

If you have had a valuable experience in the matter of child discipline, child diet, the physical or mental development of your child, in the correction of bad habits, both mental and physical, in the care of the baby's skin, hair, or any other part of the child's anatomy, nursery furnishings, baby's bath, teething difficulties, effective emergency remedies, children's clothing, games and friendships, manners and punishments, write them in to Mothers' society, care of "The Chicago Tribune." For every letter printed "The Tribune" will pay $1. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Charming Vacation Hobby.

To her who wants to keep her little brood healthfully interested out of doors the gentle art of leaf printing is recommended as a simple, safe, and altogether charming vacation hobby.

Supply the little printers with photo printing frames fitted with clear glass, a tin of the same size ferro-prussiate paper, gather a handful of fresh leaves, and show them how, as follows:

Place the leaf to be photographed face down between blueprint paper and glass, securely fastened into the frame, and exposed to the direct rays of the midday sun till the leaf grows brown and crinkly around the edges. Wash in several cold waters and dry on thick white blotting paper.

A set of such photos mounted in a book would make an attractive souvenir of a happily spent summer. Blueprint post cards bearing homemade leaf likenesses make novel and beautiful holiday cards for use all winter. K. J.

Safety in High Chair.

When my baby reached the point where he would stand up in his buggy or high chair, with grave danger of falling, I had a safety belt constructed of three straps. The first was wide and long enough to go around his waist comfortably. Under each arm a stout, shorter strap was strongly riveted by the harness maker. When in use the belt was strapped around the boy and to each arm of the high chair. Remember in buying a high chair to get one that is well balanced, with legs spread out far enough and built securely enough to stand well. N. B. A.

Keeps Vermin from Scalp.

Many mothers who have school children are troubled to know how to keep the hair sweet and free from vermin. Every Saturday night I apply equal parts of kerosene oil and sweet oil mixed. I have a dust cap which the child wears at night. In the morning I wash the hair well with good soap. After it is dry I boil white vinegar and as soon as it cools a little I wet the hair with the hot vinegar. I then comb it to remove all nits. I do this once a week, whether there is any vermin or not. My girls have beautiful hair. J. S.

Daily Rub with Olive Oil.

I have always given my 15 months old baby an olive oil rub after his daily bath and believe that his healthy condition and soft skin are partially due to that. I know that it is a good flesh builder and a good hair grower. It has kept his skin soft—a condition which is almost impossible to obtain when hard water is constantly used.

He has always had a scanty amount of hair, but now it is growing rapidly, and I give the credit to olive oil, which was rubbed well into the scalp each day. Since the hair has begun to get thicker I have used it only once a week.

Prickly heat and chafed parts of the body are particularly hard to care for; but from experience I know that the oil is soothing and gives the quickest and greatest relief of anything I have tried. Mrs. J. B. R.

Making First Years Count.

Darwin said, when the mother of a 2½ year old boy asked him when she should begin his education, "Madam, you have lost two and one-half years."

This little story aroused by interest in child study in the early days of married life, and through this study and later experience as the mother of six children I learned how to make these first years count. For one thing, I found the baby's playthings can be made either a help or a hindrance in his right training. To be a help they must be simple, few in number, and they must stimulate his imagination.

The baby under 1 year should have but three toys—a rattle, a teething ring, and a large, light, bright red ball. The ball should be suspended at such a height that while the baby can hit it he cannot guide it to his little mouh. A baby from 4 to 7 months old, lying, slightly propped, will amuse himself much of his waking time trying to bring his hands against the bright ball. Do you see how, even at this early age, he is learning concentration of interest and muscle control? When he tires of the ball, the rattle may be suspended in the same way.

Be sure these three playthings are large, but light in weight. The baby always chooses big objects to play with, and his instinctive choice is psychologically correct.

The relation of the baby's play to his normal development can be but hinted at in these suggestions, but the mother who realizes that play is education may help her child in a way undreamed of by the world at large. J. D. M.

Cured Faulty Speech.

The following may be of interest to mothers who have children with some impediment in their speech: My daughter is now 16 yeasr of age, and has straight teeth, perfect features, and a clear enunciation.

When my last child was about 2 years old I noticed that when she tried to pronounce a word with two syllables she would move her lower jaw to the right when pronouncing the last syllable. She also lisped badly. It worried me, and I did a lot of thinking.

One day I playfully held her face firmly between my hands and told her to call the kitty. She could not move her jaws, but she still lisped badly. Then I closed her teeth together while she was still trying to say "pussy," "kitty," "Dottie," etc., and found she spoke quite plainly.

After that I never allowed her to speak until she closed her teeth tightly, and in that way, by perseverance and patience we have conquered both the lisping and the family trait of having features a little on the bias. T. G. T.

Kicked Hole in Tambourine.

It was at a club entertainment. My number was a Spanish one, and I was to sing, and dance, and kick an extremely large tambourine. I started off all right, but right in the middle of the number, while kicking the tambourine high over my head, my foot went through it. When I brought my foot down the bulky tambourine caught the other foot. Biff! Bang! Down I went on my face. And as my legs wriggled the tambourine jangled merrily. Well, the audience roared. L. R. The Lost Pickle.

On my way to work the other morning I dropped my lunch and the contents fell on the floor, but an elderly man helped me pick it up and I thought I had it all wrapped again and was getting off the car at Congress street when a little boy called me and said: "Pardon me, girlie, but here is your pickle!" A large Grandma Did It.

My most embarrassing moment was when my grandmother, who had spent the greater part of her life on a farm, came to visit us, and I took her to a moving picture show for the first time in her life. She refused to take off her hat; also insisted on sitting upon the back of her seat, where she could get a better view of the pictures. The usher came and tapped her on the shoulder and told her to remove her hat, also to sit down in the seat. I was so embarrassed by this time that I did not offer to assist her, and as she started to sit down she lost her balance and landed at the feet of the gentleman sitting next to her. It was the most embarrassing experience I ever had, or ever hope to have again. L. M. C.

Heroics Were Useless.

I was clad in a bathing suit, standing on a crowded pier, which overlooked a beach. I saw a girl out in the water, about 150 feet from shore, waving her hand and shouting something which I could not understand, but took it for signs of distress.

Shouting for her to hold up a few minutes more, I dove off the pier and swam at breakneck speed toward her.

Arriving at her side, imagine my embarrassment to have her tell me coolly that she was just waving to some friends who were on the pier. And what was worse, I had to tell the crowd what happened and got the "ha-ha."

Risky to "Talk Shop."

THE following letter on office gossip should be a good thing for all of us to read, as most of us need a reminder of this kind. It is extremely easy to fall into the habit of discussing one's employer and his business affairs with the other people in the office, and, while it may be a harmless pastime, still there is always danger of talking too much and being too ready to air one's opinions.

I knew a girl who was given to criticising her employer and the way he managed his business. No matter to whom she was talking she did not hesitate to talk freely on the subject of her boss and his affairs and was often warned by the other girls in the office that the boss might hear of her criticisms.

She paid no attention to them and one day when she was particularly loquacious on her favorite topic her employer overheard her and told her that if she did not approve of him and his methods she was not obliged to remain in his employ. There was nothing left for her to do but leave. He then called the rest of his employés to his office and said if there was any one else who felt the same way about him he or she was free to go. This was not particularly pleasant for the other people who had not done any talking and who listened under protest to the girl who disapproved.

"Dear Miss King: If you have no objection I should like to use your column to tell other business girls of an experience of mine which I think might serve as a warning and save them from making the same mistake I did.

"The other day when I was in my boss' office I learned from a telephone conversation he had of a change to be made in the office. The boss talked freely of the matter before me and so I did not think of its being a secret. Later in the day when chatting with the other girls in the office I told them of the contemplated change, as I knew they would be interested. Not five minutes after I had spread the news the boss asked me not to tell the others, as he was not ready to inform those who would be affected by the change.

"I was so confused at the time that I did not admit then that I already had given out the information, but I had to tell him later, as I was afraid it would be much worse for me if he found out through others. He was nice about it when he saw how penitent I was and told me not to worry, as he was partly to blame for not letting me know that I was not to talk about it.

"The fact that my employed feels now that he has to ask me not to repeat things that I hear in his office makes me feel terribly ashamed. He seems to have lost all confidence in me. He is always careful now of what he says when I am in his office. Although I have learned my lesson and wild horses would not drag from me any bit of information I gather from the boss' correspondence or conversation, he probably never again will have complete confidence in my discretion, and this thought hurts my pride.

"Since my unfortunate slip I am extremely careful when conversing with the girls in the office to keep the conversation away from business, as I realize it is a temptation when we have a few moments to ourselves to gossip about office people and office affairs. Now when I hear others talking freely about office matters I want to interrupt and advise them to desist. J. N. B."

Varied Activities of Women.

One woman in every fifteen in the United States is in business.

Two babies are born in Germany to every one born in France.

Pittsburgh's policewomen are assigned to secret service work.

Miss Neysa McMein, an illustrator of front covers for magazines, earns over $15,000 a year from her own work.

Although she is past 62 years of age, Miss S. D. Wallace, Indianapolis, Ind., has again secured an annual fishing and hunting license.

Dr. S. Josephine Baker, director of the department of child hygiene of the New York board of health, has under her over 300 nurses and 100 doctors.

Miss Grace Breed of Denver, Colo., earned all her expenses for one year at the Colorado Agricultural college by raising chickens on a vacant city lot.

Mrs. George Welch, who took charge of the Corpus Christi, Tex., postoffice recently, is believed to be the only woman in the United States to have charge of a postoffice of the first class.

In the fifty years she has been connected with the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington, it is estimated that over $100,000,000,000 has passed through the hands of Miss Annie Roe, chief of the numbering division.

Miss Honora Whalen of Erie, Pa., the first girl to be graduated from the school of agriculture at Pennsylvania State college, will undertake the management of her father's ranch in South Dakota.

As soon as the war is over Miss Genevieve Caulfield, a teacher at the Pennsylvania Institution for Instruction of the Blind, will sail for Japan, where she will devote her life to teaching the blind there.

Wearing shoes which are built for service, a broad brimmed felt hat slouching about her face, heavy leather leggins, and cowhide cuffs decorated with copper braids and a heavy denim skirt cut half way between the knee and ankle is the costume worn by Miss Frankie Lily, aged 29, who drives a team every day in the Oklahoma oil fields.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I HAVE had a number of misfortunes of which I wish to tell you. Early in December last my husband fell sick from rheumatism and was helpless for six weeks. He has not yet fully recovered from the attack. In April I gave birth to twin girls. Both babies are living and doing fairly well. I now have five children living and three dead. My husband has had to do most of the care of me and of the children, sitting up at night ever since I have been sick. He has done no wage earning work and saved no money since last November, and as he is our only support you can well see that we are in need of almost everything. If he could leave me he could get work away from here, but he has been compelled to care for me while I have been so helpless with heart and kidney complications. I have neither cradle nor carriage for the babies. If I had a carriage of any sort my eldest child could help me a great deal in the care of the twins. He is nearly 7 years old. My other children are another boy of 3 and a girl, who is almost 5. MRS. W. A. H."

This is certainly a hard position. I don't know for which I am most sorry, the wife, laid aside by illness and forced to see her duties devolve upon others; the husband, lame and crippled from rheumatism, unable to leave home to get work and so trying to do all he can to spare his wife by taking her place in the home; or the 7 year old boy, who is to be relied upon to "help a great deal in the care of the children." Poor little chap! In any case assistance is certainly needed. I am sure there will be many replies from our warm hearted and generous Cornerites who will give help and advice to the best of their powers. I shall be happy to send the address of Mrs. W. A. H. to any one who thinks he or she can be of service to this needy household.

Does Own Sewing.

"Having seen in the Corner an offer of patches, patterns, etc., I write to ask you if I could have these, or part of them. I have been a constant reader of the paper for years, and I am also a cripple, with a family of four young children. I try to do my own sewing, and this is one reason why I would be so thankful for these and for reading matter. If any one has a go-cart I would also be grateful for it, since, owing to much sickness and trouble, I cannot afford to get one. HOPEFUL."

Perhaps we could have helped this correspondent by putting her in touch with the friend who offered patches, etc., if she had only given the signature of the writer. As it is, the best that can be done is to print this letter here, put "Hopeful's" name and address on file, and trust that some one may write for these with the desire to send what is needed.

Wants an Old Piano.

"I have a big appeal to send you, but if you will list it and some one else will grant it it would make me completely happy. I want a piano. I am passionately fond of music, and, knowing the Corner goes into thousands of homes, I have thought that perhaps some one having an old piano and no longer wanting it, or who perhaps is buying a new instrument, would give me the old one. I would pay freight gladly. I had a piano once, but lost it through inability to continue the payments on it, and I have never been able to get another. I shall be praying continually that some kind person will send me an old piano. I have some songs, words and music, and some pictures and crochet instructions I will gladly give away on receipt of request and a 2 cent stamp for postage. Altogether, I have about fifteen brand new, pretty pictures, unframed, and eight or nine pieces of music. The instructions for crocheting are for making a purse, a sweater, a knitted scarf, or lace. M. D."

The writer is correct when she says that a piano is a big thing to ask for. Yet we have had pianos given before and this may be another of the occasions when the Corner rises to meet the demand put upon it. Her offer of music, of pictures and of instruction in making various crocheted articles will doubtless be promptly accepted.

Government Whitewash.

"I wish you would give me the formula for the cement White House paint. I am an old soldier's wife with a great deal of ambition but little money, and want to paint my house—or at least my husband does. HEWETT."

I suppose that the preparation you wish is that known as government whitewash. I have never heard it given the name by which you speak of it, but the following is the preparation generally in use upon government buildings and came to me from a trustworthy source. It is not like ordinary whitewash and lasts much better: Slake half a bushel of lime with boiling water; cover it during the process to keep in the steam; strain the liquid through a fine strainer or sieve and add to it one peck of salt, previously dissolved in warm water, three pounds of ground rice, boiled to a paste and stirred in while hot; half a pound of Spanish whiting and one pound of glue previously dissolved by soaking in cold water, and then hanging over the fire in a small pot hung in a larger one filled with water. Add five gallons of hot water to the mixture, stir well, and let it stand a few days, covered from the dirt. It should be applied hot, for which purpose it can be kept in a kettle or portable furnace. A pint of this wash mixture, if properly applied, will cover one square yard. Coloring matter may be added as desired. If you wish instructions for tinting the whitewash let me know and I will gladly give them in the Corner. I hope you may find this the preparation for which you are seeking.

Would Like Some Magazines.

"If Mrs. D. H. M. has not already given away the magazines she offers, I would like some of them. MRS. K. D."

I am sorry to say that all the magazines offered by this especial correspondent have been bestowed elsewhere. But I am positive there are others with periodicals to give away, and I shall file the address of Mrs. K. D. in the hope that I shall soon have an application for it from those who wish to send her magazines.

Rose Potpourri.

"I would thank you to let me know what is used to make a rose jar, not rose beads. Rose petals are put in a jar, I know, and I believe saltpeter is the next layer, but another substance I have forgotten. Can you tell me what it is? "MRS. B. G."

I have a time honored recipe for making potpourri for rose jars, but it does not contain saltpeter. The product made by my directions will hold its fragrance for years if the jar is kept closed most of the time, and will be delicious to the end. The following is the recipe: Gather rose petals when the flowers are at their best and pick them when they are dry, not when the dew is on them. They must be fragrant roses, not the climbers, or wild roses, or others of the varieties which have little perfume. Pack them in a jar in layers two inches deep, sprinkling each layer of the leaves with two tablespoons of fine, dry salt. Add to the supply of petals and salt each day until the jar is full. Keep it in a dry, cool place. A week after the last supply goes in turn the contents of the jar on a platter and toss until they are loosened. Mix with them the following perfumes and set away to ripen: Half ounce each of rose, violet, and heliotrope powder; one ounce orris root; half teaspoon each of cloves, mace, and cinnamon; twenty drops each oil of melissa and oil eucalyptus; ten drops each oil chiris and bergamot; four drops oil of roses; two drams alcohol.

Keeps Hair Brush Clean.

"I think you may like to know of the way in which I keep my hair brush clean. It differs from yours, although it may not be any better. You may care to try it, as hot water is not used and some persons claim that this injures the bristles and softens them. I have used this method many times and have found it excellent: Dissolve a teaspoon of baking soda in a teacup of cold water; let the brush—the bristles only—remain in the water a few minutes, then rub them a little, rinse in clear cold water, and dry in the shade. A comb can be run through the bristles afterwards in order to remove the lint. MRS. E. D."

I am glad to get this direction. I have heard that hot water softens the bristles of a brush, and there are also times when hot water is not at hand and it is a convenience to be able to cleanse the brush without its aid.

Cripple Ready to Help.

"I am looking eagerly to find a trace of Miss Grace Van Court, who sadly needs some information I have obtained for her. All my endeavors to find her have proved of no avail. I know, however, that she always reads Marion Harland's Corner and I believe that a sentence in the Helping Hand would meet her eyes and result in much good to her. Will you insert this and if she sees it and write to you, put her in touch with me? I shall be greatly obliged to you. And now what can I do for the Corner? Is there not some act of helpfulness a shut-in cripple can render? I suppose the great need is for cash, and I have a struggle to keep the wolves away from my own door with nothing to depend upon but my little 'sweets to the sweet.' But here in my chair I can do any copying or writing that would be entrusted to me or anything else that could be accomplished by one handicapped as I am. Do not then hesitate to accord me that pleasure! S. F. R."

It gives me pleasure to print here the request for the name of Miss Grace Van Court and I hope it may meet her eyes and that she will write to me for the address of S. F. R. I am also glad to make public the generous offer of help of this correspondent, not only because it may be of service to some one but also as an example of helpfulness shown by one working under many disadvantages. She will be remembered as the Cornerite who asked for rose leaves a short while ago in order that she might make from them the little sachets she calls "sweets to the sweet," by means of which she supports herself in her crippled condition. There are many kinds of assistance fully as valuable as the gift of cash, and the spirit back of the willingness to aid displayed by this shut-in is bound to find an outlet which will be of genuine service to others. I shall be happy to supply her address to those who wish it, either for correspondence, to send her rose leaves, or to get or give other aid.

Needs Material for Fancywork.

"I live quite a distance from neighbors and have a small baby; still there are spare moments in which to do fancy work if I only had the materials. For this reason I would like the address of Marie B. and would gladly give her geranium cuttings and poppy plants in return if she would care to have them. I would like also to suggest a way of cleaning a hairbrush. Mix one part of flour and one part of salt and rub thoroughly into the brush. When this has been done shake and comb out the bristles and the brush will be like new. MRS. M. E. D."

I have sent the address of Marie B. to this correspondent, although I am not sure but that the supply of fancy work to give away has been exhausted. Has any other friend articles in this line to bestow on this Cornerite? Her directions for cleaning a hairbrush are also welcome.

Needs an Air Cushion.

"I wish very much I could have given to me the air cushion which has been so kindly offered. I want it for my husband, who suffers from tuberculosis and is practically an invalid. He is much emaciated and has to remain in his chair much of the time. As I have the living to make for us and our four children, I do not have anything left for luxuries. I will gladly pay postage on the cushion. MRS. E. W."

I regret more than I can say that I must return the same answer to this request that I have to other applicants for the cushion. It has been given away. Has no one else another to give to this woman who is fighting the good fight for her children and her sick husband?

True Spirit of Helpfulness.

"When I saw that Miss B. L. was not only a school teacher but was afflicted with a form of rheumatism which I know from personal experience I felt that I must do what I could to allay at least the loneliness. I shall be glad to send now and then a postcard, a pressed flower, acorns from some mountain top, shells from the ocean. Wherever I go I gather these treasures for those whom I have on my list of letter friends. I have known what it is to be ill, to lie in a hospital at death's door; and I am glad to do what is possible to me for those who cannot do as I have done and regain a measure of health. As you will note by the address of my letter, we live in the sunshine and among flowers, as great fields of violets and carnations are in bloom around us. The mocking bird is our great friend. No cat comes here. The bird is ever present, peering from the roof, hiding in the grape vines, sitting boldly on top of a fig leaf, always singing, always overflowing with joy. You see, I must needs send on a part of what I have. W. E. H."

I am printing this letter not only because it is charming in itself but also because it is overflowing with the true spirit of helpfulness and the desire to share with others our own joy. I like to believe that this is the true Cornerite spirit, and it was with pleasure that I sent on the address of the lonely school teacher, sure she would be brightened by messages from this friend. I wish that all of us who have country or seashore joys this summer might bear in mind those less fortunate than ourselves and follow the example of W. E. H., who garners the sweetness of outdoors wherever she finds it for the benefit of those whose lives she can brighten with her pressed flowers, her acorns, or her shells.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Still Hand in Hand.

When we were first married, like other young married people, we could not see ourselves as others see us. One evening we were going home hand in hand. A man passing us said: "Are you going to school?" That was forty years ago, but it's still green. J. M. H.

The Feathers for Him.

To me my husband seemed to be the personification of everything required in a man. We were married three months. Then was I disillusioned. Our club decided to go on a trip to a farm for three or four days. As the farmhouse was rather small, we women had it all arranged between ourselves that the men would sleep outdoors and we could occupy the beds. When evening came and we proposed our plan to the men, my husband up and shouted: "Say; what do you know about that? You women must be crazy to imagine that I'm going to sleep outdoors and be eaten alive by mosquitoes. Not on your lives! It's me for the feathers!" And with that he dashed upstairs to secure one of the beds for himself. My idol was shattered. M. L.

Ideal of Girlhood Dreams.

Before my marriage I listened to the warnings of older women until I had the impression that husbands were a source of continual trouble, but with the conviction that "experience is the best of teachers" I plunged into matrimony, expecting to become a slave of love. To my surprise my husband treated me with more kindness and consideration than in the days of our courtship, and after two years of wedded bliss he is more like the ideal of my girlhood dreams than I ever expected a "human man" to be. N. G.

Thinks She Has "Grounds."

After we were engaged my husband-to-be always ate Sunday evening supper at our home. He ate little, and his small appetite was the joke of our family. I often told him that I was glad I was going to cook for a man who was never hungry. Imagine my astonishment after our marriage to find that he ate enormously at every meal—except Sunday night supper. He says that I should have had sense enough to know he couldn't eat much in the evening after the hearty Sunday dinner his mother always set before him. I claim such deceit should be grounds for divorce. Nevertheless, I shall cook all he can eat as long as he pays the grocery bills. M. J.

Bright Sayings of the Children

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The stories may be sent in either by children or their parents. The only condition is the story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

Bobby was fond of visiting stores, but annoyed his mother by asking for things. Finally his mother told him if he continued to nag he could never go shopping again. The next time he went he said not a word until he had looked over all the toys, then he said timidly: "Mother, won't you please buy me something without my asking for it?" MRS. L. N. C.

A little boy, lost in a department store, was crying when picked up by the floor walker. He tried to calm the youngster and asked him where he left his mother. The little fellow explained, "I don't know. I told her not to bring me down town, cause she'd lost me." A. M. E.

Little Crawford, who came in from the yard crying, came up to me and said, "Aunty, I got a teethache." I replied, "You have my sympathy, dear." He stood thinking for a minute, and then said, "Well, I am glad of that, these fellers in the yard don't seem to 'preciate how bad I hurt." F. F. S.

Ethel and her two brothers went to the doctor's office with mother to be vaccinated. The boys were vaccinated first. They both seemed faint, so the doctor laid one on the couch and one on the operating table. He then vaccinated Ethel, who stood the operation better than the boys, but who resented inattention and cried, "Hadn't you better put me to bed, too?" ANOLA.

While my sister and I were talking one day she carelessly made the remark, "I think Kenneth has such a pretty shaped head." Kenneth, who seemed to not be paying any attention to us, at once replied, "Well, mamma, I've had this head almost seven years and you've just now noticed it." MRS. L.

Ruth received a pretty white dress with a big blue sash from her aunt for her fourth birthday. She stood in front of the mirror admiring herself and said to her mother, "Mother, I wish the back of this dress was the front." "Why, dear?" asked her mother. "Well," said Ruth, "then I could look at the bow and not sit on it." E. C. K.

John's mother gave a party for him. The most expensive present was given to him by the daughter of the richest and stingiest woman in the neighborhood. After the guests had departed, John said to his mother: "Mamma, don't you think when Mrs. Brown went with Dorothy to buy my present that she remembered she was rich, and forgot she was stingy?" L. O. H.

Vincent tumbled off of his chair, whereupon he set up a good, healthy bawl. His elder brother, Gilbert, aged 3, helped him up, patted him on the back sympathetically, and remarked, "Don't cry, Vincent, you didn't mean to hurt yourself."

My nephew had just recovered from scarlet fever and was showing a little cousin all the gifts he had received while quarantined. Showing him different things he said: "See, I got this from grandma, and this from auntie, and this from uncle." When the list was exhausted the cousin said: "That's nice. What else did you get?" Said the convalescent: "What else did I get? Gee! I'm glad I got better." J. A. W.

After being accustomed to the colored tablecloths used for every day, on seeing the mother spread a white cloth on the table the little boy exclaimed to his sister: "O, see, mamma has company on the table." I. B.

My little nephew stood looking admiringly at me as, dressed in my new dress I started for church one Sunday morning. To my question, "Do you like my new dress, Billy?" he answered: "I guess I do; it makes my eyes all smiley."

DOROTHY M. VANDERCOOK, Lombard, Ill.

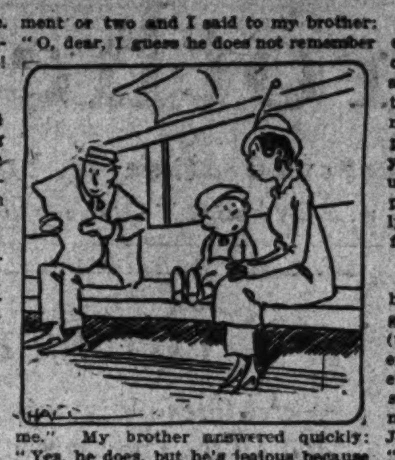
One Sunday I took my small brother for a ride on the surface cars, where we met a friend whom I had not seen for some time. He did not recognize me for a moment or two and I said to my brother: "O, dear, I guess he does not remember me." My brother answered quickly: "Yes, he does, but he's jealous because I'm here." M. E. S.



Carl and Gustav were two small brothers. One evening at dinner there was company and as a favor they were allowed to be present on condition that they be quiet. Gustav, however, could not resist the temptation whenever it presented itself to gently kick his younger brother, which, of course, was unnoticed by any one. Finally Carl's patience gave out and he exclaimed loudly: "Gustav, will you please keep your feet private." MRS. G. A. A."

Johnny, aged 4, was receiving his first baseball lesson and, deciding his own game, pounced on James, aged 5, and (using Johnny's language) batted James' eyes. Johnny's horrified mother delivered a sound lecture to her pugilist and said he would have to go over in the morning to see James and apologize. Johnny, after a moment's thought, said, "I better go now. His eyes will be closed in the morning." G. G.

IF GERMANY SHOULD FIGHT THE UNITED STATES

Recent mimic invasion of the United States shows the inadequacy of our preparation for war; navy lacks scout cruisers, battle cruisers, submarines, mine layers, and first line ships with long range guns. Our harbor fortifications do not protect our coasts and could be taken from the rear once a landing were effected.

Germany's navy, released undamaged from Wilhelmshaven, would have the incompletely manned and diminutive American navy at its mercy. Once landed on American soil, the Germans with their heavy artillery would find little opposition from the American army, whose largest field howitzer is 6 inches in diameter.

By Burton Rascoe.

THE climax of the pomp and ceremony attending the recent naval review in New York harbor was a hint at reality so significant in portent as to give our most raucous pacificists cause for reflection. As an ornament to New York harbor our Atlantic fleet was impressive, spectacular, patriotic, inspiring; as a potential defender of our Atlantic seaboard it was pathetic.

It was demonstrated that an inconsiderable navy squadron made up of the latest type of battle and scout cruisers could, with little effort, evade our navy defending a limited stretch of the Atlantic coast, establish a base properly mined and defended, and land a military force of upwards of 200,000 men for an invasion of our seaboard industrial centers.

What happened, so far as the government officials would allow it to be made public, was this:

Rear Admiral Frank Edmund Beatty was given a handful of vessels, among which the Chester represented a squadron of battle cruisers, and directed to go to the mid-Atlantic and from there to attempt to elude the Atlantic fleet under Rear Admiral Frank Friday Fletcher and establish a base for land operations somewhere on a stretch of seaboard from Maine to South Carolina.

Handicapped with a lack of scout cruisers and destroyers, and possessing no battle cruisers, Rear Admiral Fletcher concentrated his dreadnaughts at the principal harbors, New York and Boston, and sent his scouts in a futile search for the "hostile" fleet.

Rear Admiral Beatty slipped around the farthest flung line of scout cruisers and effected a landing somewhere in Chesapeake bay. That was his job and he did it effectively. Theoretically, without loss of men or damage to ships, a foreign power had found our Atlantic fleet—the hope of the United States against invasion—incapable of the job for which it was created.

In addition it was learned that the submarines, or such as were used, were ineffective, if not wholly useless. Dummy torpedoes were substituted for real torpedoes before the underwater craft were submerged. Although these dummy torpedoes were the exact size of the real torpedoes and properly lubricated to facilitate firing, when attempts were made to fire them against "hostile" vessels they stuck in the torpedo tubes. The demonstration of these defects in the torpedo discharging apparatus of our submarines so alarmed Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels that he at once ordered an inspection of all submarines now in the service of the navy and the overhauling and perfecting of those found defective.

This unsatisfactory display of the potentialities of our naval defense presages what might happen if Germany and the United States should go to war.

The United States navy, such as it is, constitutes our prime, almost our whole, defense. The total mobile army in continental United States, including engineers, cavalrymen, field artillerymen, cooks, musicians, scouts, and infantrymen, is 51,344—a mere scouting party in comparison with the armies now fighting in Europe.

Our prime defense, our navy, consists of thirty-three battleships less than twenty years old, with four authorized and building. It has not one battle cruiser—that swift moving, heavily armored, and powerfully armed battle unit which has proved irresistible in recent sea battles. Germany has eight battle cruisers in service and several building. We have in commission sixty-two destroyers, the most effective antidote to submarines, while Germany has over 150.

The most powerful guns that so far have been mounted on American superdreadnaughts are fourteen inches in diameter and have an effective range of between six and eight miles; Germany has at least two superdreadnaughts, each mounting eight fifteen-inch guns, which with a 2,000 pound projectile pierce the heaviest armor plate at a distance of over twelve miles.

The United States has 52,300 men in the navy service—an actual shortage of 18,000 of the number needed to man the small fleet we have. There is a shortage also of 4,000 men who will be required to man the battleships Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, and Arizona when they are completed. Germany has 65,000 officers and men and a naval reserve force of 110,000 men.

Adequately to protect our harbors against hostile under and above water craft, it would be necessary to lay thousands of contact mines. We possess for this purpose, for our entire stretch of Atlantic and Pacific coast line, one mine layer, on board which are 336 mines. Germany had some 25,000 mines when the war started.

Scout ships are the eyes of both the attacking and defending fleets, the field glasses through which the commanding officer gets his perspective and estimates his antagonist. Without scout cruisers the fleet cannot see the enemy and cannot get a hint of the enemy fleet's movements, while the enemy, if supplied with scout cruisers, has the other fleet at his mercy. Their speed, which is from twenty-five to thirty knots an hour, is the fortune of these scouts. Of them, the United States has three. Germany has fourteen.

The German navy has been practically unharmed during the present war. Shut up as the major part of it has been in the harbors of Wilhelmshaven and Kiel, it has seen no more service than the American navy. And it is entirely probable that, held in restraint as long as they have been, the German sailors would be full of the fighting spirit if they were released.

What Might Happen.

Assuming that peace were effected between Great Britain and Germany and the powerful British navy no longer prevented the departure of the German fleet from its home base and that invasion of the United States would offer the simplest solution of the financial and economic difficulties confronting the German people, the inadequacy of our defense is terrifying.

The Panama canal, the most vital extra-territorial asset of the United States, is safe from bombardment from the sea. It is fortified with eighteen-inch guns, which have an effective range of several miles more than the guns of the most powerful battleship afloat. No battleship built so far can get within striking range of the canal.

But by dashing to Cuba and there establishing not only a military and naval base but annexing the island (which easily could be done), the Germans could at once isolate the United States from the Panama canal and render the Pacific fleet incapable of sending quick aid to the small Atlantic fleet.

The fortifications of New York harbor are inadequate for defense against battleships carrying fifteen-inch guns. The heaviest guns are located at Sandy Hook, but their effective range is within a certain arc of from 8,000 to 12,000 yards in diameter. An enemy battleship mounting fifteen-inch guns could halt outside this arc near Rockaway beach and, unhit by the Sandy Hook guns, demolish the heart of New York City.

Boston harbor is defended with only ten and eleven-inch guns—a fact which would make it possible for German vessels mounting thirteen and fourteen inch guns to stand beyond the range of these defense guns, pound the forts to dust, and take the city of Boston without the loss of a single sailor.

To offset this inefficiency in the defenses of our two most important coast cities it would be necessary for the Atlantic fleet, minus its eyes, or scout cruisers, and handicapped by a lack of battle cruisers, to occupy itself mainly in preventing the enemy fleet from getting within range of the cities. Even this would be an unfruitful task, if the slow predreadnaughts and dreadnaughts of the American navy were pitted against the fleet battle cruisers.

From this arises the possibility of Rear Admiral Beatty's mimic victory's being duplicated by the Germans in reality. Moving forward behind an impenetrable screen of destroyers and keeping tab with the American fleet's movements through scout cruisers, it is likely that the German fleet would be able completely to evade the defending fleet, land somewhere off Chesapeake bay, establish there a naval and military base, and make easy the landing of a formidable invading force.

Artillery Almost Useless.

With a base thus established an almost unhindered march upon Washington would begin. Even if a defending force amounting to 30,000 could be assembled it would be handicapped with a lack of field artillery large enough in caliber to withstand a German attack. The whole United States army, spread over the wide domain from the Atlantic to the Pacific, is equipped with only thirty-six six-inch howitzers—and these are the heaviest pieces of artillery in the service.

The Germans, equipped with nine, ten, twelve, and sixteen-inch howitzers, could annihilate the defending force before they had reached within miles of the effective range of the American six-inch howitzers. The rapid fire field guns at present in use by the Germans would mow down the ranks of the American army division, whose rifles would be as ineffectual against them as popguns.

Once in possession of Washington, the Germans could seize the United States mint and treasury, inaugurate the crown prince as sovereign of the dominion of German-America, if it so pleased them, and proceed against the heart of the industrial center of the United States.

The arms and ammunition, the armor plate and navy yards, the powder and high explosives used by the United States army and navy all are manufactured within a radius of 250 miles of Camden, N. J. The steel works of Pittsburgh, the rifles and field artillery factories of Connecticut, the powder and high explosive works of New Jersey, the shipyards of Philadelphia and New York all come within this arc.

Finding the inland cities undefended and the coast cities unprotected from land (the fort guns of Boston, New York, and other coast cities revolve only in a limited arc and shoot only toward the sea), the Germans with little difficulty could soon be in complete possession of the very materials and factories for making the defenses that the United States would find itself in absolute need of in the event of war.

In their present condition, our harbor forts cannot defend a coast like ours. Their only effectiveness is in keeping battleships mounting guns under twelve inches in diameter away from the cities. The forts themselves can be taken from the rear if a hostile army effects a landing anywhere on our coast. Although this repeatedly has been brought to the attention of congress by the war department, no effort has been made to mount in the fortifications guns which will shoot toward land as well as toward the sea.

Wood Cites Present Need.

As regards our army, Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood made the following statements in a report to congress:

"We have neither guns nor ammunition sufficient to give any general commanding an army in the field any assurances of success if attacked by an army of equal size which is supplied with its proper quota of field artillery.

"The fire of modern field artillery is so deadly that troops cannot advance over terrain swept by these guns without prohibitive losses. It is, therefore, necessary to neutralize the fire of hostile guns before our troops can advance, and the only way to neutralize the fire of hostile field artillery is by field artillery guns; for troops armed with small arms are as ineffectual against this fire until they arrive about 2,000 yards from it as though they were armed with knives.

"At present the supply of ammunition the arsenals can turn out is about 1,600 rounds a day, running three shifts, and this ammunition, under ordinary battle conditions, could be fired by eight guns in one day of battle. At Mukden in nine days the Russians expended 250,000 rounds; in the Russo-Japanese war the Russians expended, during the war, exclusive of the action at Port Arthur, 954,000 rounds.

"The war department believes, after extended study, that in case of actual war with a first class power an army of 500,000 men will be needed to give this country any chance of success against invasion, and this force will be needed at once. To make it efficient it must be given its proper quota of field artillery. To do this, this artillery must be on hand, for it cannot be supplied after war has been started."

What Germany with its many submarines of the most modern type could do to American shipping, not to speak of American naval vessels, is easily conjectured. Germany has actually built submarines which could cruise across the Atlantic; and those which cannot attain that great distance can be carried aboard vessels and convoyed by warships.

The American handicap looms up also in the face of a poorly organized and diminutive aerial squadron. Range finding on land now is done almost exclusively by means of aeroplanes and dirigibles. The Germans have developed this factor in warfare to a high degree of efficiency—the United States has neglected it.

Is it sound reasoning to believe that W. J. Bryan's "citizen soldiery" could withstand an invasion by Germany when the odds are so heavy against them?

GARDENS were to the fore last week. The Garden club, which met on Monday evening at Mrs. Hugh McBirney's Lake Forest residence, and the garden fête in the well known Winnetka gardens on Tuesday afternoon, gave the horticultural caste to the semester.

The first named occasion was a gala event for the club, as it was an evening affair, to which the members brought their husbands—that is, those members did whose husbands were well in hand. While American business men, as a rule, admire an achieved garden, the majority of them are not so much interested in the process of making it. But those present on Monday evening listened with much interest to Mr. Pyle, the great authority on roses, discourse on the queen of flowers and show pictures of all kinds of roses in all kinds of climates.

After the talk the company adjourned to Mrs. McBirney's rose terraces, which were a dream of beauty. Nowhere on the north shore have architecture and gardening been more successfully combined. From the house one steps out on to a delightful, breezy loggia, its pillars, stone and plaster finish, tiled floors, and unusual size justify the Italian nomenclature.

From the loggia one passes to the rose terraces, one a few steps lower than the other. A long, narrow stone rimmed pool traverses the center of each terrace, the upper pool trickling into the lower one. Fine sprays arch the pools, shooting out from the inner rims and falling softly back again into the water just blurring the mirroring surfaces.

Along each side of the pools lie the rose gardens where a stone pathway zigzags with matehmatical precision between the rose trees, each trimmed up to its spreading, blooming top.

What does it recall to you? If you have been there or seen pictures of it you will instantly think of the Generaliffe gardens at Granada. The second terrace is bounded on the east end by a low wall built in a semi-circle, with some bubbling wall fountains, a stone seat, and the bronze bust of a Roman emperor—the Romans were great gardeners. More paths and other beds of roses and an enclosing wall complete this enchanting example of garden architecture. A Spanish looking gate to the south opens onto a broad, green, close clipped lawn. A wrought iron grill gate to the north of the same terrace gives admittance to a walled in, flower grown enclosure.

On Tuesday evening tall lanterns were placed the lengths of the pools, their lights made golden by the radiant white moonlight that flooded the landscape that evening. Roses, moonlight, glimmering pools, fragrant, though chilly, air—the garden club was more than justified in its self-appointed task of awakening and fostering the love of this sanest, most elevating of hobbies.

There were present that evening Mr. and Mrs. Louis Laflin, just returned from their winter in Princeton; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Peabody, and Mr. and Mrs. William Scott.

The Winnetka garden fête on Tuesday afternoon, under the direction of Miss Harriot Houghteling, was a great success, both socially and financially. Nearly 500 people flocked to the scene, coming from Chicago, Lake Forest, Wheaton, and intervening places. The girls of Girton school gave Percy MacKaye's bird masque, "Sanctuary." Fruit punch, tea, sandwiches, and cakes were served in adjacent gardens.

The flowers and vistas of the quartet of gardens never looked fairer than they did that day, but Miss Houghteling and the women on the committee of the Providence Day nursery (which benefited by the entertainment) reckoned without one host of the occasion—a host of the most venemous mosquitoes that ever attacked a benevolently inclined company. "Oh, for a Gorgas!" sighed the sufferers that day.

Frank Houghteling and his assisting cohorts passed around burning incense sticks and the pungent, not unpleasant odor of pennyroyal pervaded the air, the pennyroyal having been lavishly sprinkled on the grass.

The event netted about $800 for the nursery.

The baseball match between the Saddle and Cycle and the Onwentsia players, which was billed for yesterday on the Onwentsia horse show grounds, was postponed to July 10. The affair is planned to help raise funds to aid in the summer support of Arden Shore open air camp. This camp has been run all winter as a home for convalescent men and boys, the only one of its kind in this part of the world, and, according to the United Charities, one of Chicago's most helpful institutions. By the end of this month the men and boys will be turned out and their places taken by the summer colony of women and children.

Arden Shore is the pet charity of the north shore communities, each one of which has a local committee devoted to raising money and other contributions, such as food, clothing, and literature for this attractive enterprise.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Isabelle McBirney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney, to Henry B. Stimson of New York was a great surprice to her many friends. Miss McBirney first met Mr. Stimson here in April at a dinner given for him at the University club. Since that time she has been in the east, first at Hot Springs, Va., with her parents and later at Rye, N. Y., with her sister, Mrs. Joseph Ryerson, so it was a case of swift courtship away from home and beyond the reach of interested and observing friends.

Mr. Stimson lives in New York, is a Yale man and a lawyer. He is tall and good looking.

Miss McBirney is still in the east, but will return to Lake Forest by July 8. The marriage will take place in October. The young couple will live in New York.

Miss McBirney will be missed in many circles, but by none more than the group of Lake Forest Players. She was one of the best and most thoroughly competent members of that illustrious troupe, having made hits in many different rôles.

Friday night and last night the Lake Forest Players gave two plays at the Aldis playhouse, "The Four Flushes," by Cleves Kinkead, and J. M. Synge's "Riders to the Sea." Last night's performance was in honor of the Society of Midland Authors, who had been the guests for the earlier part of the day of the society's president, Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor.

All those who worked for and contributed to the Lafayette ambulance which was built last spring under the supervision of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. Ogden Armour, Mrs. C. M. Eddy, and Roy McWilliams, will be interested to know that it has arrived safely at its destination and is now running between the French trenches and Mrs. Borden Turner's flying field hospital, ten miles in the rear of the Eighth French army corps.

She is for the moment established at Odinkerke, ten miles east of Dunkirk. Her twenty portable houses have been set up and the whole undertaking is in full operation under her entire charge. It is a unique, notable enterprise, designed and carried out with such spirit, intrepidity, and ability as to make one proud that Mrs. Turner is a native born Chicagoan.

Her brother, John Borden, is having built for her in Chicago, an electric motor which will provide electric lights for her whole hospital settlement. He hopes to ship this to her soon. It will be of immense service, as it will be as mobile as the hospital. Wherever they go, as soon as the houses are set up they will be connected with this motor and equipped with that greatest luxury in a field hospital—good lights.

Although they have a house at Lake Geneva, Wis., the John Bordens are still lingering in town and form part of the north side colony which is keeping the Casino and the Saddle and Cycle clubs gay.

At the former club the recently finished tennis courts are in daily use. Among those who patronize them are the Honoré Palmers, the Roy McWilliamses, the Jack Winterbothams, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis, the Harris Brewers, and Miss Agnes Street.

The solitary steward left at the Casino—for the club is really closed for the summer—serves afternoon tea there for thirsty members, and the town bound who belong to the club are glad it is not tight shut.

A new small dining room is to be added to the Casino this summer at its southwest corner. This will be a joy to the givers of little dinners on off nights who did not like the vast echoing, empty spaces of the big dining and dance hall—a delightful place for big affairs, but not suited to the "diner intime," which it is often pleasant and convenient to give.

The Honoré Palmers will join the large summer colony at Lake Forest this summer, having taken a house there for the season, but for the present, like the Bordens, the McWilliamses, and others, they are in no hurry to leave the cheerful precincts of town. Certainly the weather has enlisted under Chicago's banner to make city dewellers exult. But, wait! The turn of the country people comes next.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams are going east this coming week, but they are not yet decided whether or not they will sail for France and their beloved villa at Bidar, near Biarritz. German submarines detract from the allurements of the ocean trip, but their white house on the cliffs by the sea calls them, and they know that work of a fearfully interesting nature among the French wounded at Biarritz awaits them.

Miss Helen Dudley, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Dudley, is planning to return to her self-appointed task in military hospitals in northern France. She has been studying surgical nursing this winter and will probably soon sail with Mrs. Gordon Selfridge and the Misses Selfridge.

Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock there will be a meeting of the Serbian agricultural relief committee at the Virginia hotel, when Miss Helen Lozanitch of Serbia will speak. Mrs. Hamilton McCormick will preside.

An interesting feature of the wedding of Miss Amalia Pause, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Pause of 828 Wilson avenue, Edgewater, to Dr. Henry Robert Taecher, which takes place on Wednesday, will be the fact that the Rev. Rudolph John, who will read the service, also officiated at the wedding of the bride's parents. Miss Clara Pause will serve her sister as maid of honor and Dr. C. L. Bertram will be best man. The ceremony will be read at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. At home cards have been issued for 4809 Kenmore avenue after Sept. 1.

The engagement is announced of Miss Dorothy Beegle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Beegle of 164 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park, to Alan Freer Sharpe, son of C. A. Sharpe of 220 North Euclid avenue. Miss Beegle served as bridesmaid recently at the wedding of Miss Grace Hill to Warren Scoville Corning.

The marriage of Miss Kathryn Theresa McMahon, daughter of Mrs. Anna McMahon of 5648 Winthrop avenue, to William Joseph Quinlan, son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Quinlan of 6350 Winthrop avenue, will take place at St. Ignatius' church next Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. The bride and groom will be attended by Miss Marguerite McMahon and John Perry Quinlan. Richard Fife, James Hanson, Bert O'Grady, and Robert McMahon will act as ushers.

WEDDINGS.

Mr. and Mrs. Solomon Greenhut of Escanaba, Mich., announce the marriage of their daughter, Marguerite, to Dr. Melville B. Fischer of Washington, D. C., which took place Wednesday evening in Washington. Miss Greenhut has frequently visited in Chicago at the residence of her aunt, Mrs. Samuel Greenhut of 4411 Berkeley avenue.

The marriage of Miss Helen Keefe, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Eucherius Keefe of 3971 Ellis avenue, to George Alfred Seguin took place at Holy Angels church Tuesday evening.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. LaRoy of 5231 Winthrop avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Evelyn, to Harold E. Watson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Watson of 6249 Winthrop avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Ormsbee of 218 East Fifty-sixth street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Alice Katherine, to Earl R. Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Green of 5440 Indiana avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Brower of Lexington, Ky., announce the engagement of their daughter, Eunice, to Rutherford O. Ainslie, son of Mrs. Samuel S. Ainslie of Oak Park.

Mrs. J. R. Embree of 1910 Orrington avenue, Evanston, announce the engagement of her daughter, Mary H., to B. Frank Lewis, Jr., of Wilmette.

Mr. and Mrs. Isidore Weil of 736 Buena avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Rosaline D., to Harry N. Misch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman R. Misch of 5400 South Michigan avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Dolph of 4730 Ingleside avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Phyllis Margaret Patterson, to Harold L. Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Warner Brown of 5229 Greenwood avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Lobdell of 3958 Ellis avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth Lamson Lobdell, to Ralph Newberry Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Gardner of 4803 Greenwood avenue. The marriage will take place in the fall.

Mrs. Eunice M. Lindsay of 5548 Blackstone avenue announces the engagement of her sister, Mary Lu Wetmere, to Joseph Adamsen of Philadelphia.

FUTURE EVENTS.

The annual charity ball, which is given for the benefit of the Chicago Lying-In hospital by the woman's auxiliary, will take place on Dec. 17 at the First Regiment armory. The feature of the ball this year will be a brilliant innovation. It will be known as a "bull fight ball," and the armory is to be transformed into an arena, giving a splendid chance to decorators and designers. The costumes are to be Spanish, and the vivid colors of the Argentine will be in evidence. The ball committee includes Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank as general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Joseph Fish, Mrs. Arthur Orr Jr., Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. William Odell, Mrs. Charles Dewey, Mrs. Robert H. McCormick, and Mrs. William Scriven.

A benefit sale for the woman's exchange is announced for Wednesday, on the grounds adjoining Mrs. James Ward Thorne's home in Lake Forest. Mrs. Thorne will be assisted by Miss Grace Dixon, Mrs. Joseph Gunsaulus, Mrs. John W. Gary, Mrs. Benjamin C. Allin, Mrs. Philip Doane, Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter, Mrs. Edward I. Cudahy, Mrs. Donald R. Wegg, Mrs. Hathaway Watson, Mrs. E. B. Butler, Mrs. William G. Sage, Mrs. George Lytton, Mrs. Robert Dunham, and Mrs. E. I. Pierce.

There will be two big polo matches on July 4, one at Wheaton between the Wheaton team, of which James L. Stack is captain, and the Dayton, O., team, and a match at the Onwentsia club. At Onwentsia three teams made up of local men will compete for the Swift cups.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Skinner Willing and their children have gone east for the remainder of the summer. They, as usual, will spend some time in Virginia, where they last year acquired an estate, and later they will go to Jefferson, N. H., where they annually spend several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Poole and their children, who have been east for several weeks, have returned to their Lake Forest home. Mrs. Poole was a member of the wedding party of Mrs. Thompson Buchanan, who formerly was Miss Katharine Winterbotham.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Childs of Lake Forest will go east this week to spend the remainder of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Borland of 2022 Prairie avenue have been passing a few days in Lake Forest with Mrs. Borland's mother, Mrs. Hiram R. McCullough.

Mrs. W. W. Kimball is home from her eastern visit.

Mrs. John Alden Carpenter is visiting in Vermont for six weeks.

Mrs. Samuel T. Chase and her children of 3204 Sheridan road have gone to Miramar, near Santa Barbara, Cal., where they have taken a bungalow for the rest of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. John C. Black expect to go to the White mountains and Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Gurley and their daughter are regular members of the summer colony at Bretton Woods each summer.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Beale have gone for a week's fishing trip to Coleman lake. They probably will remain in Chicago during the summer, making short trips in various directions.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Warner and their children of Lake Forest have been camping for several weeks in northern Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dewey, who recently built a handsome new home in Lake Forest, have gone east.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pirie of Lake Forest expect to go east this week to spend the remainder of the season at one of the seaside resorts.

Mrs. George M. Pullman will close her house at 1729 Prairie avenue and go east today for the remainder of the summer. Her house at Elberson, N. J., is being put in readiness for her. Mrs. Pullman spent most of the winter in California.

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Forgan will spend most of the summer in Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Durand of Lake Forest will go to Vermont for the remainder of the summer, stopping en route for the commencement exercises at Amherst college, of which Mr. Durant is an alumnus.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Dewey, who spent the winter and spring at the Blackstone hotel, have leased the apartment in the Raymond on Lincoln parkway, which was formerly occupied by the late Mrs. Graeme Stewart and Miss Mercedes Stewart. Mr. and Mrs. Dewey will spend the summer at Magnolia, Mass., where they have taken a house.

Mrs. Elisha P. Whitehead and her daughter, Miss Virginia Whitehead, have opened their residence at Pittsfield, Mass., for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. West are recent arrivals there, where they have a summer place, and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Salisbury are settled at their estate for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge Byron Fulks of 1360 East Forty-seventh place, entertained at dinner Tuesday evening in honor of their guest, Dr. Evelyn Bush of Louisville, Ky. Mrs. Fulks has recently returned from a six weeks' visit at her home, California, Mo., and with friends in St. Louis.

Dr. and Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson of 999 Lake Shore drive will leave early in July for California, together with Mrs. Ryerson's mother, Mrs. David Hamilton, and will be gone much of the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Reynolds, the latter formerly Miss Mary Scudder of St. Louis, have leased the Clifford W. Barnes house in Lake Forest for the summer.

Mrs. Charles W. Dempster and her son, Wesley Dempster, of 1318 Astor street have gone to California with Mrs. James F. Gillette of the Virginia to remain until September. In their absence Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Dempster will occupy the Astor street home.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Jewett Johnson have taken the Corning Kenly house at Lake Forest for the summer.

Dr. and Mrs. Casey Wood have opened their house in Winnetka and will spend the summer there. Their niece, Miss Marjorie Fyfe, who recently graduated from Bryn Mawr college, is with them.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Cochran Armour of Evanston entertain at dinner tomorrow evening for the bridal party of their daughter, Miss Margaret Armour, whose marriage to Seymour Morris Jr. takes place on Wednesday.

Dr. and Mrs. John A. McGill, 4938 Drexel boulevard, motored Tuesday to Lafayette, Ind., on their way to Indianapolis to spend a week with their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Fickinger.

Mrs. Laurence Armour's young sister, Miss Mary Withers of Kansas City, is visiting in Lake Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. James O. Heyworth will go east for July and August.

YOU NEED

SULZERS BRAN BREAD

ON the hot days of summer it is especially necessary to eat food that is easily digested and to keep the system free from impurities. That is why, whether you have realized it or not, you positively NEED SULZER'S BRAN BREAD.

Since it is made of whole wheat flour, it is a highly nourishing food. In fact a few buttered slices with coffee, tea or milk make a splendid breakfast or lunch.

In addition it aids in the digestion of everything else eaten and fairly scours out the intestines, relieving the system of waste matter without the least griping or violence.

Eating Sulzer's Bran Bread Soon Becomes a Habit—the Most Beneficial Habit You Can Possibly Form.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Although the wedding of Miss Mary L. Duke and Anthony J. Drexel Biddle took place several days ago, it is still the chief topic of interest in fashionable circles. Everybody, it would seem, who is not getting divorced is at present getting married, but no couple has had a wedding ceremony and attendant celebrations to compare in splendor with that of these young people, whose combined fortunes aggregate almost a hundred millions.

As is known, this union is but part of a double romance, the engagement in which was announced when the brother of the bride was married in April to the sister of the bridegroom. Society, instead of wearying of this continued story, seemed to become more enthusiastically interested and manifested their interest with rich gifts. The wedding presents are said to represent an expenditure of over $300,000.

The wedding took place at Duke Farms, the country estate of the bride's uncle, James B. Duke, in New Jersey. If he had been arranging for this event for years he could not have provided a more fairylike wedding scene for his blooming young niece. The place comprises thousands of acres of fair country, once level and unornamented, but now dotted appropriately with artificial lakes and hills.

As Oscar Wilde has mentioned, art is such an improvement over nature, and the latter keeps borrowing from it in the matter of sunsets and other displays. Nature on this estate gave art a free hand by not interfering with any natural scenery, with the result that all of the lakes and the dells have been placed, not haphazard as in the far west, but where they ought to be. They are, furthermore, reinforced with myriads of electric fountains, all of which were in ecstatic play on the day of the wedding. Some of them spurted their water for sixty feet into the air.

Ordinarily the public has the freedom of the Duke estates on certain days of the week, and the wedding day would have been one of them. A public highway runs through the place, and although Mr. Duke took no measures to insure privacy the local sheriff closed the park to the public. "It seemed only just to Mr. Duke," he said, "that he should on such a day have the complete privacy of his estate. So the town council of Somerville decided to close the highway." To enforce strict privacy the sheriff detailed fourteen special deputies, mounted for the occasion. They, in brass buttons, patrolled thirty-five miles of roadway. The associate of the sheriff is the superintendent of the Duke farms, and is each year sworn in as a deputy sheriff.

Special trains ran from New York and Philadelphia, and for their accommodation an improvised station, covered with wild flowers, was reared. Automobiles carried them to the house, a mile distant.

This magnificent edifice contains a vast central hall, cut through two stories and run round with a balcony. One side of it is glass, overlooking the distant town, and this was screened with palms. They formed a background for roses and almost every known summer flower, which formed into an altar, at the foot of which rested a prié-dieu. Here the ceremony was performed. The bridal couple walked to it through an aisle of tall Easter lilies to the air, faintly suggested by the orchestra, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," and when they walked away as man and wife they did not turn in their footsteps, but pursued a flower strewn course straight ahead of them to the hall where the reception was held. There was a symbolical significance in the direction; it means that they expect to walk straight ahead through a flower strewn path of life and never in their married years to retrace their footsteps.

The bride was dressed in satin clouded in white tulle. Her wedding veil of tulle fell to the bottom of her long train of cloth of silver. The design of the bridesmaids' costumes was singularly lovely. They were of shell pink taffeta, veiled in paler pink tulle. Each girl wore a highly contrasting sash of Belgian blue velvet. Each of them wore a flat Leghorn hat with a pink rose in front, and with long streamers of Belgian blue velvet.

It is said that no other bride in years has received such gifts. One of them was a pearl necklace valued at $75,000, given by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin N. Duke, parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. James B Duke, at whose house the ceremony took place, presented the bride with a corsage piece worth $75,000. Mr. and Mrs. Drexel Biddle gave the couple a silver service valued at $10 000. The bridegroom gave the bride a diamond bracelet said to have cost $30,000, and Mrs. and Mrs. Anger B. Duke gave her a platinum bag, studded with sapphires and diamonds. Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury gave her a diamond and sapphire bag exactly like the one which they gave a few weeks ago to the other bride in this double romance, who is now this young woman's sister-in-law.

Mr. Fish is the youngest child of the family. He was graduated from Harvard in 1908. Miss Wiborg is one of three daughters. Her parents' residence is just off Fifth avenue in Forty-fifth street. She is now with them at their country estate on Long Island. She finished her education in London and returned here to live in 1913.

Why So Many Women Give Our Corset Store the Preference

Third Floor—Center

is a question quickly answered. It is because of our fitting service. You really cannot appreciate its true importance unless you have tried it. Each of our corsetieres is an expert, carefully trained in the latest hygienic fitting methods. Why not have them help you select your corset? Then you may depend upon it that the fit will be perfect, the lines of your figure brought to a perfection they've never before had, and that you will also be comfortable. We can say this consistently, because our corsetieres have at their command an R. & G. model in a style exactly suited to your figure. For this unexcelled fitting service no extra charge is made.

R. & G. Lace Front Corsets

show the correct style trend—a corset is just like a tailored coat, its beauty lies in the way it is cut. That is the reason the R. & G. lace front corsets are so popular. They are built to fit your figure. They are supple, easy, graceful and cling to your form in a most pleasing, comfortable manner.

The R. & G. lace front corset, illustrated, is exceptionally popular with medium and plump figures. The bust is full and medium high, the skirt is quite long, the boning is so placed that the corset sits lightly on the figure and gives no undue pressure. It can easily be worn by those who are quite sensitive to the average corset. This model is built along healthful lines, supporting every organ in its natural position. The lacing over the thighs gives spread to the figure when seated. Sizes to 30, at.................. $5

Another R. & G. lace front corset that is to be worn with the dancing frock gives perfect freedom above the waist. This model will appeal to misses and slender women. It does not restrict the wearer and her movements. The skirt is long, not extreme, with a wide rubber band across the back at bottom which curves in and under, no fear of the edge showing through a sheer gown. Sizes to 30, at.............................. $2

MISS MARIE KING
MISS MARGARET SACKLEY

MISS GERTRUDE HUBERT

MISS GEORGIA LOY

Efforts of a group of young women who had charge of the garden fête at the Catholic Social center last week raised a large sum for the work of the center. Among the young women who took part were Miss Margaret Sackley, Miss Brigid T. McGuire, and Miss Marie King. Miss Georgia Loy and Miss Gertrude Hubert will be flower girls at the benefit of the woman's auxiliary of the Englewood hospital tomorrow night at the Midway Gardens.

By Inez Travers.

A NEW idea in clubs has been started by a number of women in Woodlawn and Hyde Park which promises to be a boon to vacationless families and has already proved successful. It is called the Woman's Fellowship club and is to provide vacations not only for poor children, as so many other clubs are doing, but also for their tired mothers.

It is the idea of the club members that it is not good to part the mothers and the children, because aside from the fact that the mothers need the vacations as well as the children, they think it is not fair to deprive them of the pleasure of seeing the children enjoy themselves. It is often the first time that many of them have had a chance to go to the country in their short lives and their joy in the out of doors is keen.

The funds for this enterprise the club will raise at private card parties for its benefit. One of these was given at the Del Prado hotel last Tuesday night. It was the first appeal and nearly $200 was realized. The rest of the entertainments which will be given during the summer will be at the houses of the members and given by them individually for the benefit of the fund.

The circumstance which makes the whole enterprise possible is that one of the members has a large farm in Michigan which she has given over to the use of the club's beneficiaries for the summer. The place is large enough to accommodate twelve or fourteen at a time and the owner of the farm herself will act as superintendent. Most of the visitors will stay at least two weeks. In cases where the mother or the child is ill they will be kept on longer.

Of course the expenses for food and accessories will be defrayed by the club, and the railroad fares, it is hoped, will be donated by friends of the club or the railroads.

Clothing, too, will have to be furnished for many of the children, but the club members, who have had the project in view for some time, have foreseen this necessity and provided for it. They have saved all clothing belonging to their own children, had it cleaned and mended, and will deliver it to the little visitors at the Michigan farm. Many articles of clothing have also been given by friends.

The officers of the new Woman's Fellowship club are as follows: Mrs. M. Frank Ryan, president; Mrs. Frank J. McAdams, first vice president; Mrs. William J. Plunkett, second vice president; Mrs. Thomas P. Barry, third vice president; Miss Mary Sepple, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles J. McCarthy, corresponding secretary; Miss Anna Danne, financial secretary; Mrs. A. J. Selzer, treasurer.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS.

A roof garden for poor children and convalescents will be established at the Englewood hospital with the proceeds of the benefit to be given tomorrow evening at Midway Gardens by the woman's auxiliary of the hospital. One feature of the benefit will be the display and sale of drawings, etchings, paintings, and statuettes, gifts of a number of Chicago artists. Among others are listed a dry point etching by Joseph Pierre Nuyttens, the Belgian artist; a colorful view by Carl Werntz of the Academy of Fine Arts; a bust by Giorgio Renault, a water color impression of Norma Brandt by Robert Eskridge, a cast by Mlle. de Coriche, and a statuette by Lorado Taft. The artists' exhibit will be in charge of Mrs. H. C. Dickinson and a large group of young women. A lightning sketch booth will be manned by a number of Chicago artists, who will draw visitors at a low rate, the money to go to the fund. A donation booth will offer useful articles for sale. There will be a small battalion of pretty girls selling flowers and sweets. Among those working at the heads of active committees are Mrs. Edgar James, president of the auxiliary; Mmes. Frank Banister, A. W. Morton, H. L. McCracken, Ervin A. Rice, H. C. Dickinson, H. A Morgan, William Cunningham, John Watters, Charles Schultz, T. W. Hibbard, E. L. Robinson, John G. Campbell, Mary Crissey, and C. J. Davis.

MORRISON Photo

MISS BRIGID T. McGUIRE

On account of the street car strike the entertainment of the O. E. S. club was postponed and will take place tomorrow at 8 p. m. in room 1302 Masonic temple.

There will be a ward leaders' luncheon of the Woman's City club tomorrow at the Brownleigh club, sixteenth floor of the Stevens building, at 12:30 p. m. Shortly after 1 o'clock the party will leave by street car for the municipal sanitarium.

Ella La Forge Murphy, Marian Barry, and Mrs. Charles Orchard will give a musical on Thursday for the benefit of the Mothers' Relief association. It will be held at 11 a. m. at 5000 Dorchester avenue.

This afternoon at 3:30 o'clock the National Federation of Alumnæ of the Sisters of Charity, B. V. M., will hold a reception and tea for the graduating classes of 1915 in the red room of the Hotel La Salle. The following program will be presented:

Address of welcome to the graduating classes, Miss Margaret O'Connor, national president.
Vocal solo, Miss Marie O'Connor.
Reading, Miss Josephine McGarry.
Harp solo, Miss Dorothea Doran.
Vocal solo, Miss May Hildreth.
Miss Mary Hollitor and Mrs. Charles V. Barrett, accompanists.
Address, the Rev. Francis X. McCabe, president De Paul university.
Federation song, the alumnæ.

Owing to the many requests that have been received from students in regard to the Vocational Art day at the Panama-Pacific exposition in July under the auspices of the National Vocational Art and Industrial federation, there will be an open meeting at the Auditorium hotel tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. to discuss the matter. Stories of the early days in the west and many actual occurrences that have never been recorded in history will be told. Several groups of high school students are preparing to accompany the Chicago delegates for the purpose of studying the country as well as the two expositions. Mrs. Robert L. McCall, Mrs. Helen St. Rayner, Mrs. James Henry Harris, Mrs. Page Waller Eaton, Dr. Frances Dickinson, and Mrs. T. Vernette Morse will conduct the meeting.

The one hundred and thirty-ninth anniversary of America's "Day of Deliverance" will be celebrated by the Midwest chapter of the Alden Kindred of America, Independence day, Monday, July 5, at the home of E. C. Sears at La Grange. The celebration will be in the nature of a picnic or family reunion, the organization being composed of descendants of John and Priscilla Alden, and it will be the third annual event of its kind given by this organization. The speaker of the day, the Rev. Francis L. Hayes, will deliver the patriotic address; the Declaration of Independence will be read by Mrs. Charles B. Stearns. Emmons J. Alden will deliver the address of welcome, and Miss Eleanor Libby will conduct the patriotic exercises, which will include games and dances such as were enjoyed by their Puritan ancestors. Frank A. Alden, general secretary, 210 South Sacramento boulevard, is in charge of the transportation on the "Alden special train," which will leave the Union depot at 9:47 a. m.

The Chicago Kindergarten institute will celebrate its twenty-first anniversary by a reunion of graduates today and tomorrow. This afternoon tea will be served in Gertrude house and later at the residence of Mrs. John R. Lindgren in Evanston, Mrs. Ralph Fletcher Seymour with the hostess will give a musical program to the guests. Tomorrow will be devoted to matters of educational interest and business discussion concerning endowment plans of the institute. The reunion will close with a banquet at the Hotel La Salle tomorrow evening. Mrs. Grace Fairbank Burr of Springfield, Mass., is to be toastmistress. Among the speakers are Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin, president of the Chicago Kindergarten Institute society; Miss Mary McDowell of Chicago University settlement; Miss Harriet Vittum of Northwestern University settlement; Mrs. Edward Bradley of Allendale farm, Lake Villa, Ill.; Miss Flora J. Cooke, Miss Julia M. Wheeler, Prof. Nathaniel Butler, William L. Tomlins, and Prof. William D. MacClintock. It is expected that over three hundred will attend the banquet.

One of the most popular of all the ancient customs of Ireland, known as "Bonfire night," will be observed at Gaelic park, Forty-seventh street and California avenue, this evening. This is said to be the first revival in America of this popular Irish and Scottish custom which antedates Christianity in both countries. The principal speakers will be Judge John P. McGoorty, the Very Rev. John Webster Melody of the Catholic university, Washington, D. C., and the Rev. J. K. Fielding, president of the Gaelic Park Athletic club, under whose auspices the celebration will be held. The event will be featured by music, songs, and old time Irish dances which will be enacted around the "bonfire" by representatives of the thirty-two counties of Ireland in ancient costume.

SOUTH SIDE CLUBS.

The board of directors of the Children's South Side Free dispensary will give a dance for the benefit of the dispensary at the Chicago Beach hotel on Wednesday evening. Miss Josephine Harmon and her professional dancing partner will give feature dances during the evening.

NORTH SIDE CLUBS.

At the annual meeting of the Minerva club the following officers were elected: Mrs. Ella Barr Nash, president; Mrs. Edith Phillips Keuper, vice president; Mrs. Katharine Mayer Walther, recording secretary; Mrs. Margarite McCollon Tuttle, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Grace Irrmann Hagberg, treasurer; Mrs. May Borley Unthank, librarian. Delegates to state federation, Miss Sargent, and Mrs. Unthank; delegates to national federation, Mmes. Nash and Mayes.

The personal service committee of the Chicago Woman's Aid will hold its seventh annual picnic on Tuesday at 11 o'clock, at the Sixtieth street entrance of Washington park. Two hundred west side children will be entertained. Mrs. Emanuel Buxbaum of 4418 Michigan avenue is the chairman of this committee.

At the annual meeting of the West North Edgewater Improvement association the following officers were elected to serve the coming year: President, F. W. Abele; vice president, Miss Charlotte Schwartz; secretary, P. F. Combiths; treasurer, Joseph A. Regan. The district covered by this association includes the territory in North Edgewater, between Elmdale and Devon avenues on the north and Broadway and Clark street on the west. The association was organized in 1906 and has given good service in neighborhood improvement during the last eight years.

WEST SIDE CLUBS.

SUBURBAN CLUBS.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Woman's Catholic club of Wilmette the following board of managers for 1915-'16 was selected: President, Mrs. Edward Kirchberg; vice president, Mrs. J. B. Watt; treasurer, Mrs. E. J. Schager; recording secretary, Mrs. Mary Dolan; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Arthur McKenna; spiritual director, the Rev. T. V. Shannon. Directors, Mrs. J. H. Verhalen, Mrs. Helen Kelly, Mrs. Phil Grau, Mrs. H. M. Van Hoesen, Mrs. A. Lamkey, Mrs. P. J. Cunneen, Mrs. Charles Barton, Mrs. George Fouts, and Mrs. Carl Schroeder. ART

"INSPIRATION" by KATHLEEN ROBINSON

By Anne Ellis.

YOU and I have read a deal of neat literature about the dreams and the enthusiasm of youth. We have gone through pages about its psychology, we have talked about it, and mayhap we remember our own experiences, but if we want to see its tangible manifestation we have but to visit the students' exhibit at the Art institute.

There youth shines through the canvas and the paper as sunlight through a white tarleton curtain. There we can see its vividness, its intensity, its intolerance, its awkward immaturity, and the wonder of its idealism.

It is remarkable that though the masters have made an unmistakable impress on the plastic methods of the pupils, self-expression in most cases is clamorous. The works of the students, rendered transparent by the light of the imagination, are the most hopefully beautiful things it has ever been my portion to see.

Opaquely considered, they are a splendid collection of the results of a year of conscientious effort to do creative labor. Some of them show more ardor than talent, it is true; some of them are strikingly arrestive, some of them fledgeling flights that must have surprised and delighted the preceptors.

The work in the department of design is especially efficient and original; that of the atelier of Mr. Wilson shows a remarkably poetic influence. As a whole, the exhibit is one to engender civic pride.

"Inspiration," by Kathleen Robinson, has been given to the Art institute by the Mrs. Milward Adams memorial committee. It is a worthy acquisition and will be properly set up in the next week. It is in marble and exquisitely transparent. Miss Robinson is a Chicago sculptor.

A number of Chicago Greeks, headed by the Greek consul, Dr. N. Salopoulas, contemplate purchasing the lately completed statue of the Greek dancer Kanellos, by Emil R. Zettler. The statue is for presentation to the king and queen of Greece. It is the present intention of the purchasers to have the work reproduced in bronze, in which case two casts will be made one for the king and queen and the other to be presented to the municipal art commission of Chicago.

Royal Olive Shampoo Powder

Made after the formula of Gio. Gregorio di Autonio, Genoa, Italy.

American women are beginning to realize the folly and harmful results of using injurious alkalis in hair washing, and are also finding out what wonderful results are secured by weekly or twice-weekly use of

ROYAL OLIVE OLIVA REGALIS SHAMPOO POWDER
85 PER CENT—PURE OLIVE OIL
Trade Mark Reg. U. S. Pat. Office.
TRANSFORMED INTO A SOLUABLE POWDER

ROYAL OLIVE—85 per cent pure Olive Oil—cleanses perfectly—leaves the hair soft and lustrous—the scalp free from dandruff—comfortable.

Its efficiency is in its Purity. Unlike most soaps and prepared chemical products, it does not dissolve and destroy the natural oil that is absolutely necessary to keep hair and scalp in good condition.

Oily Hair and Scalp

is caused by the use of hard soaps containing caustic soda — soft soaps containing caustic potash—sal soda—baking soda — saleratus — salts of tartar—borax and ammonia. These are alkaline salts that dissolve the natural oils. Alcohol has the same effect. Dry, unmanageable hair follows their use.

As a result, Nature "works overtime" to provide a fresh supply of oil, and produces an excess.

Continued use of shampoo agents containing these harmful alkalis causes lusterless hair, falling out, split ends, dandruff, baldness.

Keep Hair and Scalp Clean

The head should be washed as frequently as the body. People, otherwise immaculate, frequently neglect the hair and scalp. The pores and oil ducts must be kept open—not with preparations that dissolve and remove the natural oil, but with a pure, cleansing shampoo. ROYAL OLIVE will cleanse perfectly, removing excess oil. After shampooing, your hair will dry quickly and beautifully. ROYAL OLIVE SHAMPOO POWDER is simple to use. Dissolve a spoonful of the powder in a pint of boiling hot water, strain it, and you have a sufficient amount for one shampoo.

TRY ROYAL OLIVE AT OUR EXPENSE

We will be glad to supply a generous sample to anyone who will write for it. Please give name and address of your druggist. Large size can, 50c. For sale by most druggists.

ASTRONOMY.

SOME SOLAR ACTIVITIES.

RECENTLY brilliant displays of the aurora borealis were observed from this latitude and at the same time disturbances of the earth's magnetic fields were noted, affecting the sending of wireless. The aurora, along with such other evidences of solar activity as are indicated by the corona, the sun spots, and the solar prominences, was long an astronomical mystery.

These mysteries are yielding to discovery reinforced by hypothesis, and the aurora is now understood to be the dissipation of corpuscles projected from the sun's carbon, their energy disappearing in luminosity in the vacuum at the pole. The sun's light was a propelling force.

THE SUN'S CORONA at TOTAL ECLIPSE

So long as the corpuscle affected has not arrived at the critical size at which it cannot be propelled by this force it is shot out into the universe. Corpuscles such as are thrown off by redhot carbon are deflected by magnetism. They start from the sun and when they enter the earth's magnetic field they are deflected from their course by the magnetic force which proceeds from pole to pole. The corpuscles are projected most numerously against the equatorial regions of the earth and their course is from there towards the poles.

Near the poles they find atmospheric conditions which correspond to a vacuum, and there they begin to give out the light of what are called cathode rays. The same effect can be produced by experiment.

The earth's magnetic field is known to be affected by sun spots and it is established that there is a relation between the sun spots and the aurora. When the aurora flares into the sky it indicates that corpuscles propelled into space in a straight line by the force of the sun's light have been caught in the earth's magnetism and sent into a vacuum, where they disappear in illumination.

The corona of the sun, seen at total eclipse, is an evidence of the sun's projection of vapors. When the vapors come into the cold of space they condense. Then they fall back toward the sun, being larger than the size which yields to the propulsion. In that case they form what are known as solar prominences. So long as they remain light enough to be propelled they constitute the corona. Some of them, remaining of a size which may be supported, stay suspended as the main body of the corona.

A SUN SPOT

The zodiacal light which is seen occasionally of a winter or spring evening is explained by this propulsion of corpuscles from the carbon of the sun, which is bombarding space with them, taking the form of the phenomena observed in the aurora, corona, prominences, and the zodiacal light.

News of the Religious World

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE celebration of the completion of the twenty years' pastorate of the Rev. Johnston Myers at the Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, will culminate today. A program and praise service was held last Wednesday evening and a reception on Friday evening.

At 11 o'clock Dr. Myers will preach an anniversary sermon. At 8 o'clock a fraternal service will be held at which Shailer Mathews, dean of the divinity school of the University of Chicago; the Rev. Frank L. Anderson, superintendent of the Baptist executive council; the Rev. Charles F. Wishart, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, and the Rev. John P. Brushingham, pastor of the South Park Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, will be the speakers.

Dr. Myers graduated from the Rochester, N. Y., theological school in 1885, and became pastor at once of the Ninth Street Baptist church in Cincinnati, O. He remained there for ten years. The membership of his church grew from 600 to 1,900 members. Social service work, such as Dr. Myers had more fully developed in his Chicago pastorate, was inaugurated while he was in Cincinnati, and has been continued by his successor.

When Dr. Myers became pastor of the Immanuel church it had 800 members. After twenty years the membership has increased to 2,500, while it is estimated that fully 1,500 some time members have moved into the residential districts, united with other churches, or have deceased.

Herein lies the special significance of the celebration of Dr. Myers' two decades of work in Chicago. The growth of the church has refuted the theory that churches must move to the residential districts in order to maintain themselves.

One of the distinctive features of Immanuel church has been the continuous serving of a breakfast to hungry men. At certain times in the severest part of the winter the church is opened at 6 o'clock in the morning and the year around it is open at 7 o'clock. Last year, between October and May, 100,000 breakfasts were given to 20,000 or more men. As high as 1,500 men have thus been fed in a single day.

As Dr. Myers makes plain in his announcements, the meals are not "beefsteak breakfasts" nor do they offer "ham and," for, as he says, such a meal would be too expensive to give as charity and would at the same time invite to laziness and idleness, but they consist simply of plenty of bread, butterine, and coffee. Such a meal appeals only to those who are really hungry and moneyless, but to them it is an inexpressible boon. A man hunting for a day's work can go farther, look brighter, feel happier, and more certainly win his object fortified by a filled stomach of even bread and coffee than he can on an empty one. Job hunters, like armies, travel on their stomachs. While comparatively few apply for anything to eat in the summer, yet the church stands ready to serve those who do come at any season of the year.

Men who come are fed without being investigated as to their "worthiness." If they become "habituals" then their cases are inquired into and if they are found to be simply "sponging" without making an effort to become self supporting they are dealt with as the individual case demands.

Another one of the helpful ministries which, as far as we know, is peculiar to the Immanuel church, is the giving to the children of a daily trip to the parks and providing for them a lunch and a competent woman to care for them and, when necessary, supervise their play.

The Rev. Johnston Myers, D. D., is pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, which concludes today the celebration of his twentieth year as pastor. The church is one of the few churches which has remained downtown and successfully carried on its work.

It is common for Sunday schools and settlements to give occasional outings. It is the practice of the daily vacation Bible schools to devote one day to a picnic in the park, but Immanuel church takes a group, numbering usually about 100, to the park every day. The children take the street cars and are furnished free car fare.

A Comfort club is provided for the young women who work in the neighborhood. The young women pay for their meals 15 cents each and are not considered objects of charity. They have an organization officered and governed by themselves. The chief function of the church is to give the comfort of quiet, roomy, and attractive surroundings. The meals are also served at cost and are of good quality.

The Immanuel church was erected under the pastorate of the Rev. George C. Lorimer, a minister with a national reputation for eloquence, and while B. F. Jacobs, also of national and international reputation, was superintendent of the Sunday school. During Dr. Myers' pastorate the great stone building was put on jack screws, moved fifty-one feet and the present commodious basement put in. The church owns 147 feet on Michigan boulevard. The property is valued at $200,000.

Dr. Myers has two assistant pastors, the Rev. James Goodman and the Rev. W. D. Holt, and two secretaries, Miss Mary Rahm and Miss Besse Witherill. Others of the staff are: Missionaries, Miss Adena Sorensen, Mrs. S. A. Parker; visiting nurse, Miss Matilda Johnson; church matron, Mrs. Eva Patton; John Nuveen is Sunday school superintendent.

There are four church branches [not branch churches] located as follows: 2700 Fifth avenue, 3720 South Halsted street, 479 West Twenty-sixth street, and Warwick hall, Forty-seventh street and Forrestville avenue. In all there are fourteen salaried workers. The church has no endowment.

The church deacons are: Jonathan Merriam, John Nuveen, G. R. Bennett, C. J. Kurtz, G. I. Gibbs, I. S. Haight, F. M. Williams, Samuel Leland, W. H. B. Stephens, Donald Dingwall, J. H. Lewis, E. G. Holmberg, J. M. Butcher, F. E. Sedgwick, G. F. Wessels, and J. J. Mogg.

The trustees are: W. H. Lyford, W. H. Sard, W. H. B. Stephens, L. K. Torbet, and O. R. Williams.

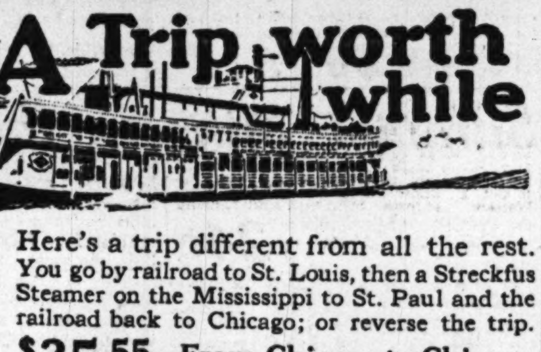
MISSISSIPPI RIVER
ST. LOUIS



A Trip worth while

Here's a trip different from all the rest. You go by railroad to St. Louis, then a Streckfus Steamer on the Mississippi to St. Paul and the railroad back to Chicago; or reverse the trip.

$35.55—From Chicago to Chicago

(Including meals and berth on steamer)

Lower fare for parties of ten or more traveling together.

Aboard a big Streckfus Steamer—the largest, fastest and safest inland river steamers in America—every mile and minute is filled with scenes and pleasures new to you—the wonderful picturesque scenery of the upper Mississippi; the jaunts ashore at many interesting places, including the giant Keokuk dam; the interesting river life; the music and dancing in the cabin; the friendly chats on deck with congenial people; the big comfortable staterooms; the splendid meals—all combine to make this

If it's rest and change, good companionship, good air, good food, summer sport, refinement with informality you are looking for, you will find them all at WAUKAZOO INN. WAUKAZOO is situated on the North Shore of Black Lake, just outside of Holland. Reached by Graham & Morton boats or Pere Marquette R. R. quickly from Chicago. Modern buildings with hot and cold running water in bedrooms and private baths. 500 acres of natural forest, boating, fishing, bathing, dancing, two cement tennis courts, golf. Excellent table supplied from our own vegetable garden and poultry yards. Uniform milk for babies. Every point looking to your comfort thought of and executed. And yet the rates are very moderate. Less expensive than living in the city. We have prepared ample illustrations and descriptive matter. Opens July 1st. Address

One interesting feature of this the most remarkable sale Chicago has ever known is that the very line which you read in this advertisement has been cut from a copy of same and pasted on the price ticket which shows the original price of the garment and the price at which it is now to be sold. Imagine the detail work of cutting out each item advertised on this page, pasting it on a card and attaching it to the garment advertised, and the goods are so displayed throughout our entire six floors that they will sell themselves as rapidly as the salespeople can make out the checks. It is the most carefully prepared sale ever known in Chicago and will be a sight well worth seeing.

NONE of our past great sales have begun to rival this one in the beauty of merchandise. Everything is up to date and highly desirable. The manufacturers have been exceedingly generous in helping us to make this the most phenomenal clearance sale Chicago has ever known. They have furnished us, practically at our own prices, large quantities of beautiful garments made up to our order from their surplus stocks of fine materials which they also desire to close out with the season. This sale will emphasize in a forceful manner the pre-eminence of Chas. A. Stevens & Bros. in women's fine apparel.

CHAS·A·STEVENS & BROS·

17 to 25 North State Street, Through to Wabash Avenue

THIS half-yearly event is this time more than a clearance of all spring merchandise. It is in addition a clearance of large quantities of the most fashionable summer apparel just made for us from the surplus stocks of materials from a number of leading manufacturers. The cold, rainy season has left more of these fine materials than usual and these values are consequently wonderful.

Stevens' Clearance Sale

That event which occurs only twice yearly, July and January, and for which increasing thousands wait each time,

Will Open Tomorrow Morning at 8 o'Clock and will arouse all Chicago with its values as it has not been aroused in years. Silks worth 75c, 85c and $1.00 at 35c per yard; Silks worth $1.50 to $1.75 at 65c per yard; Silks worth $2.00 to $3.00 at $1.25 per yard; Silk Dress Skirts worth $10.00 to $12.50 at $5.00 each; Wool Dress skirts worth $7.50 to $10.00 at $3.50 each; Fine Tailored Cloth Suits worth $22.50 to $29.50 at only $10.00 each; the most beautiful $5.00 and $7.50 Trimmed Hats at $2.50 each; $8.50 to $12.50 Trimmed Hats at $3.75 each; $10.00 to $15.00 Trimmed Hats at $5.00 each; $8.00 and $10.00 Milan Straw Untrimmed Hats at $4.95; $5.00 Panama Hats, excellent quality, at $2.95; Paradise Plumage at about half price; $5.00 and $6.00 Leghorn Shapes at only $1.95 each; $5.00, $6.00 and some $7.00 Corsets at $2.00 each; beautiful $20.00 and $25.00 Summer Dresses at $12.50 each; $15.00 and $18.50 Summer Dresses at $9.50 each; stunning $25.00 and $35.00 Coats at $14.50 each; $15.00, $18.50 and $22.50 Coats at only $9.50 each; excellent $1.00 Muslin Underwear, slightly soiled, at 65c each; several thousand pieces Muslin Underwear (assorted) worth $3.00 and $3.50 per garment at $1.95 each; $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 Gingham Dresses for Children at only 95c; $7.50, $8.50 and $10.00 Silk and Lace Waists, beautiful and fresh, at only $3.95 and $5.00 each; $2.50, $2.95 and $3.50 Lingerie Waists at only $2.00 each; $3.75 and $4.50 Silk Petticoats at only $2.50 each, and thousands of other items where there are only one or two of a kind at even more attractive values. Summer Happenings Among the Players.

By Percy Hammond.

E. H. SOTHERN will resume acting next season in what are described as "modern plays"—meaning, it is presumed, that he will therein wear long pants. His first years as a star were spent in plays of the kind—among them, "The Highest Bidder," "Lord Chumley," "The Maister of Woodbarrow," "Captain Lettarblair," and "A Way to Win a Woman." Miss Margaret Dale, who since early in 1911 has been engaged as the adventuress in "Disraeli," is to be Mr. Sothern's leading woman until next spring, when, it is planned, he will resume his place as chief associate of Miss Marlowe, who will then take up acting again in Shakspeare.

Lew Fields, after spending nine weeks rehearsing "Hands Up," abandoned the revue after two or three tryout performances in Albany, N. Y, on the very eve of a scheduled New York City premiere, for which the seats were sold for $5 apiece. Maurice and Walton, the restaurant dancers, were to have been "featured" with Mr. Fields. Indeed, they made an investment in the venture, with the thought that both might win success as players as well as dancers. Miss Walton, until she became Maurice's teammate, was a figurante in the Ziegfeld shows. Maurice and Walton were the fad until the Castles—he an unconsidered minor comedian, and she a seminary girl with a few months' experience in the chorus—unexpectedly pranced into view with an interpolated specialty in "The Sunshine Girl" in its New York run. Harry B. Smith has been engaged to rewrite Edgar Smith's "Hands Up" libretto; and it is said that the revue will be shown later, but without Mr. Fields, who is to "do pictures" with Joe Weber.

Among the rehearsed matters which caused woe in "Hands Up" was a scene showing a wedding party leaving a Roman Catholic church after the ceremony. Heading the procession were Mr. Fields, Bobby North, and Miss Fanny Brice, Odessans all!

"Peck's Bad Boy" is still being acted. That George M. Cohan acted the title part when a child is of the modern history of the play. Sam Bernard had the part when he, too, was a boy.

"One of the best plays ever written by an American" is A. H. Woods' expressed opinion of "The House of Glass," produced for tryout last week in Atlantic City. Mr. Woods is not interested in the play, which is a Cohan & Harris venture. Max Marcin wrote it. Mr. Woods at that time produced another of his plays, "See My Lawyer."

Miss Charlotte Ives, last here with Lew Fields in "The High Cost of Loving," is going to Australia to act in "Kick In," "On Trial," "Under Cover," and "Inside the Lines."

"Kick In" is called "Shell Out" in London.

D. W. Griffith's next big movie is to be called "The Mother and the Law." He has been quoted as saying that it will be on a vaster scale than even "The Birth of a Nation."

Miss Billie Burke, asked by a reporter if she planned to appear in moving pictures, replied, "I have no desire to be a lady Charlie Chaplin." Miss Emma Carus' scrapbook was fattened quite a bit recently when the newspapers printed a rumor that she was engaged to be married to Mr. Chaplin. Eddie Foy, an antic performer of renown a generation before Mr. Chaplin's birth, is to try to rival the latter in the films, taking with him the seven Foy children. The first picture will be called "The Favorite Fool." N. C. Goodwin is to act for the filming of Octave Mirabeau's "Business Is Business," a failure when acted by William H. Crane. Mr. Goodwin's venture is heralded as his first before the camera, but he was the Fagin of an "Oliver Twist" film shown all of three years ago in the La Salle. De Wolf Hopper, too, is to act for the movies. His salary is the same as Miss Mary Pickford's—$2,000 a week for fifty-two weeks.

The New York run of "Chin-Chin" will not be halted Saturday next, as was long ago planned. It is said there has been no letup in the attendance, although the extravaganza has been playing since October.

"Potash and Perlmutter" has been acted more than 500 times in London.

Justin Huntly McCarthy has written a play called "Sir Roger de Coverley."

Morton and Moore, disciples and followers of Montgomery and Stone, who tried for Something Higher two years ago in "The Tiktok Man of Oz," are going back where they are regarded as funny—to the theaters devoted to so-called burlesque.

Lawton Butt is to act again next season the part of the renegade monk in "The Garden of Allah." The spectacle is to be boomed in circus fashion in the smaller places.

"The Melting Pot," which has been on tour in the English provinces, has been withdrawn from performance by request of the foreign office, which expressed the fear that the Zangwill play might prove offensive to Russia.

Miss Louise Meyers, recalled in Chicago from last season's "Follies" and from the Gaby Deslys engagement, is to become the bride of Max Blumenthal, who may be described as a Broadway flaneur. Professionally, Miss Meyers is a protégé of Mort H. Singer.

The sequel to "Potash & Perlmutter" has undergone a change of title—from "Potash & Perlmutter in Society" to "Potash & Perlmutter, Incorporated." Roi Copper Magrue, one of the authors of "Under Cover," has been called in by Montague Glass to help out on the unfinished manuscript of the late Charles Klein.

Sir Herbert Tree is preparing a one act version of "Trilby" for use in the English music halls.

Three companies will perform next season in "Daddy Longlegs"—that headed by Miss Ruth Chatterton and Charles Waldron; one with Miss Renee Kelly and Byron Beasley; a third with Miss Frances Carson, who is not readily identifiable from the Chicago records, and George Allison, who for a time was an adored leading man of the old resident company in the Bush Temple theater.

Members of the Lambs' club are to visit Sing Sing prison, N. Y., today to give a gambol for the inmates. The players have been admonished to censor their material, that they may not fall into the error of a professional visitor of last year. Her idea of entertaining the prisoners was to sing "You're Here, and I'm Here, so What Do I Care?"

"Search Me!" is the name of a new farce to be acted July 26. The author is Augustin McHugh, who wrote "Officer 666."

Bert Clark of the cast of "Maid in America" is not an Englishman, despite the press agent. He had his training as a performer in this country, went to England, was successful there, and returned after an absence so long that he was accepted as of English nativity.

"It Pays to Advertise" will be shown on Sept. 2 at the Grand Opera house. According to present plans the theater will be closed from the end of Miss Anglin's engagement, next month, until that date. The Grand has not been closed a single week since, on March 5, 1912, it passed into the Cohan & Harris management.

Miss Cecilia Loftus has been trying out in the English provincial cities a play called "Enterprising Helen." She is in this an actress with a love story and one song. Lord Latymer wrote it. He is programed as Frances Coutts.

Sir Arthur Pinero, who has not been represented by a play of regulation length since in 1912 he finished "The Mind-the-Paint Girl," is again active, and a fresh work of his is scheduled for an early London hearing. A one act play of his, "Playgoers," was tried there two years ago, but did not impress American managers as worth importing.

Miss Julie Opp is to resume acting next season in support of Mr. Faversham in "The Hawk."

Elmer Booth, who seemed to be a good low comedian when he acted two years ago at McVicker's in support of John Barrymore in "A Thief for a Night," was killed the other day in a Los Angeles automobile accident.

Miss Elsie Janis has written a parody on Kipling's "The Vampire." Miss Laurette Taylor is reciting it at benefit performances in London.

Oliver Morosco, the untiring Californian, proposes to make three new stars next year—out of Miss Peggy O'Neil, Miss Christine Norman, and Miss Leonore Ulrich. He has several plays for each of them. Among Mr. Morosco's tentative plans for next year is a dramatization by Jack Lait of a story called "The Hollow of Her Hand."

Thus Mr. Campanini to an interviewer for Le Temps: "Opera is no longer a hybrid, but a distinct form of art. It cannot, by its very nature, ever be submitted to the processes of what you call 'realism' in the theater; but it is every day becoming a closer kin of the spoken drama. Wagner, the Verdi of 'Otello' and 'Falstaff,' Massenet, and Puccini have been looking after that end of things for many, many years. The day of the aria is done, save when there is a Melba or a Sembrich to sing for the singing's own sake. Miss Geraldine Farrar is a success as armen because she acts Carmen. You should see our Chicago audiences respond to our performances of the operas which carry out Wagner's ideas of the 'music drama.' You already know what a human being Muratore makes of Faust in the Gounod opera. Singers today must look to their acting. Only the owner of the God given voice may hope longer to be excused from competence as a player—an interpreter—and, even with the voice, he (or she) is excused only when the opera is 'Lucia,' say, or its kind."

Novel Background for the "Follies."

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—If there had been a plot in this year's "Follies" which was threatened in the first scene, Kay Laurell would have introduced it. Kay is merely one of the beautiful figurantes of the Ziegfeld entertainment, but she has the honor this year of "opening the show," appearing as a mermaid swimming idly about a Joseph Urban sea—the same Urban sea, in fact, that was introduced briefly last winter in "The Garden of Paradise."

Miss Laurell, as a mermaid, is drawn into conversation with Melville Stewart, the pilot of a submarine, and subsequently invited to return with him to the earth and consider the ways of her earth sisters, who are, according to Mr. Stewart, a curious, not to say an impossibly inconsistent, set.

But there the plot ends, as usual. When the sea is shut from view by a front drop representing "The Home of the Sun," which has a classic and not a journalistic significance, the plot is dismissed and the Messrs. Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, who doubtless were at some pains to write the story, are whistled unceremoniously down the scenic ways. In front of Apollo's garage Helen Rook sings "Hold Me in Your Loving Arms," and the game is on.

It is a different Follies this year, however. It is more a gorgeous revue than a travesty of current politics and plays. The Urban scenery furnishes an entirely novel background and is frequently so attractive in itself as quite to dwarf the Broadway comedy and vaudeville artists displayed in front of it.

For instance, there is a song called "My Zebra Lady," with the chorus in fetching gowns of black and white, but it is sung in "The Silver Forest," and not, as has been our custom for years, "at the entrance to Central park," or along the curb at Longacre square.

And perhaps the greatest shock of all is to see the comedians introduced in "The Catskill Mountains," a wonderfully attractive scene with the bright green foothills of the foreground touched with the deep red of sumac bushes that edge a canyon and border a trail leading toward snow topped mountains in the distance. To justify the hills Leon Erroll wears Rip Van Winkle whiskers and Will West, as Jennings B. Ryan, recalls past ambitions. "But now," he shouts defiantly, "I resign!" "And we accept!" calls back the orchestra, rising as one man. There is an echo of the old "Follies" when "Nut Sundae," the evangelist who saves 45,000 souls for $65,000, tarries briefly to tell Rip that in the village below he (Rip) has a son, a lusty youth of 18. "He must be a war baby," reflects Rip; "I've been asleep twenty years."

Thence through "Radiumland," in which Bernard Granville sings with the chorus in white satin against a solid background of black velvet, to the comedy novelty of the new entertainment, a "Commotion Picture." Ed Wynn, the jester, appears on the orchestra floor calling wildly for the characters in a war drama to assemble on the screen. They come, Granville as the northern hero, May Murray as the southern heroine, Bert Williams as an echo of the past, etc., and for twenty minutes Wynn directs them through the familiar burlesque rehearsal stuff. But so cleverly timed are his instructions and the actions of the characters on the screen that the fun of the affair is hilarious.

The patriotic finale is given an urban touch, too. All the warring peoples of Europe are invited to build their homes in the U. S. A., and, by way of emphasizing the invitation, a very beautiful lady in black tights swings wide two enormous gates of bronze bearing the seal of this country. In flocks the beauty chorus. There are cheers for representatives of each of the allied fighters, more cheers for the kaiser, and finally a patriotic cheer for President Wilson, represented by a lantern jawed youth wearing a conscious expression and considerable make-up.

In "A Christmas Eve Fantasy" four little Follies in four little beds are roused by four medium Follies as sprites. Then the four little Follies are visited by four big Follies as four blooming Christmas trees. Whereupon the four little Follies, in four little, pink little, thin little nighties, stand in front of the four big Follies and are surprised, when the Christmas trees are lighted, to learn that the audience can see right through the thin little, pink little nighties. So the four little Follies, simulating an embarrassment they probably have not felt for twice four little years, jump quickly back into their four little beds while the four big Follies exit incandescently.

The cleverest lyric in the new Follies is one sung by Ina Claire in an excellent imitation of Frances Starr as the heroine of "Marie Odilee," a convent novice, it may be recalled. According to the song Marie claimed to believe the time worn wheeze that babies grow on trees—" and got away with it." Bert Williams has two new songs, the best one being an account of his experiences before a bulletin board and his complete and final determination to remain "neuchal." Neither song, however, is up to his comedy standard.

The principal comedy scene shows the lobby of an apartment building, with Williams as an inattentive hallboy and Erroll an intruding alcoholic, who insists upon sleeping on the settee. There is an elaborately undressed view of an afternoon in Egypt, with slaves and ladies and pet tigers disposed about the stage in artistic profusion. Standing on a high wall at back, silhouetted to the furthermost silhouette against a bright Egyptian sky, stands Kay Laurell, wearing, one hastily decides, no more than a wrapt expression and the aid of professional martyrdom, common to the artist's model, which, it may be noted, was Miss Laurell's job before she became a Folly.

There is, however, less suggestion of a brazen attempt at nakedness in the current Follies than in any previous edition that we recall. It may be the artistic influence of Mr. Urban has been felt even in this direction, or that we have become so accustomeed to the sight of the undraped figure that it means no more to us than did the sight of legs to the London busman. It even may be that we grow careless as an eager lookout. But most of the undressing nowadays seems to be accomplished with much more artistry than formerly. There is still the knotty problem of bare knees to contend with, and we deprecate the tendency of some choruses to wear little or nothing this side the tropic of capricorn, but generally speaking we seem to be swinging back toward a combination of sanity and silk as a chorus covering. It is meet that Mr. Ziegfeld should lead the way.

Best Sellers in Music.

The following are the three best selling Victor records for the last week:

Serenade—"Chantez, riez, dormez" (Gounod), sung by Emma Calve.

"Ave Maria" (Schubert), Mischa Elman.

"Just a-Wearyin' for You," Lucy Marsh.

Columbia records which have had the greatest success in the local salesrooms of the company during the week are:

"Espana Rhapsody" (Chabrier) and "Ballet Egyptian" (Luigini), played by Prince's orchestra.

"Don't Take My Darling Boy Away" (Von Tilzer), one step, and "My Tango Girl" (Hirsh and Edwards), fox trot, violin and piano.

"Down Among the Sheltering Palms" (Olman), Columbia Male quartet, and "If We Can't Be the Same Old Sweethearts" (Monaco), contralto and tenor.

Among the Edison records, the following are reported as the most popular:

"Caprice Viennois (Kreisler) and "Sérénade Melancholique (Tschaikowsky), played by Albert Spalding.

"A Call to Arms," Peerless quartet, and "Your King annd Country Need You," Helen Clark and chorus.

"There Must Be a Little Cupid in the Briny" (Foley) and "Aunty Skinner's Chicken Dinner" (Morse).

The three best sellers of the Pathé Frères' disc records are:

"Tu non mi vuoi piu bebe" and "Elucean le stelle" (Tosca), sung by Caruso.

"Largo al factorum" (Barber of Seville) and "Brindisi" (Hamlet), sung by Titta Ruffo.

"Il proverta mia lieta" (La Boheme) and "Ch'ella mi creda" (The Girl from the Golden West), sung by Giorgini, tenor.

Sheet music numbers which have been most popular are, according to the sales department of a leading music store:

"When I Leave the World Behind," by Irving Berlin.

"We'll Have a Jubilee in My Old Kentucky Home," by Walter Donaldson.

"Waltz of My Heart's Desire," from "The Lady in Red," by Robert Winterberg.

Gossip of Music and Musicians.

Ethel Leginska, the pianist of temperament and little hair, who appeared under rather unfortunate circumstances at the Fine Arts theater last winter, plans a series of eight "master composers" recitals for the winter. Bach, Beethoven, Brahms, Schubert, Schumann, Chopin and MacDowell are on her list.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra will give 101 concerts next season, about thirty of them outside of Chicago.

Josef Holbrooke loves to complain of the indifference of English to music of their own composers. He roasts the public and damns the critics on every occasion. He must find consolation in the enormous recognition since war broke out. At Bournemouth Dan Goeffrey has rehearsed no less than sixty-seven works by British composers. At festivals in various towns Elgar's violin concerto has had more than 150 performances already. The same tendency may be observed in the presentation of the works of Bantock, Wallace, Delius, etc. In the latest of John Lane's "Living Masters of Music" series a biography of Bantock records interesting facts about Holbrooke, who was taken in by the Bantocks. "Holbrooke was even then very unconventional," the book reads, "and Mrs. Bantock has some amusing diplomatic fencing matches with him to get him to wear a collar when going to some important concert." Mr. Holbrooke has written the music to one of Pavlowa's new pantomimes arranged by Max Rabinoff and written by Douglas Malloch.

Toledo is organizing a Civic Music league, not at all like that which does such good work in Chicago. The purpose of the new organization is not to make the people sing and play, but to bring to Toledo the best artists and organizations, to present them at popular prices, and to assume the financial responsibility. Geraldine Farrar, the Boston Symphony, Kreisler, Paderewski, and the New York Philharmonic orchestra have been contracted for thus far. The guarantee fund has reached $15,000.

Paderewski was recently pleased to learn that Mme. Melba, who has been giving concerts for the English Red Cross in Australia, turned her attention to the suffering Poles. She reported that she will add $65,000 to the Paderewski fund. She will arrive in San Francisco in August. The pianist will not return to Europe. He expected to spend his summer in his relief work, stopping only in time to practice for a concert tour. He has recently become a vegetarian for the sake of his health.

Arthur Olaf Anderson, Eduardo Sacerdote, Arthur M. Burton, Glenn Dillard Gunn, and George Hamlin are to be the judges in Mr. Hamlin's $200 prize contest for the best aria for tenor. Many manuscripts have been received.

A Parisian newspaper carries a story that Dr. Richard Strauss has smuggled a bag of flour from Holland into Germany for his personal use. It seems that he was conducting a concert in Amsterdam. The Berlin Kladderdasch here takes up the yarn. He, knowing that he would receive tributes of some kind at the close of the evening, suggested to some of his admirers that they substitute flour for flowers. It is further alleged that he distributed that precious stuff to all of his musical friends except the critics, who received only some of Frau Strauss's dried buns.

The czar of all the Russias has been composing songs for years, publishing them under the name of "Olaf."

Since the declaration of war by Italy Germany has banned all modern Italian operas from the German stages. "Madam Butterfly," which was scheduled for May 24, was cancelled and various other modern works planned for May and June have been replaced by German works.

Reel Fans Know Mae Tinee.

By Louise James.

MARY PICKFORD may be the most popular woman in the world, but she is certainly not the most popular woman in Chicago. If you don't believe me read this story.

We were waiting for Mary Pickford in the waiting room of the La Salle street station, Mae Tinee and I. The crowd was waiting, too. And such a crowd! An excited, restless swarm of humanity, boys and girls, men and women, small children, and babies in arms. It seemed as though every movie fan in the city had come out to meet their movie favorite.

Suddenly from the center of that seething mass rose a voice, high pitched, feminine, shrill.

"There she is—O, I know it!"

I turned quickly. I thought, of course, that it was the "Mary." So did Mae Tinee. And then louder, rising almost to a shriek this time.

"You're Mae Tinee! Mae Tinee!"

For a single long moment there was a silence while the crowd seemed to be absorbing the paralyzing fact.

"Gee, but I'd know you any——" but by this time the owner was upon us. She had made her way through the crowd somehow, this slim blonde girl of 16 with hair flying and a small boy clinging to her skirts.

"O, I've seen you before in pictures—I know you—I have your photograph——"

But she got no further. The crowd had surged in upon us like a tide. We retreated to a nearby radiator. The crowd followed, men and women, small children, boys and girls—I was sure I had never seen so many people.

Mae Tinee did not see them—she had turned her back. A criminal at bay could not have been more appalled.

"It's you—there's no use denying it's you"—a hand was put on her arm and she was actually turned facing the crowd. "See," said the voice triumphantly, "wouldn't you know her anywhere?"

"I don't know what you mean," Miss Tinee was saying weakly.

"Say, don't tell us that—we know." Only sixteen years could have been so certain of anything—"And, O, please come out and let us see you—please!"

By this time the crowd was growing larger and more condensed—this seething mass of excitable humanity.

"But really—I'm not anybody at all." Mae Tinee was flushed and stammered a bit. I have seen her cool and poised before an interview with the country's most beloved celebrities. But suddenly a celebrity herself, her calm was gone. She had but one wish, and that was to flee. And that same wish was stamped on her whole person.

The vigorous, half frightened denial in her voice had made the crowd sway back for a moment. But the moment was brief. A man in the back of the crowd took up the cry—"Say, what's she givin' us? It's her, all right, all right. I saw her in 'The Diamond from the Sky,' and she can't fool me. I'd pick her out——"

His voice was promptly drowned by a louder bass voice from nearby—"Spell yurr, Miss Tinee," he said.

There was a general laugh and a sort of cheer when some one threatened to follow her and see "that she's sure 'nough go to THE TRIBUNE."

By this time the little kid that had clung to the young girl's skirts, excited and frightened by the crowd, sat down in the small circle of space left by the crowd at Mae Tinee's feet.

The action brought to Mae Tinee a moment of self forgetfulness. "I reckon it's tired," she said.

That was enough. She had given herself away—denial was of no avail. The cheer grew lusty now and questions were flung into the air—

"Are you really a minister's daughter?"

"Well, if she is—this is no place for a minister's daughter," at last quoth some humanitarian, and gradually and reluctantly the crowd divided to let us pass.

Pleasant Music at the Summer Parks.

By Ronald Webster.

MR. CAMPANINI'S having written to the resident staff of the Chicago Opera association of his decision to divorce "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci" is, perhaps, the most interesting, if not the most startling, bit of news of the week. These two works of the so-called "new Italian school" of the early 90s have been the Siamese twins of grand opera in this country for more than two decades. Virtually a quarter of a century has passed since the Mascagni melodrama [that is how the composer himself classifies it, and, with regard for etymology, properly, although we have another use for the word "melodrama."] caught the fancy of the American public. Leoncavallo's one marked success took hold more slowly in this country, but was by 1895 so popular that the two compositions were regarded by usage as constituting a single entertainment.

I have no doubt that Mr. Campanini's real reason for cutting the binding tie for next season's schedule in the Auditorium resides less in a desire to run against tradition than in a wish to bring Conchita Supervia forward in a part less hackneyed than Santuzza in the "Cavalleria." At any rate, the really informative bureau of information of the Chicago Opera sends word that a new double bill will be made up of "I Pagliacci" and "La Navarraise," Massenet's one act opera of the "frightful" school. Streatfield, in his interesting book called "The Opera," says of "La Navarraise" that it "was, apparently, an attempt to imitate the melodramatic extravagance of Mascagni." The date of its composition and production, 1894, taken in consideration with its "bloody" character, would seem to indicate that Massenet sought in "La Navarraise" to advantage himself of the vogue of both "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci."

Mr. Campanini, doubtless, is also moved by the consideration that "Cavalleria Rusticana" can better be spared than "I Pagliacci." The former is essentially a one part opera; that is, it draws because of the singer of Santuzza. Leoncavallo's work, on the other hand, can easily bear the process of "all-star casting," or it can be made the vehicle, at will, of the singer of Nedda, of the singer of Canio, or of the singer of Tonio. Thus we know that Titta Ruffo, say, can draw a packed house as Tonio, irrespectively of his associates, and that Caruso can do likewise as Canio; but I do not think the box office would be rushed by the billing of the former as Alfio or of the tenor as Turiddu in the Mascagni opera.

If, as has been more than merely hinted, Mr. Campanini gives Chicago its first hearing the coming season of Richard Strauss' "Elektra," he will have for the cast a singer of Clytemnestra who had the advantage of singing the part in Germany under Strauss' own direction. She is Miss Frances Rose, whose engagement for the Auditorium season was announced by the general director before, in April, he sailed for Italy.

Of particular interest to musicians here is the decision of the Ravinia club to give, each week, an opportunity to a Chicago girl to make an appearance on the music stage.

This will be accomplished through selections by the club of young women who have shown merit as student artists. Tuesday afternoon of each week has been set aside for the purpose of offering an opportunity to one young woman. The Chicago Symphony orchestra will play.

For the first concert of this sort Miss Marie White Clark has been chosen.

The soloist for this evening will be Harry Weisbach.

Ravinia park will be one outdoor enterprise in Chicago whose doings will not be affected by the weather. If the weather is fair the programs will be out of doors—otherwise the theater will be used and there will be no postponements.

Thursday afternoons will be given over to the children. As last season, there will be novelties offered each week in the way of pageants and festivals.

Worth Faulkner, tenor, with Sidney Arno Dietch, accompanist, will present tomorrow evening a program of songs entirely by Chicago composers. Five songs by John Alden Carpenter head the program. Less known are three by Leo Sowerby, a young composer. Mr. Sowerby is undoubtedly considered a futurist by the more conservative lovers of music and the titles indicate to some extent his tendency. The songs are called "With Strawberries," "The Ghost," and "The Full Sea Rolls and Thunders." On the program also are compositions by Isaac Van Grove and Eleanor Everest Freer.

The Civic Music club of the La Salle Extension university gave its first program last night at 2550 Michigan avenue. Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado" was arranged in concert form for this occasion by F. W. Dignan, the president.

Ralph Errolle, the heroic tenor who will create the leading rôle in the new $10,000 prize opera "Fairyland" at Los Angeles, is a Chicagoan. He confesses himself thrilled over the prospect of making history in the musical life of this country. "I believe that the production of 'Fairyland' on July 1 will be the beginning of a musical renaissance in this country," he said recently. "The music of the opera is very difficult," he adds in a letter to his teacher, Herman Devries. "We rehearse night and day."

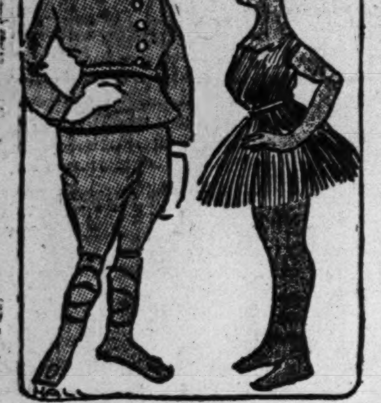
A new orchestra, called the Chicago Scandinavian orchestra, has been organized by Frederik Frederiksen, a violinist. Mr. Frederiksen has been known here for years as the organizer of the Frederiksen-Hess trio. Plans for the new body were begun last February and the first concert will be given in the fall at Central Music hall. The purpose is in general to familiarize Americans with Scandinavian music—the works of Grieg, Alfven, Palmberg, Svendsen, Sibellius, Johnefelt, etc. Among the supporters of the orchestra are the consuls of the three Scandinavian countries.

Dr. Carl Muck of the Boston Symphony orchestra, which recently played a series of concerts at the Panama Pacific exposition, did not return to Boston, but devoted his vacation to sight seeing in the west. Dr. Muck says he does not understand why Americans have insisted on European travel instead of exploration of this continent.

Why They Laugh in Vaudeville.

MAJESTIC.

From "Ordered Home," with George Damerel and company:



"Tell me, signor, have you ever made love to any one but me?"

"Well, I'm 21 and in perfect health."

"And are you going to leave me and go back to America; leave this land of palms and coconuts——"

"But we have coconuts in America——"

"Yes, but most of them are empty."

"You don't gif a say."

"Sure a man vid brown hair should vear a brown suit, a man vid gray hair should vear a gray suit, and so on."

"How should a baldheaded man dress?"

"Frank, you are too inquisitiveness."

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

JUNE ~ JULY

July

THE fragrance of summer is the odor of sweet clover. With the sun turned again towards the south, the day slowly lessening, the heat increasing, and the rains less copious, the smell of clover takes the air and fields stretch away brown towards the west in the evening.

Ripened grasses make brown plumed meadows, lustrous and richened in the last hours of the day. The bracken grows sturdy and coarse, for fox grass waves in the wind. The solid green of spring has gone. The fields are pied.

The wild rose and red clover are half hidden in the brown topped grasses. Fledglings are out of the nest and on awkward wings. The false Solomon's seal is in its delicate bloom. The wild sunflower is pushing high its graceful stalks. In the tangles the white blossoms of the dainty lady's bed straw spread out over the ground. Snap dragon—butter and eggs—and hawk weed—the devil's paint brush—touch the green with bright colors.

The matins of the birds begin shortly after 3 in the morning; the vespers of the thrush last almost until 8. These days are numbered. July comes as the last month of song. The molting period is one of silence and it comes with August. Heat and sultriness impend. The sound of the cricket forecasts the advent of the firefly. Soon the owl will whimper in the night when the woods are held by hot winds from the south.

The goldfinch soon will nest and young swallows take to wing; wild strawberries are ripening and the grasshopper is about to lead the music from the grass.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

MLLE. ANNA PAVLOWA. at the Midway Gardens

Mlle. Anna Pavlowa and her Russian ballet will be the attraction at Midway Gardens for four weeks, beginning next Saturday night. In addition to the Russians there will be the National Symphony orchestra under the direction of Max Bendix. These two organizations make what may fairly be said to be one of the most pretentious offerings ever made by a summer amusement concern. During Mlle. Pavlowa's sojourn at Midway Gardens she will offer a changed program every night and will present her entire repertoire of some twenty-four ballets and nearly 100 divertissements. The opening ballet will be "The Magic Flute," with music by Mozart. This has not been seen anywhere in America this season.

In order to make possible the Pavlowa engagement the management of Midway Gardens was compelled to build a special stage and to tear down a very considerable portion of the heavy masonry and concrete work at one end of the gardens.

The evenings entertainment at Midway Gardens will be divided into two parts. The first part of the evening the National Symphony orchestra will offer a musical program. At 9:30 each evening Mlle. Pavlowa will appear. The second part of her program will consist of divertissements or feature and solo dances, in which she and all the members of the ballet will participate. Some of the divertissements are to be new, but she will include some of her popular dances, such as "The Swan," "The Butterfly," "The Bacchanale," "The Gavotte," and others.

Mlle. Pavlowa will be assisted by her premier danseur, M. Alexandre Volinine, M. Ivan Clustine, M. Oukrainksy, Mlle. Plaskovietzka, Svirskaia, and Kuhn.

Francis Wilson arranged with Charles Frohman, before Mr. Frohman sailed on the Lusitania, to return to the stage under his management. The conditions were such, however, that it is not expected the arrangement will be carried out by the Frohman executors.

Tomorrow evening is the first "symphony night" at Ravinia. Tschaikowsky's No 4 in F major is on the program. Tuesday evenings will be given over to ballroom music and Friday evenings to Wagner. On Wednesday compositions of French composers will have the program to themselves.

Bismarck garden, where nature is in competition with electric fountains, Mahl's Philharmonic band, a Dutch windmill, and other distractions, offers an addition to its repertory this evening in "the classic and well known dancer, Mlle. Luxane." The midnight review has been revamped, and it is reported that the intimate cabaret performer Mr. Sosman, is no longer among the entertainers.

Sir Edward Elgar is composing a new work for performance at a benefit concert for the Poles. It is called "Polonia," and is dedicated to Ignace Paderewski.

Vernon Stiles, an American tenor, has been engaged by the Wiesbaden court opera for a period of three years. Reports from Berlin indicate that Mr. Campanini was interested in his work.

Playbills of the Week.

Garrick theater—"All Over Town," with Joseph Santley, Walter Jones, Miss Beatrice Allen, Roy Atwell, and Miss Marie Flynn—not to mention Williams and Wolfus, who are genuine first aid to the injured about 10:15, where Mr. Santley's libretto threatens to cave. There is a great deal of good dancing in this extravaganza, with enough of Mr. Santley at all times to satisfy his devoted clientele. Fifth week.

Grand Opera house—"Beverly's Balance," with Miss Margaret Anglin displaying how clever an actress she is in sheer comedy. Fifth week.

Princess theater—"The Lady in Red," with the delightful Miss Valli Valli. Imported operetta. Glenn Hall, Miss Gertrude Vanderbilt, Will Phillips, Edward Martindell, and Miss Phyllis Maude are of Miss Valli Valli's support. Eighth week.

Palace Music hall—"Maid in America," girls, scenery, and song, which is the trade-mark of shows from the Winter garden, New York. This is by far the best so far brought hither. Miss Florence Moore, Mlle. Dazie, Miss Minerva Coverdale, Bert Clark, Miss Rita Gould, Mrs. Louise Mink, and Miss Bly Brown are in the numerous company. Fifth week.

Cort theater—"Peg o' My Heart," with Miss Peggy O'Neil. Eighth week of return engagement.

IN VAUDEVILLE.

Majestic—Gus Edwards and his song revue of twenty-five young entertainers; the Misses Campbell in banjo and piano music; Fred J. Ardath in "Hiram"; James Cullen, monologist; Frances Nordstrom in "All Wrong"; Hope Vernon, violinist and vocalist, and Felix, the mind reading duck.

McVicker's—Joe Welch, impersonator; Sidney Payne and Alice Condon in "Neutrality"; "The Birthday Party," musical comedy; Klein and Clifton in "The Dummy's Holiday"; Anita Primrose in character studies, etc.

Great Northern Hippodrome—"Little Miss U. S. A.," musical comedy; Dolan and Lenharr in "Taking Chances"; Kennison trio, dancers; Ray Snow, monologist; Bowman Brothers, Herbert Dyer, Hazel Morris, Leonard and Louie Claire, and Gould, etc.

Men Speak of Case Superiority with Deeply-Rooted, Well-Founded Admiration

MEN APPRECIATE that we can include in this car those features identified with the more costly cars. Men wonder how we are able to price the Case Car so low. When they investigate, they are impressed with the logic of the Case Company and the Case Car.

THE FACTS ARE SIMPLE AND SOUND. Here they are:

1. This Company has a manufacturing experience of 72 years.
2. Its plants have grown steadily at small annual cost compared to the rapid investments of other makers.
3. A sales organization—world-wide—was "ready made"—so no large percentage is required to cover a costly and exclusive automobile sales organization.
4. Our buying power for the entire business enables us to purchase materials at a great saving.
5. Reputation, not competition, determines our policies.

CASE 30
MODEL R
Priced Complete

ANOTHER THING THAT IMPRESSES MEN is that we include in the purchase price all of those necessities that usually have to be bought later. Such as extra tire and tube on rim with tire cover, Weed non-skid tire chains and 8-day clock. So the Case Car is really ready for the road without further expense. What other car is so completely equipped?

Quick Action Necessary

IT IS OUR DESIRE to prevent disappointment among all those who have planned to buy Case cars. But only a few remain allotted to this territory—and they may be demanded by other territories. We cannot expect to get more this season.
Make an appointment now for a demonstration trip—and you can convince yourself that all we say—and others say—is faint praise for a car that has so conspicuously demonstrated its worthiness. We urge you today to ask us to show you item by item these points in which we spend where others must save.

9 BIG ACTS

Feature Films of the Week.

"By Whose Hand?"—American two reel drama featuring Winifred Greenwood and Charles Bartlett. If great scenic effects have this power to thrill you, see this picture by all means.

"Chimmie Fadden"—Lasky picturization of play featuring Victor Moore.

"Children of the Sea"—Majestic two reel drama featuring Charles Clary and Francilia Billington, who plays a double rôle. A fisher girl is lured toward and saved from the downward path.

"His Wife's Past"—United Pyramid featuring Ruth Blair and Edwin August. Interesting, but not unusual.

"Providence of Mrs. Urmy"—Essanay three part drama featuring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne.

"The Bondwoman"—Broadway Favorites three reel drama featuring Vera Fuller Mellish. With herself a girl buys and pays for her father's salvation.

"The Cheval Mystery"—Universal three act drama featuring Rosemary Theby and Harry Myers.

"The Face in the Moonlight"—World Film military drama featuring Robert Warwick. A top notch thriller.

"The Devil's Daughter"—Fox feature adapted from D'Annunzio's "La Gioconda." Theda Bara plays the leading rôle.

"The Man Who Did Not Die"—Thirteenth episode Lubin serial, "Road o' Strife."

"The Old High Chair"—Majestic two reel drama featuring Gladys Brockwell and all star cast. A drama that will undoubtedly appeal to young and old.

"The Rosary"—Selig seven reel picturization of the play featuring Kathlyn Williams, Wheeler Oakman, and Charles Clary.

Stationary Photoplays.

Colonial—Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, "The Sins of the Mothers," Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, Paramount feature.

Fine Arts—"The White Sister," featuring Viola Allen and Richard Travers.

Illinois—"The Birth of a Nation."

Strand—Mary Pickford in "Little Pal."

Studebaker—"Prohibition."

Ziegfeld—"The Spendthrift."

LATEST NEWS FROM MOVIE LAND

by Mae Tinee

MOVIES' YOUNGEST PLAYER.

THE first twilight sleep baby to be used in motion pictures appears in the Reliance feature "Little Marie" and is shown in the local photoplay theaters using the picture products of the D. W. Griffith organization. During the filming of "Little Marie" it became necessary to have a three days' old infant. Where to secure the chee-ild was the question. Director Tod Browning decided to refer his plight to Mrs. Lucille Brown, who has charge of procuring "extra people" at the Griffith Los Angeles studios. Mrs. Brown did not think that a three days' old baby was an "extra person" exactly, but she went to the Los Angeles Twilight hospital. There the three days old baby was found, and taken to the Reliance-Majestic studios. Within an hour Director Browning had made the scenes in which the baby appears.

The William A. Brady Picture Plays corporation has begun work in its Fort Lee studio upon the production in moving picture form of the famous Drury Lane melodramas, "The Sins of Society" and "Shall We Forgive Her?" the most successful of the Frank Harvey plays. The camera productions are being made under arrangement with A. W. Dingwall and Joseph Brooks, owners of the American rights in the original plays.

George Larkin, recently of the Universal company, is now the star of the Selig Jungle Zoo.

J. Warden Kerrigan and a company of players will go to Honolulu this summer to film a series of pictures.

An Essanay Chaplin feature it is announced will now be released each week.

Screening of "The Fox Woman," a feature being produced at the Majestic studios, in Hollywood, Cal., was held up for several days, while Director Lloyd Ingraham, aided by several of his assistants, journeyed through the Japanese colony of Los Angeles, in search of a Japanese baby, essential in the filming of one of the important scenes. Several babies, exactly the ones needed by Director Ingraham, were located, but their mothers refused to "loan" them for various reasons. Finally, it was learned that there were several babes in a Japanese fishing village, located some miles from Santa Monica. After some delays, one of the infants was "borrowed" in exchange for a sum of money.

Those interested in the technique of motion pictures will be pleased to hear that Dr. Dinshah P. Ghadiali of Hinsdale has invented and, he declares, perfected a "shutterless, flickerless, continuous motion picture projector."

Watch the "Right Off the Reel" page for an interview with Otis Harlan, the famous comedian, who has just joined the Selig company as leading man.

Pennsylvania exhibitors have pledged themselves to fight censorship to a finish.

Harry Myers of the Universal company, while not a Red Cross nurse, will nevertheles be instrumental in bringing joy and comfort to the soldiers in Belgium's trenches. Recently he received a pathetic letter from one of the soldiers in the allies' trenches in Belgium asking him to forward some of his comedy pictures. Mr. Myers turned the letter over to Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal company, with the result that a cablegram was sent to the London exchange ordering them to supply all such films gratis. A projecting machine was procured and now when the first line men are relieved and are marched to the rear for the customary three days' rest, the monotony will be relieved by these pictures.

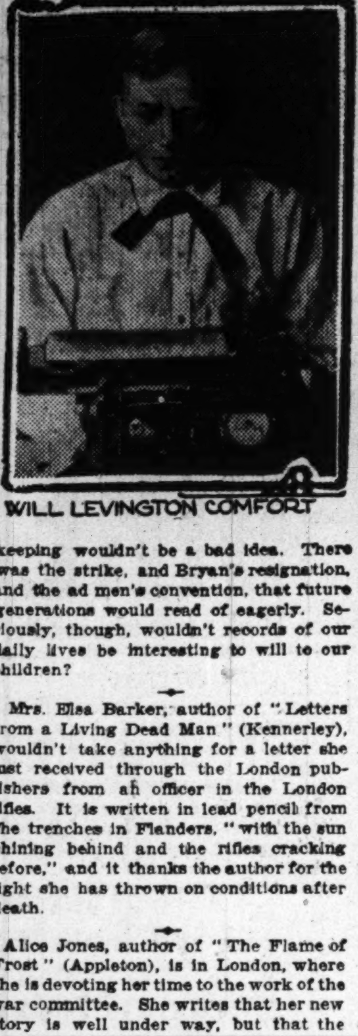
TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

by FANNY BUTCHER

THE PHILOSOPHY OF COMFORT.

THIRTY-SEVEN years old—ten years of the thirty-seven spent at school, ten of them soldiering and war corresponding, and all of them filled with studying and writing—Will Levington Comfort believes that a man's life properly spent is made up of tearing off one after another the husks of illusion—first physical, then mental. The kernel of things, he believes, is spiritual and the spiritual life is the one worthy to be developed. Inspiration and service alone will develop that life. All progress lies through self-mastery, the mastery of both body and brain by the spirit. It sounds like the word of a mystic and an ascetic, doesn't it? Look at him at his typewriter. Isn't he a buxom, out of doors looking person? That's part of his philosophy, though, I suppose, that one must have a decent house to entertain his spirit in. Anyway, he's a splendid, vigorous person and he does big work. Mr. Comfort believes that many can be reached by novels who would go unenlightened if they were talked to by tracts. "The great novel," he says, "must carry in one solution the physical, mental, and spiritual attributes of life. According to that standard, "Red Fleece" (Doran), his greatest novel, is a great one.



WILL LEVINGTON COMFORT

A writer in the English Book Monthly makes the timely suggestion that those who are of a communicative turn of mind take to themselves a diary and chronicle the everyday events of these war days. She deplores the fact that so little is known of the everyday life of the noncombatants of that similar time 100 years ago when Napoleon cast all of Europe into strife. "If only our great-grandparents had taken the trouble to jot down for us a few things of those exciting times, such as how they felt when they heard Napoleon had escaped from Elba, how the harvest went on, how they managed to carry on business, the price of good, the price of dress—all kinds of things that the ordinary man or woman spoke of and suffered." Even for us, peace armored as we think we are, diary keeping wouldn't be a bad idea. There was the strike, and Bryan's resignation, and the ad men's convention, that future generations would read of eagerly. Seriously, though, wouldn't records of our daily lives be interesting to will to our children?

Mrs. Elsa Barker, author of "Letters from a Living Dead Man" (Kennerley), wouldn't take anything for a letter she just received through the London publishers from an officer in the London rifles. It is written in lead pencil from the trenches in Flanders, "with the sun shining behind and the rifles cracking before," and it thanks the author for the light she has thrown on conditions after death.

Alice Jones, author of "The Flame of Frost" (Appleton), is in London, where she is devoting her time to the work of the war committee. She writes that her new story is well under way, but that the thought of the great need of every one's services in these trying times makes it almost impossible for her to do anything that does not mean immediate, direct benefit to the soldiers.

If you are planning a trip to California this year you mustn't miss reading Gertrude Atherton's "California, an Intimate History" (Harpers), if you want to get the "atmosphere" of the land you visit.

"Kultur Cartoons" (Page) is said to be the most popular book in England today. The cartoons are drawn by Will Dyson, and H. G. Wells has written an introduction in which he says of Mr. Dyson: "He has an extreme distinction of personality, a simplicity and clearness of mind to a rare degree; he believes so in the good and generous things in life that he cannot realize any one adhering to mean and squalid ways when once the truth of their meanness has been asserted." At the request of King George and Queen Mary the British war office has made a ruling that "Kultur Cartoons" cannot be sent to soldiers in the field. You can buy it here now if you are interested.

Anent her purpose in writing "The Dusty Road" (Lippincott), Therese Tyler says: "My purpose was to show the power of the strong soul to rise above circumstances of crushing sordidness in which is lacking the stimulus of any heroic sorrow. Of course, most of the characters in such a story had to be unpleasant or there would have been no story."

"The American Navy" (Doubleday-Page), by Rear Admiral French E. Chadwick, is the first volume of a series to be called "American Books" which will deal with the most pressing American problem in a brief but extremely constructive manner. They will be written by men and women of recognized authority, it is promised. "The American Navy" is a timely addition to the literary ammunition of those who are fighting for an addition to our naval resources. Four other books in this series have already been printed—American Literature," by Prof. Leon Kellner, translated by Julian Franklin; "The Indian Today," by Dr. Charles A. Eastman; "The American College," by Isaac Sharpless; and "Municipal Freedom," by Oswald Ryan.

Agnes and Edgerton Castle, whose latest colaboration is "The Haunted Heart" (Appleton), are both engaged in the work of the war committee in London. Mr. Castle is connected with the defense division and Mrs. Castle is at the head of one of the Red Cross and refugee divisions. Mr. Castle writes that the manuscript of their new novel, a romance of the great war, is completed and the title decided upon, "The Hope of the Family." It is promised for fall publication.

Longmans, Green & Co. have published the 156th volume of "The Annual Register." It was first issued in 1759, and for thirty years its survey of events was written by Edmund Burke. The current volume opens with a resumé of the political history of Great Britain during 1914.

For True Stories of Success

The Tribune wants to hear from the thousands of men and women who have won success and happiness through inserting "SITUATION WANTED" ADS in The Tribune.

It wants to hear from every one who has, in the last four years, or since January, 1911, through putting a "SITUATION WANTED" AD in The Tribune, secured a position of any kind that has led to success and happiness.

It doesn't make any difference whether the situation you secured was that of Chauffeur or General Manager, Gardener or Salesman, Housekeeper or Stenographer—no matter what it was, if you secured it through a "SITUATION WANTED" AD in The Tribune and it brought you the things you wanted—income, comfort and happiness, the realization of your ambitions—we want to hear from you.

For the 25 letters received by June 28th, telling the best true stories of success, we will award the Cash Prizes listed above.

Any one who has in the last four years secured a position through using "SITUATION WANTED" ADS in The Tribune may enter the contest.

The letters will not be judged from a literary standpoint at all—those that give the most interesting true stories of success will be awarded the prizes, no matter how much or how little education the writers of the letters may have.

For what we want are just simple, plain letters, written just as you would talk if you were telling a friend of your success. Write on only one side of the paper and don't make your letters too long. A committee of Tribune editors will decide which are the best 25 letters.

The prize-winning letters will be published in The Tribune soon after the prizes are awarded, but the names of the prize winners will not be used without their consent.

Remember, we want your story of success. We want to know what you have accomplished through using "SITUATION WANTED" ADS in The Tribune. No matter how humble or how great your success has been, we want to know about it.

Your story may help a hundred others to find the happiness and success they are searching for but have not yet been able to find. That thought alone—even if you had no opportunity to win a handsome Cash Prize—should be sufficient to induce you to send in your letter.

Let others who are struggling now, as you perhaps struggled a few months or a few years ago, know how you won out. Give others the benefit of your experiences. Write your letter today.

Notes and Gossip of the Motor World.

By Reed L. Parker.

At the last meeting of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, Robert C. Reuschaw, representing the Reo Motor Car company, one of the oldest members and largest contributors to the treasury of that body, made a strong plea for the removal of the executive offices and headquarters to Detroit.

Mr. Rueschaw, in a spirited talk, declared it was not only illogical that the headquarters be in New York but that it was inconvenient for the members, and rendered the services the Chamber of Commerce is supposed to perform practically useless to those who contribute most to its support.

"The Reo company is located not in Detroit but in Lansing," said Mr. Rueschaw, "and we can therefore speak freely without laying ourselves open to a desire to grind a private ax.

"Detroit is, from every angle, the logical place for the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, if this body is to serve its avowed purpose of regulating matters between its members, the dissemination of information, the prosecuting and defense of patent suits, etc.

"Ninety-five per cent of all the automobiles made in America are made within a radius of 100 miles of Detroit. That circle includes, besides the City of the Straits itself, Cleveland, Flint, Toledo, Lansing, Jackson, and Pontiac. Extend the circle another hundred miles or so and you take in another 4 per cent of the product with Indianapolis, Kenosha, Racine, and Buffalo. The remaining 1 per cent is produced in scattering little plants all over the country, but fully 99 per cent of all the automobiles made in this country are made at points much nearer Detroit than New York."

Goodrich Silvertown cable cord tires are figuring almost daily in the breaking of speed records. At Indianapolis the fastest time ever made in a 500 mile race was attributed to the use of Silvertown tires by all the cars that finished. During the last week the drivers preparing to take part in the big race on Chicago's new speedway have made some extraordinary time. On Thursday last Earl Cooper, driving a Stutz car equipped with Silvertowns, established a new world's record by going two miles at the average rate of 109.9 miles per hour. That was considered wonderful until Darie Resta, the sensational driver who finished second at Indianapolis, drove his Peugeot over the two mile course in the qualifying test on the Chicago track at the rate of 110.9 miles per hour. His car also was equipped with Silvertown tires.

The Autocar company has donated a military ambulance to the Chicago speedway for use during the elimination trials and the race. This ambulance, which is in service at the speedway, is a duplicate of the Autocar ambulances sent abroad for war purposes.

The new 1916 Hupmobile arrived in Chicago last week. It is now on exhibition in the show rooms of Thomas J. Hay, local distributer of Hup cars. Mr. Hay is the first dealer outside of Detroit to receive a sample of the new car.

◆

The Velie Motor Vehicle company of Moline, Ill., has announced a new "Biltwel" model for the coming season, a forty horse power six cylinder car of unusually attractive lines and acceptable mechanical features. The new car sells for $1,065.

◆

"Art" Smith, the latest sensation in aviation, drives a Kissel Kar when on terra firma. Smith's "stunts" at the Panama-Pacific exposition have made him the most talked about of the younger aviators. Among the daring feats accomplished by Smith is shooting off fireworks while "looping the loop" over the exposition grounds at night.

Vaudeville Wit.

MAJESTIC.

Homer B. Mason and Marguerite Keeler in "Married":

"Why, here's a woman's gown. I wonder how it got here in my house. I'll throw it out. There it goes—thirteen stories down. Now it's like me—it's had a drop too much." Turning, he sees a young woman asleep in a bed. "Great heavens! The doctor told me I'd see things if I didn't stop drinking. But he didn't tell me I'd see anything as nice as this. I guess I'll keep on drinking. (Wakes the girl up. Rising in bed she screams):

"O, where am I? What are you doing in my house?"

"This is my house. That is, I guess it is. I don't recall a thing that's happened in the last three days——"

"And I don't recall a thing that's happened for ten. I've been out of my mind——"

"And you're here and I'm here——"

"Yes."

"Great heavens! Then we must have got married and forgotten about it!"

"O, it can't be true! What have I done? You know for ten days I've had aphasia."

"What kind of a bottle does that come in?"

"It isn't a drink. It's a state of mind caused by shock."

"O, I suppose I'll get mine later, then."

"But listen. If we aren't sure we are married, it isn't proper, even if I like you very much, for you to be in this room with me. It isn't respectable."

"Why isn't it, if I love you?"

"Because—because——"

"Because it's too pleasant to be respectable, eh? Well, I'll go. But you must promise me that you'll join me at an early breakfast."

"Eight?"

"No—eat. And if we discover then that we didn't get married while our minds were wandering, why, we'll elope and go to Niagara Falls."

"Mercy——"

"What?"

"Is that place running yet?"

Important Notice From Our Pure Food Market

Never content with conditions that can be improved, we make a radical change in policy for your benefit.

This market was the first advocate of purity in foodstuffs and low prices for dependable goods over a quarter of a century ago—and from that day to this it has always been in the very forefront of progress. Today, we take another forward step of vital importance to you. In this step we are to be the first advocate of another advance in merchandising that we feel will be acceptable to thoughtful and economical patrons. Many markets (ours among them) have made a practice of offering sugar in limited quantities at low prices in conjunction with orders of other goods at regular prices. We do not believe the practice for the best interests of true economy because such offers require purchasers to buy more than is necessary for immediate use, in order to take advantage of the sugar offer. Therefore instead of offering a saving of a fraction of a cent a pound on ten or twenty pounds of sugar as an incentive for excessive purchases of unadvertised goods, we have placed all other prices on a basis that makes The Big Store more than ever the logical place to buy all foodstuffs at savings that insure true economy. For example, tomorrow we offer:

Teas

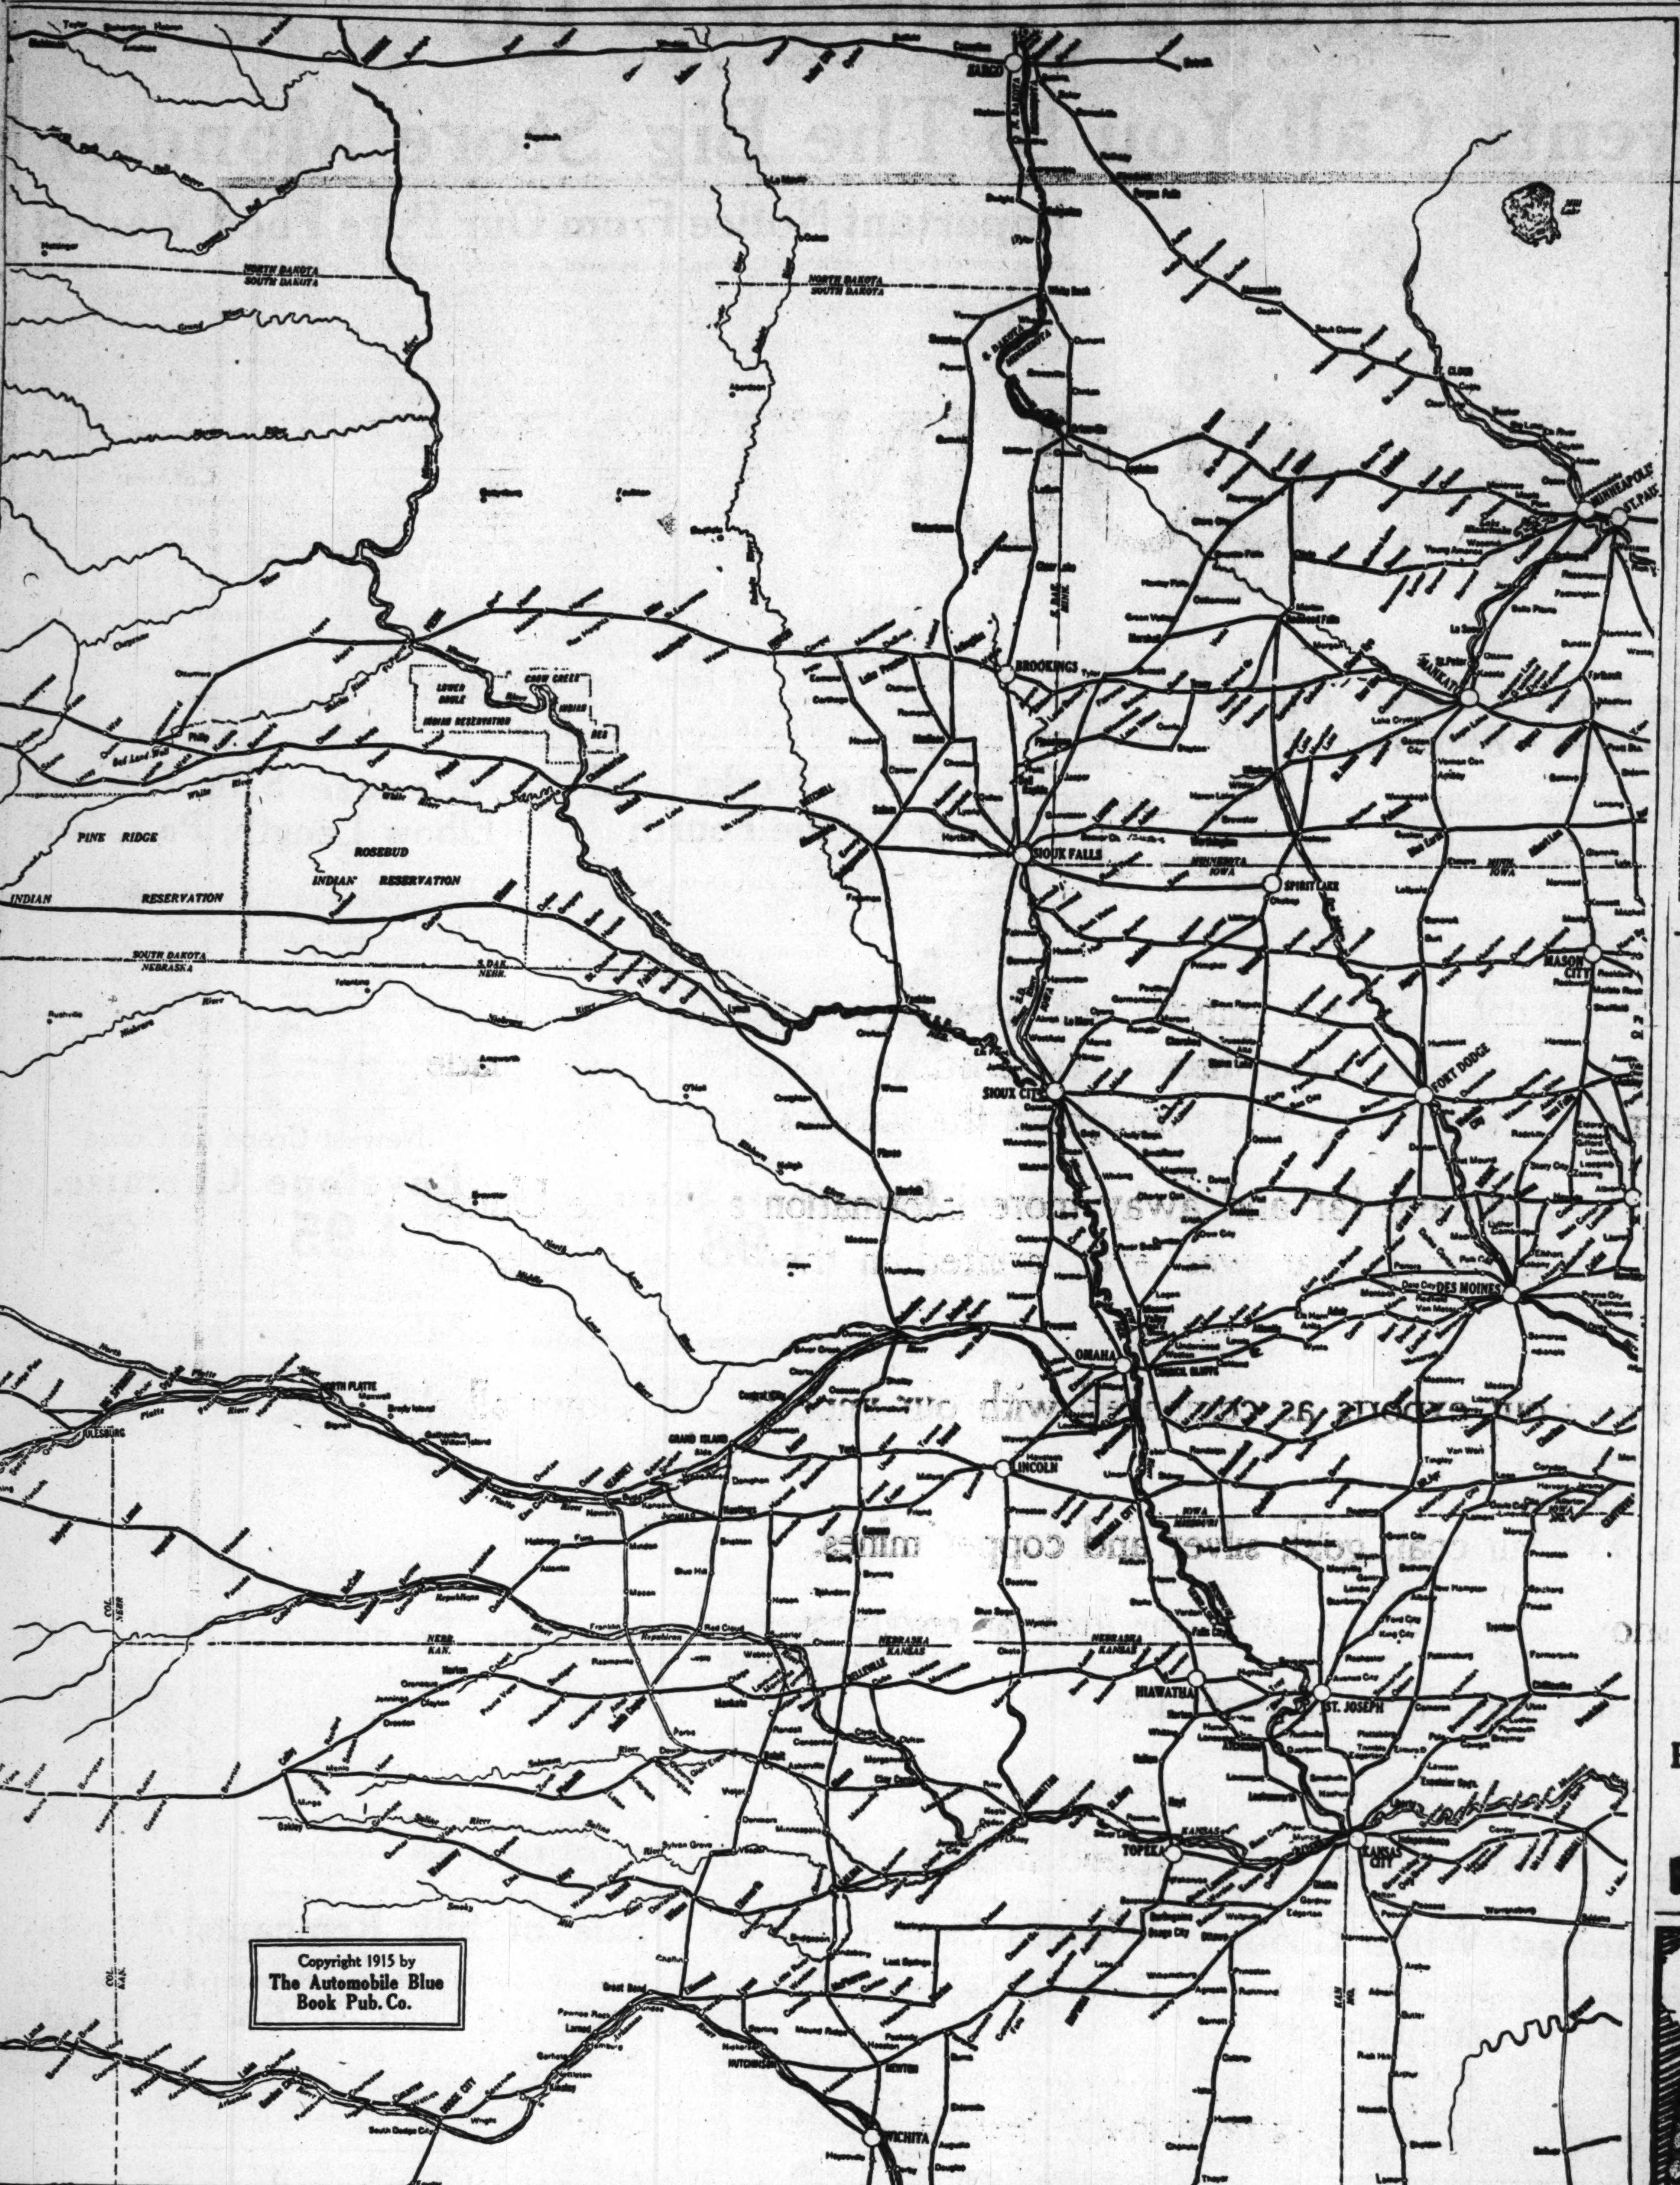
BEST ROUTES FOR MOTORING WEST.



Copyright 1915 by
The Automobile Blue
Book Pub. Co.

By L. M. Steffens.

THE rains which have recently been so heavy west of the Mississippi and Missouri rivers have practically ceased and the weather reports indicate that a dry season is to continue from now on. Automobile tourists who have planned their transcontinental touring to start about July 1 can feel safe as to the condition of the weather and roads. Although the heavy rains have put the roads in bad condition, the well organized road associations have worked vigorously redragging and repairing all the highways.

The California legislature has passed a bill in which the convicts of that state will construct roads in the 7,500,000 acres of arable land on the eastern plateau of the Sierras. This act is modeled after the Colorado legislation, under which excellent results have been obtained. The highway department is authorized to make a requisition upon the prison department for the number of convicts required and also to organize and maintain the camps, as well as supervise the road work. The men are to be worked under the honor system, and the prison department is empowered to grant additional good time allowances to the convicts employed in this work, conditioned upon their loyal, obedient, and efficient coöperation with the state.

California is the last of the western states to employ her convicts in this manner.

Due to the numerous inquiries for a direct route to San Francisco which will invade the scenic points in the western trip, the writer has planned a route from Chicago to San Francisco which is scenic as well as a direct way to go.

Leaving Chicago, go west over the Butterfield road through Naperville, Aurora, Montgomery, Bristol, Plano, Sandwick, Somonauk, Earlville, Mendota, La Moille, Princeton, Wyanet, Sheffield, Mineral, Atkinson, and Davenport. The road from Chicago to Davenport is good gravel to Somonauk, and from there on it is a dirt road which is not in the best condition in wet weather.

From Davenport the river to river road is met and is followed across the state of Iowa to Omaha, Neb. This trail goes through Iowa City, Marengo, Grinnell, Newton, Des Moines, Guthrie Center, and Exira to Omaha, with a mileage from Chicago of 522 miles.

From Omaha go north through Fremont, and then go west along the Platte river through Nebraska via Ames, North Bend, Schuyler, Columbus, Central City, Grand Island, Kearney, Lexington, Cozard, and Gothenburg, where the Platte river is crossed, and then follow this on the south side to North Platte. From North Platte go west and follow the south branch of the Platte river through Sutherland, Paxton, Ogallala, Brule, and Big Springs, where Colorado is entered through Julesburg. Go southwest from Julesburg through Ovid, Sterling, Atwood, Hillrose, Fort Morgan, Bennett Watkins, and Denver. The distance from Chicago is 1,132.3 miles.

From Denver to Grand Junction there is a route which goes west through Golden, Idaho Springs, Berthoud Pass, Fraser, Coulter, Sulphur Springs, Kremmling Wolcott, Eagle, and Glenwood Springs. This route is seldom traversed, for it takes the longest and steepest grades in the mountains in Colorado. Most tourists go south to Littleton, Sedalia, Palmer Lake, Husted, Colorado Springs, Fountain, and Buttes to Pueblo.

From Pueblo the route is a section of the Rainbow route, and there are fine, hard roads all the way to Cañon City. Leaving Cañon City, go over the old Copper Gulch road, which is not in the best of condition, to Cotopaxi. This is one of Colorado's most scenic trips. From Cotopaxi go west through Salida and then south through Alden, Willow Grove, and Saguache, where you go west again and cross the Cochetopa pass to Gunnison.

This route from Salida to Gunnison is fifty-five miles longer than by way of Monarch pass, but most tourists will go to Gunnison via Cochetopa pass, because the pass is lower and the road is open to travel earlier and later in the year.

Leaving Gunnison journey west over a section of the Rainbow route through Cebolla to Sapinero where the Blue Mesa road is met, which goes through Montrose, Delta, Whitewater, and Grand Junction.

Before leaving Grand Junction for Salt Lake City the tourists should equip themselves with food, water, and necessary supplies and also make a local investigation about the conditions of the road through the Utah desert. The first town that is invaded from Grand Junction is Fruita and then go west through Mack, Thompson, Elgin, Green River, Wellington, Price, Helper, Colton, Thistle, Provo, Murray, and Salt Lake City.

From Salt Lake City go north through Farmington to Ogden and then follow the overland route through Brigham, Tremonton, Snowville, Lucin, Montello, Elko, Carlin, Golconda, Winnemucca, Rose Creek, Mill City, Humboldt, Lovelock, Wadsworth, and Reno, where Nevada is left and California is entered through Truckee.

From Truckee go west through Emigrant Gap, Alta, Colfax, Auburn, Sacramento, Woodbridge, Stockton, Oakland, and San Francisco.

This route from Ogden is known as the Overland trail and it is an easier way to reach San Francisco than by the southern route.

The total distance from Chicago to San Francisco is 2,813.5 miles.

Trained crews are going out from Jackson for the purpose of placing "safety first" signs all along the Lincoln highway from New York to San Francisco.

Although the primary purpose of the signs is to safeguard the tourist on his long trek across country to the Panama-Pacific exposition, they are yet made sufficiently substantial to last an indefinite time.

HYATT

QUIET ROLLER BEARINGS

Adjustment Not Necessary

The bearings in the transmission or rear axle of your car are subjected to a lot of severe use. Some bearings wear and get noisy under this work, and to take up this wear they are provided with adjustment.

It is never necessary to adjust Hyatt Roller Bearings—they are made right in the first place, and stay that way.

The hollow spiral rollers of Hyatt Bearings render them self-oiling and self-cleaning, obviating the necessity of adjustment, because they do not wear enough to warrant it.

This feature of Hyatt Quiet Bearings renders them "fool proof" in the hands of the most inexperienced user.

RUGGED TREAD

"Extra Service"
Facts About

FEDERAL
Double-Cable-Base Tires

Heavy endless double steel cables in the base of the tire positively eliminate rim-cutting, tube-pinching, blowouts just above the rim and the danger of a tire blowing from the rim.

Seventeen years of experience puts extra endurance into the Federal process of combining fabric and rubber.

Eighth of an inch extra thickness in the sidewall of Federal Tires is extra protection against rut and curbstone wear.

Federal Treads—The "Rugged Tread" is genuinely scientific protection against skidding. The "wrapped tread" process adds hundreds of miles to the life of every Federal plain casing.

In their mileage and safety Federal Tires are truly "Extra Service" Tires.

OUR COUNTRY

The Germans Tell Us All About It in a Four Color German Map of the United States Made in Germany by the Germans. This Map Will Appear in Every Copy of Next Sunday's Tribune

¶ THE TRIBUNE next Sunday will print a four color German map of the United States. It is a map of extraordinary detail. It was made in Germany and is being sold throughout the kaiser's empire.

¶ The map contains far and away more information about the United States than any map that was ever printed in the United States or anywhere else.

¶ It shows our exports as compared with our imports. It shows all of our industrial centers.

¶ It shows our important railroads.

¶ It shows our forts and fortifications.

¶ It is a most comprehensive exposition of America, and emphasizes to the nth degree the remarkable efficiency of the Germans.

¶ You will find this extraordinary feature on the first page of the color section of

Because Summer delayed until Inventory time, women can buy

$3.50 & $4 "Red Cross" Pumps at, a Pair, $2.45

No trade mark in women's footwear is better known than the "Red Cross." It was adopted as an emblem of conspicuous merit and holds its reputation from season to season.

There are seven hundred pairs in this lot, each with the Red Cross label—each perfect in every way. None reduced for any reason except that it has been a very backward season for low footwear. $2.45

The lot consists of the very latest colored top colonial pumps and the range of sizes will meet the needs of every woman. We cannot put them on the stock sheets, so a great sale is necessary and the prices drop from $3.50 and $4.00 to $2.45. Third Floor.

FOR SALE—REALIZATION OF A PERFECT HOME SITE.

HIGH LAKE.

Selecting a home site is a serious matter. The comfort and happiness of the family are involved. We suggest to homeseekers that they inspect the various subdivisions and properties offered and make careful comparison of their attractions and advantages. By so doing they will be enabled to make a wise and judicious selection—one which they will never regret. We assert that High Lake offers inducements which raise it above competition, and investigation will prove that we speak advisedly.

Big Land Opening
$9 Per Acre
July 6th Only

OF SWIGART'S NEW DICKSON TOWNSHIP TRACT.

5,000 ACRES in Manistee Co., Mich. Nothing for sale until excursion people arrive on ground. Every one has equal chance of selection. No sale less than 40 or more than 160 acres.

$50 down, $7.50 monthly on each 40 acres or annual payments; or 5 per cent off on sales for all cash. None of the land will be offered again at this low price after excursion leaving our Chicago offices Tuesday, July 6th, at 11:30 a. m. Entire expenses from Chicago and return, including railroad fare, board, Pullman berth, etc., $15.50.

Write or call at once for map-circular giving all conditions of this opening. Also literature describing these choice general farming and fruit lands, well adapted for stock raising, dairying, poultry, truck, etc., near railroads and good towns and handy by boat or rail to markets of Chicago, Grand Rapids, and Detroit. The lands adjoin a developed farm district.

A considerable number who cannot go on the excursion have expressed their wish to purchase on our selection. This can be done by sending deposits of $50 per 40 prior to the time the excursion leaves, with the understanding that excursionists have first choice until 9 o'clock Thursday evening, July 8th, thus giving them full opportunity to select lands while on the ground and 2 hours on the train returning to Chicago to finish purchases. After that hour deposits of absentee purchasers will be applied in the order as received, as to quality of selections to the best of our judgment. If all the lands are sold deposits left over will be returned. Privilege of exchange will be granted to such absentee purchasers on an even basis for any lands remaining unsold in Swigart's Dickson Township Tract, when they later make a trip of inspection, or for any other lands in the Swigart Tract of 50,000 acres, on the basis of July, 1915, price list.

With the return arrival of the excursion train in Chicago, this sale will be closed. This is an opportunity of a lifetime for the wage-earner, farm renter, or farm hand to get a Farm Home. Think of it! Only $360 for 40 acres! The time is short, so you must act promptly. Office remains open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

AUTOMOBILES—ELECTRIC.

The Best—Least Expensive City Car Is a Refinished

Woods Electric.

Why run to catch street cars, or crowd into elevated trains, when a Woods Electric can be bought and maintained so easily and cheaply?

Remember that any member of the family can drive a Woods—right from the start, with safety and confidence. No tire trouble—simplest possible automobile. Clean, quiet, and absolutely dependable.

The refinished Woods Electrics we are offering at attractive prices would pass for new machines almost anywhere. With new batteries and tires, the service they give is equal to new—in fact, better than many new cars you can buy, which have not been refinished and overhauled carefully by factory experts. The Woods is the Only real electric car factory in Chicago.

Prices of used and refinished cars, $250 to $2,100. Better values have never been offered anywhere than right now. Come in and pick out the car of your choice and get the benefit of it during the pleasant weather. We'll make the price right.

Calls by telephone, or letters, city or country, receive prompt and careful attention. Demonstrating cars at your command by appointment and without obligation. Always glad to show our best bargains to those interested.

BEATEN BURGLAR GETS LOOT

Clings to $100 Plunder While Constable Breaks Blackjack Over Head.

Halley Lane, constable of Leyden township, who resides on a small farm at Division street and the St. Paul railroad in River Grove, announced yesterday he nearly killed a burglar he found in his home on Friday night.

"I was out late on business," he said, "and arriving home at 9:30, I met the burglar in the front room.

"I drew my blackjack and thumped him a couple of times on the head, breaking the blackjack and spilling its lead shot filler all over the floor. But the burglar jumped out the front window and escaped. When I turned on the light I found that about $100 worth of clothes and silverware were missing."

NEVILLE JURY DISAGREES.

Woman Fails to Get Verdict for Injuries After Case Is 20 Years in Courts.

After being out sixteen hours jurors before Judge Shopen who for a week have heard the testimony in the suit brought by Mary Geraldine Neville against the city of Chicago for $50,000 damages failed to agree and were dismissed yesterday. For twenty years Miss Neville has been seeking damages. The injury occurred June 18, 1895, and the case has been tried four times. The first trial resulted in a verdict of $9,000. The suit is based upon injuries sustained by the plaintiff due to a defective sidewalk.

CROWN SCORES "SURPRISES" IN BATH MURDERS

Introduces Testimony Which Tightens Net Around Alleged Slayer of Three Wives.

LONDON, June 26.—The crown scored today in the "bride's bath" murder trial by offering a "surprise" witness against George Joseph Smith, charged with the murder of three of his six wives, who were found dead in their bathtubs.

William Haines of Blackpool swore that after the nude body of Alice Burnham Smith was removed from the tub he found a quantity of woman's hair there. His testimony was presented to support the crown's theory that Smith drowned his three wives by holding their heads under water. Dr. Billings testified a postmortem showed the woman was drowned.

W. A. Hargreaves, a Blackpool undertaker, testified that Smith requested the cheapest possible burial for Alice Burnham Smith.

Insurance Man Testifies.

An insurance inspector testified that in October, 1913, Smith invested in life insurance and told him that in January, 1914, he would have aonther $2,500 to invest. Alice Burnham Smith was found dead on Dec. 12, 1913, and her will brought Smith exactly $2,500. The crown then began presenting testimony in the case of Margaret Elizabeth Lofty, the prisoner's sixth wife, found dead in a bathtub while on her honeymoon at High Gate, Dec. 17, 1914, after willing to the prisoner $3,500.

Under the name of John Lloyd, Smith, according to Scotland Yard detectives, married the Lofty woman exactly three months after he had taken a fifth wife. Mrs. Emma Heiss of Orchard road, High Gate, testified that the prisoner, with the Lofty woman, attempted to rent rooms in her lodging house at High Gate. Smith first inquired if she had a bathroom, she testified. She said she did not like Smith's looks and declined to admit the couple. Later they took rooms in Bismarck road at High Gate.

Death of Sixth Wife.

Other witnesses testified that the prisoner's sixth wife visited a lawyer and made her will on the morning of Dec. 18, the day after the wedding, leaving $3,500 to Smith. The "honeymooners" took a walk at noon. Early in the afternoon, witnesses testified, Smith ran downstairs shouting:

"My God! She's dead—in the tub!"

Boarders rushed upstairs, closely following Smith. Their testimony corroborated that of witnesses who told of the mysterious deaths of the prisoner's other wives. They said they saw the prisoner bending over the tub holding the head of the dead woman.

LANDIS FINES WOMAN $100 FOR GIVING PRIZE EUCHRES.

Federal Jurist Calls Mrs. Sarah E. Foster's Scheme "Most Vicious Form of Gambling."

Characterizing the public euchre parties for women conducted by Mrs. Sarah E. Foster, who charged an admission fee of 50 cents and offered an extensive array of prizes, as a "most vicious form of gambling," Judge Kenesaw M. Landis, in the United States District court, fined her $100 and costs yesterday. Mrs. Foster had pleaded guilty to violation of the postal laws before Judge Landis Thursday.

In fixing punishment the judge said that the party project was "insidious in that it appealed to women," and told Mrs. Foster that her sex had saved her from a more severe penalty.

"If you were not a woman I would deal more harshly with you," said the judge, commenting on the various aspects of the case and the defendant's claim that she is without financial support to defend herself in a trial.

FOUR CITY OFFICIALS OF NASHVILLE ARE INDICTED.

Charged Municipality Has Been Looted of Between $100,000 and $200,000 in Street Contracts.

Nashville, Tenn., June 26.—Indictments were returned today against City Commissioner Lyle Andrews, City Controller Miles Burns, and Assistant City Treasurer J. B. West charging larceny of public books and records and receiving stolen property.

This followed the arrest last night of C. A. Myers, city treasurer, on charges of misappropriating $10 city interest money. It is charged in a bill filed for a city receivership that the city has been looted of between $100,000 and $200,000 in street contracts.

More indictments will follow, striking other city officials, according to rumors that are flying about.

Attorneys for the defense indicated in conference with the court and Prosecutor Rucker today that they wished a speedy trial.

BLOW GIVEN LOCKER LAW.

Tennessee Statute Prohibiting Storage of Liquor in Clubs Declared Unconstitutional.

Memphis, Tenn., June 26.—Tennessee's new club locker law, prohibiting the storage of individual liquor supplies in club lockers, was declared unconstitutional today by Judge Jesse Edington in criminal court. If upheld, Judge Edington's decision will have widespread effect, as all clubs were ordered to abandon the locker system when the law became effective.

The War in Dollars and Cents

By Charles A. Conant

Author of "A History of Modern Banks of Issue," and "Wall Street and the Country"

THE effects of the present war in Europe and the East upon business and finance are the constant preoccupation of business men, financiers, and economists. Some misconceptions and differences of opinion have developed, as the result in many cases of hasty generalization upon insufficient data; but there is no division of opinion upon the general proposition that upon the ministers of finance of the contending countries will fall a task, after the war is over, second only in its perplexities and intellectual travail to the labors of Von Hindenburg or Joffre or Sir John French on the field of battle.

Upon the subject of the cost of the war, there is pretty substantial agreement. It was calculated at the beginning by several economists of reputation, that a general war, involving the principal European powers, would cost $50,000,000 per day. This works out at an outlay of about $1,500,000,000 per month, and about $18,000,000,000 per year. These figures have proved to be substantially accurate and were accepted early in March by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the United States. Other estimates, running up to two or three times these amounts, are based upon fanciful calculations of the actuarial value of the lives destroyed and upon other factors which are apart from the sober details of public finance.

To the man in the street, it may seem remarkable that $18,000,000,000 can be spent in a year, when the entire stock of gold money in the world is only about $8,500,000,000. Of course, to the trained economist, the amount of gold or of any other form of currency is but a side issue. Some gold may be required for the settlement of international balances, but even this requirement is being waived or postponed, to a large extent, in the execution of the big contracts which are being placed by the fighting countries in the United States.

EVEN if the settlement of international balances were made in actual gold, it would constitute but a small proportion of the hundreds of millions paid for war supplies. For the most part, such payments, especially when made within the limits of the same country, are made by the system of clearing, which really rests upon barter. A check upon the Imperial Bank of Germany, drawn by the Minister of War in favor of the Krupp works fully compensates Frau Krupp and her husband for the "Busy Berthas" which they sold to the German army for battering down the walls of Liege and Antwerp. Fortunately for the German bank, which is hanging on to gold with the grip of death, it is not necessary that a dollar of gold, or even in bank-notes, should pass in the transaction. Undoubtedly the feverish activity which is caused by war in certain fields calls for an adequate amount of currency, but this is being provided in most of the countries at war by the issue of additional bank-notes and the courageous policy of the central banks in rediscounting commercial paper for the banks which are not equipped with the same power or lack the same courage.

The question is naturally being asked on all hands, what will be the future of general business when the war stops? Will it require the entire energy of civilized communities to replace the waste of war, or will the return of millions of men to productive pursuits create a producing power which will soon restore the world to its old state of prosperity?

ANSWERS to these questions involve many factors, one of which was pointed out more than half a century ago by John Stuart Mill. The doctrine which he laid down was that all that part of the expense of warfare which was met by changes in the form of current consumption left its impress on the wealth of the community only for the year or the season in which the waste occurred.

The permanent machinery of production, which in his time represented little more than farm houses, dirt roads, and a few factories, has been multiplied many-fold, however, in its relation to annual productive power. In so far as this mechanism has been destroyed or seriously injured, it will take new savings to restore it. Probably, however, when the debris of war is cleared away it will be found that the actual injury to railways, mines and factories is only a small percentage of their total value and that this again is only a small percentage of the thousands of millions which are invested in the machinery of production and transportation throughout the world.

UNFORTUNATELY the cost of modern war is such that not only the present, but the past and the future, have been mortgaged to obtain a large part of the fifteen billions which has already been blown away in powder and shell. If the ministers of finance of the reconstruction era are to preserve their respective countries from financial ruin, they must devise a system of taxation which will raise practically double the amount which has heretofore been required for interest on the public debt and for compensation to veterans and their families. At the same time they must keep intact that elaborate machinery of social service which has been so extended by modern states, especially in England and Germany. If they lay heavy burdens upon the back of labor, the laborer is likely to escape by emigrating to North or South America, where such burdens are still light. On the other hand, if they increase the already heavy burdens which are imposed upon capital, through income, inheritance and corporation taxes, capital itself may flit across the national boundaries and leave nothing behind but agricultural impoverishment, general destitution and the breakdown of civil government which proved the undoing of the Roman Empire.

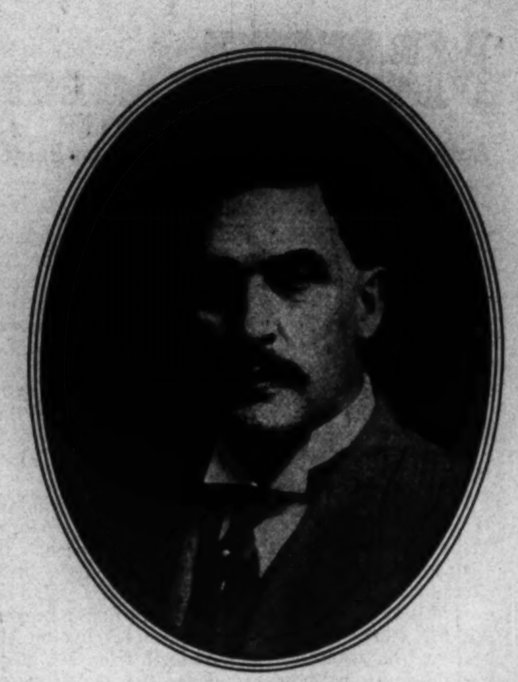
Convict judges presiding in the chapel court at Sing Sing Prison



THOMAS MOTT OSBORNE
Warden at Sing Sing

MAKING MEN OVER AT SING SING

Revised and Approved
BY THOMAS MOTT OSBORNE
Warden of Sing Sing Prison

M.W.L.

THE other day a plaintiff and defendant faced each other in a Court of Justice which, unlike any other court with which they had had to do, they believed to be functioning for the highest good of both. There were five judges on the bench, a shorthand reporter, counsel, witnesses and thirty or forty spectators in the seats reserved for the public. The case was one of alleged corruption in an election.

It happens every day? Not at all; for all the participants, from presiding judge to defendant, were convicts in Sing Sing. Their court room was the prison chapel. The politics they were striving to keep pure was their own system of self government. The plaintiff, an Italian who could neither read nor write English, had asked the aid of a compatriot in filling out a ballot. He wished to vote for a certain man as the representative of his shop in the inmates' Board of Delegates, but believed that the defendant had taken advantage of his ignorance to substitute the name of another candidate. A clean cut case. Just how it was decided is of no importance. But it spells a revolution in prison methods. Under the senseless tyranny that Thomas Mott Osborne found in vogue when he took charge of Sing Sing on December 1, 1914, the idea of convicts having a vote on any question would have been considered moonshine. That they might be trusted to try their fellows, with power to acquit or inflict punishment, would have fairly terrified the old-fashioned keeper. In four months, they were governing themselves and holding the scales of justice at least as evenly as the citizens of any free community in the United States.

The warden was not present when this election case was heard. He does not find it desirable to make his authority felt unless an appeal to the warden as a higher court is taken, or unless a problem becomes so tangled that the prisoners cannot straighten it out for themselves. The last in which he had to interfere was serious, but by no means discouraging. A man in the boiler shop had been badly pounded in a fight and laid up in hospital. An investigation was opened, but the court found itself baffled by a conspiracy of silence. The sixty odd members of the boiler squad declined in turn to admit that they had even seen the fight. There had been no fight, as far as they were concerned. Consciously or unconsciously, they had reverted to the old ethics of the penitentiary, never to "squeal" upon a comrade.

SOME of the men were lying. The warden explained to them patiently that the condition of the victim proved beyond doubt that he had been engaged with more than one assailant. Nor could such an affair have taken place without attracting the attention of many in the shop. The silent witnesses, as well as those who had been in the fight, were lying. Although the tribunal that was trying to fix the guilt was their own, they were deliberately refusing their cooperation. No democratic form of government could exist under such circumstances. If this spirit gained headway, the rule of the keeper with his rifle and club would have to be restored.

The warden's argument impressed the men, but did not break their silence. He then told them that he would transfer six of their number to Dannemora, a State prison where the old order still prevails in all its rigor. He could not ask them to select the six to be thus disciplined, but they might vote for twenty-five men whom they wished to remain at Sing Sing. There was very little justice in this arrangement; some, perhaps all, of the six would be innocent. But since the squad would not help him to find the offenders, he was compelled to take a leaf from the book of the reactionaries.

The general consternation at this announcement was a tribute to present conditions in Sing Sing. About the last thing that the men wished to contemplate was the risk of being sent to Dannemora. They had gone too far in this particular instance to make the frank confession that the warden had hoped for, but they saw clearly that in the future they must work shoulder to shoulder in support of the law and order which alone could justify the measure of liberty that had been extended to them.

Emphasis is laid on the prisoners' court at Sing Sing, because of its fundamental importance. It is, of course, only part of the plan of reform, which is based upon the Mutual Welfare League. Mr. Osborne founded the League at Auburn prison, nearly two years ago, after he voluntarily had spent a week in that institution as a convict. When he became warden of Sing Sing, he brought the idea with him. Any good he may have accomplished has been by and through the organization. Without it, the warden of Sing Sing could never be more than a kindly autocrat. He might do away with some abuses, but his charges would remain enemies of society, upon whom society was revenging itself, while stupidly depriving them of any incentive to come to terms. With the League, he is able to reclaim much waste human material, by restoring to men their self-respect and hope for the future, and by teaching them the lessons in citizenship which their presence in jail proves that they did not learn outside.

What then is the Mutual Welfare League?

AT SING SING, it is a republic within the prison walls embracing all but a handful of the 1,700 inmates. Its form, its constitution and methods of operation were decided upon by the men themselves. In Mr. Osborne's earliest conception of the movement, he thought that a board of reformers from the outside would have to evolve a scheme and impose it ready-made upon those whom it was to benefit. He realized this mistake in time. Since self-government was to be the most important feature of the League, it was imperative that its members should be free to choose how they should be governed. There need be no fear of giving them too much license. As Mr. Gladstone once wrote when it was suggested that home rule should be kept from the Irish until they had developed sufficiently to make proper use of it: "It is liberty alone that fits men for liberty."

The prisoners are grouped according to the shops in which they work. Each shop elects its delegates to a central governing body, the basis of representation being one delegate for every forty men. The delegates in turn elect an executive committee. Judges are appointed by the warden, as it was thought better to place them beyond the reach of politics. The constitution and by-laws are not unlike those of other mutual welfare organizations, but that they will be lived up to is insured by an honor system, the working of which is something new and fine in the dark history of penology.

The prison official of yesterday understood only one way of performing his functions as a guardian of society—he must keep the convicts safely behind the bars. To this end, he invented a series of cruel restrictions. The men were forbidden, for instance, to talk to each other in shop or mess hall. They might not even glance at the faces of their fellows. During their brief hours of recreation in the yard, they were watched and repressed almost as sternly as while they were at work. The slightest infraction of the rules was punished by confinement in the terrible dungeon known as the "cooler," and by fines altogether out of proportion to the offence. A man whose labor earned him the generous sum of one cent and a half a day might lose three months' savings for smiling at a comrade or muttering his resentment at a keeper's brutality.

It inevitably followed that a convict's first aim was to hide his feelings. All his intelligence and powers of observation were directed to a close study of the guards. He became an automaton, not a man, whose face one could not read. He had no sympathy with a single human being outside his unfortunate class and had reason to think that no one had any sympathy with him. His expertness in wearing his mask was tragic and baffling. The prison officials knew less about him than about a wild beast. They never saw him in a normal and natural frame of mind.

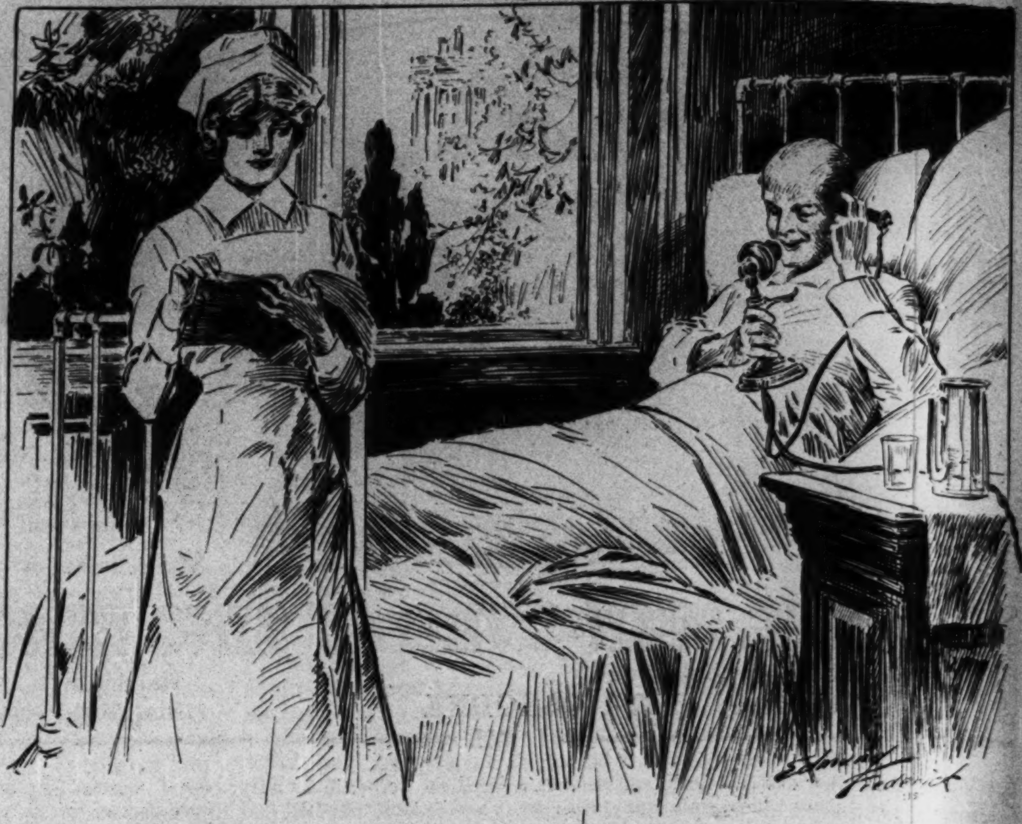
HOW unnecessary were the dehumanizing practices that brought this about is revealed by the daily routine in Sing Sing. The guards have been removed. They are no longer in close touch with the convicts and have no authority to coerce them, except in the rare instances when the bounds of decorum have been overstepped. The prisoners have become real men, instead of the (Continued on page 473)

MR. BUSBY'S TELEPHONE AFFINITY

BY ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

Author of "Pigs is Pigs," "The Incubator Baby," etc.

Illustrations by E. Frederick



She offered, when not needed elsewhere, to hold the telephone book and call the numbers to him

ROGER BUSBY sat propped up in his hospital bed, his broken leg extended in its plaster cast, and an open magazine in his lap. His was a private room but Miss Loring—his nurse— was shared by a number of other patients located on the same corridor and as there were other patients more in need of constant attention, Mr. Busby was left alone the greater part of the time, with a push button on the end of a wire with which to call Miss Loring when he needed her.

The time was late April and through his window Mr. Busby could see the buds bursting in the tree tops. The air was balmy and Mr Busby was conscious of a feeling of unrest. He was a little bored and a little stung by the eternal urge of spring and love. Had he been at home in his small Iowa town, without a broken leg, Mr. Busby would have clapped his hat on his head and he would have sallied forth from his dingy law office to walk briskly down the main street. There, undoubtedly, he would have met some one of the number of maids or widows with whom he constantly conducted a playful flirtation and he would have indulged in the first ice cream soda of the season and a brisk exchange of badinage. After this tribute to Spring he would have returned to his law office with a throbbing pulse and great cheerfulness. But he was not in Riverbank, he was in a hospital bed in New York.

Had he been in a hospital in Riverbank, his glass-topped bedside table would have been covered with flowers sent by Marjories and Mays and Marthas. Notes of cheery tenor would have been piled on the table. The telephone would ring——

Mr. Busby looked at the telephone on his bedside table. It seemed the epitome of uselessness. He did not know a soul in the whole city of New York. There was no one he could ring up and chat with. The telephone seemed to mock him, saying "Here I am. I am the ear of a million fair ladies but for you I am deaf."

Mr. Busby put out his hand and lifted the black metal instrument to his bed. He rested it on his unharmed thigh and placed his hand on the receiver and chuckled as he thought how surprised some one would be if he lifted the receiver from the hook and called a number and began a conversation. He might, for instance, call up a Vanderbilt or an Astor or a Maude Adams or a Mary Pickford. He might begin "Hello! This is Roger. Yes, Roger—Roger Busby. Don't you remember me?" He smiled with enjoyment of the idea. He put the telephone instrument back on the bedside table and, leaning as far as he could, pawed the thick telephone directory toward him. For five minutes he turned over the pages and then he chuckled mischievously.

THERE were nine hundred and seventy-six pages in the telephone directory, and, deducting forty-two in the front and three in the back, there were nine hundred and thirty-one pages, three columns of closely printed names to the page. There were thousands and thousands of names and it pleased Mr. Busby to think that—bedfast as he was in a white room in a hospital—he could, in an instant, speak to and mistify any one of all those thousands. He turned the pages slowly, wondering which number he should call first. Then he had an inspiration that made him smile.

Mr. Busby tore a sheet of paper into slips and on them he wrote the names of the many stations—Orchard, Bryant, Murray Hill, Chelsea, Spring, Rector. He included the Queens and Brooklyn and Bronx and Richmond stations—Midwood, Prospect, New Dorp, Fordham, and the rest. On other slips he wrote figures—1, 2, 3, 4, and so on. He shuffled the names of the exchange stations and drew one at random. He drew four of the slips bearing the figures. The combination was Union 7698. Mr. Busby reached for the telephone instrument and called the number.

"Hello!" he said. "This is Mr. Busby speaking. Mr. Roger Busby. Who is that?"

"This is Hornbeckle & Wirts, the butchers," a coarse male voice answered. "Who'd you say was calling?"

"Never mind," said Mr. Busby. "I have the wrong number. Sorry!"

He had expected this. It was not to be hoped that a sweet female voice would answer at the first trial. Mr. Busby shuffled his slips again. During the forenoon he let his voice enter the offices or business places of a button works, a florist, a laundry, a marine insurance concern, a paper box factory, and a dozen other concerns. He was like a man who opens a door, looks inside, says "Beg pardon!" and backs out again. It was two o'clock before he heard the first female voice.

"Hello!" said the voice.

"Hello!" answered Mr. Busby. "This is Mr. Busby—Mr. Roger Busby. I'm in the hospital with a broken leg. I don't know anyone in New York, and I'm bored. I called your number at random and I don't know who you are. I want someone to talk to, to wile away the——"

"Click!" went the receiver on the hook at the other end of the wire, and Mr. Busby grinned and shuffled his slips again.

THE late afternoon yielded better results, numerically. He reached half a dozen female ears.

"Hello! This is Mr. Busby—Mr. Roger Busby. I'm in the hospital with a broken leg. I don't know anyone in New York and I'm bored. I called your number at random and I don't know who you are. I want some one to talk to, to wile away the——"

The answers he received were various: "Quit kidding!" "The meesus she ban out; she ban back putty soon maybe." "Say, do you think I've got time to spend with a nut?" "Now, Charley! I know you. You can't fool me, Charley. Say—Oh!" The receiver clicked. Perhaps Charley had entered just then. "Aw! Ring off!"

It was not encouraging but Mr. Busby enjoyed it. It was gentle adventuring. Once the answer came in a child's voice, not quite clear, as if the child was standing tiptoe. "Do you want to speak to mamma? Mamma is taking a bath now. I—I guess she'll be down pretty soon." Mr. Busby reserved that number and called it again "pretty soon." Mamma wasted no time. "What impertinence!" she exclaimed, and that was the end of it. At each rebuff Mr. Busby chuckled gleefully. Occasionally he called a number that was no number at all and some pleasant voiced central so informed him. He knew better than to try to inveigle a busy central operator into a conversation. He begged her pardon and shuffled the slips again.

Toward evening the slips gave him "Midvale 0423" and Mr. Busby called this.

"Hello!" he said.

"Hello!" a pleasant voice answered.

"This is Mr. Busby—Mr. Roger Busby. I'm in the hospital with a broken leg. I don't know anyone in New York——"

"A—h!" answered the voice, breathing sympathy for his misfortune, and Mr. Busby sat up straighter.

"I don't know anyone in New York, and I'm bored," he said. "I called your number at random and I don't know who you are——"

"I'm——"

"No! don't tell me!" Mr. Busby urged. "I don't want to know who you are. I want someone to talk to, to wile away the tedious hours. I've been calling numbers all day and——"

"How did you get my number?" asked the pleasant voice.

"I wrote all the exchange stations on slips. I wrote figures on slips. I drew at random," Mr. Busby explained. "Will you have pity on a bedridden individual and talk to me once in awhile? You can't know what it is to be clamped down in a hospital bed like this when all spring is budding."

"Oh, I can imagine it, if I don't know," said the voice. "Did you truly just hit on my number by chance?"

"Just as I told you," said Mr. Busby.

She seemed to consider this a moment or two.

"And you are really bed-fast in a hospital? I'm sorry! I'm sorry for anyone who has to be sick on days like these. What would you want me to talk about if I talked with you?"

"About yourself and myself, of course," said Mr. Busby. "The two most interesting subjects in the world. Why should we talk of anything else—you and I? Don't you see what a wonderful opportunity it is? I know I have never yet had a chance to say about myself all I wanted to say. I have never been permitted to tell anyone all the interesting things I find I am. So let us talk of me, by all means."

She laughed.

"HOW exquisitely delightful that will be!" she said. "You can talk of you and I will talk of me. And if the wonderful things we have to say crowd too thickly upon us we can both talk at once. You are quite young, aren't you?"

"Shamefully young," said Mr. Busby, grinning as he thought of the smooth dome of his bald head and his forty odd years. And you—say something about life—about Life with a capital L."

"Why?"

"Then I'll tell you how old you are," said Mr. Busby. There was a silence and then she spoke:

"Life," she said, "is the opportunity given us by Nature to prove to ourselves that we are less than gods."

"Is that a quotation?" Mr. Busby asked.

"No, original with me."

"You are thirty-eight. You are not married, or if you are you have no children One moment till I think that over again. 'Life is the opportunity given us by Nature to prove to ourselves that we are less than gods.' And you say that at the end of such a beautiful Spring day as this has been! I see unhappiness in it."

There was nothing of unhappiness in the laugh that greeted his guess. It was quite merry.

"It would not be good for us if we thought we were more than gods, would it?" she asked.

"Probably not. Not in the long run."

"And wouldn't it be at the end of such a beautiful

Spring day as this that we would think we were more than gods if life had not set us right? Aren't we all gods when we are very young? Before life has given us the opportunity to prove to ourselves that we are mere mortals—even on beautiful Spring days?"

"I beg your pardon! I maligned you. You are twenty-three," said Mr. Busby.

"Why am I twenty-three and not thirty-eight?" she asked.

"Because when we are thirty-eight we do not make epigrams to convince ourselves we are not gods—we know we are not. And I think you have dark hair—either very dark brown or black."

"What! with a pale blue ribbon in it?"

"Is that the truth?"?

"Of course it is the truth."

"Then your hair is light?"

"I always wear pale blue ribbons in it, when there are ribbons in it at all."

"You are not an elderly authoress?"

"Heavens, no!"

"And you don't wear morning wrappers in the afternoon?"

"Mercy, no!"

"Then your hair is light."

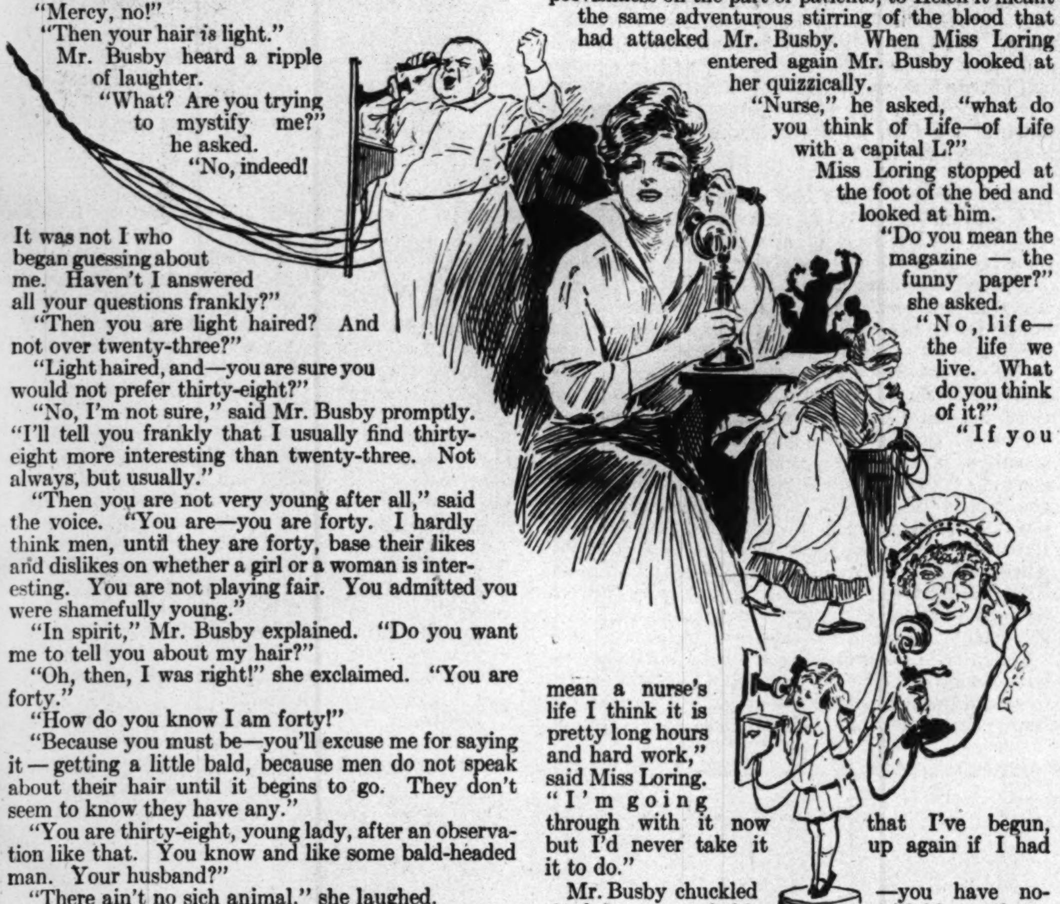
Mr. Busby heard a ripple of laughter.

"What? Are you trying to mystify me?" he asked.

"No, indeed! It was not I who began guessing about me. Haven't I answered all your questions frankly?"



"Then you are light haired? And not over twenty-three?"

"Light haired, and—you are sure you would not prefer thirty-eight?"

"No, I'm not sure," said Mr. Busby promptly. "I'll tell you frankly that I usually find thirty-eight more interesting than twenty-three. Not always, but usually."

"Then you are not very young after all," said the voice. "You are—you are forty. I hardly think men, until they are forty, base their likes and dislikes on whether a girl or a woman is interesting. You are not playing fair. You admitted you were shamefully young."

"In spirit," Mr. Busby explained. "Do you want me to tell you about my hair?"

"Oh, then, I was right!" she exclaimed. "You are forty."

"How do you know I am forty!"

"Because you must be—you'll excuse me for saying it—getting a little bald, because men do not speak about their hair until it begins to go. They don't seem to know they have any."

"You are thirty-eight, young lady, after an observation like that. You know and like some bald-headed man. Your husband?"

"There ain't no sich animal," she laughed.

"Then you are not thirty-eight. You are—" he paused to consider—"you are twenty-eight. You are twenty-eight and you know a great many men. Let me see! You are a member of a country club or some such organization. You dance the new dances. You are twenty-eight, and when you sit out a dance you do it from preference and there are puffy stout men, somewhat bald, who come wiping their foreheads and beg to be permitted to sit the dances out with you. There may be one of them who quotes bits of Plato to you, or slings bits of Epictetus into quizzical remarks. You may not know it but he has been a great factor in your education. Every girl should have a clean-minded, puffy bachelor friend of forty. A man who can quote without spectacles."

"So you are forty!" she guessed.

"Would a youth go adventuring through a telephone list?"

"No. He would try to flirt with his nurse," she agreed. She paused. Probably she put her hand over the enunciator. "I'm sorry, Mr. Forty," she said when she spoke again, "but I must dress for dinner. I suppose your tray will come floating in on the arms of a fair maid in a cap before long."

"Just one moment before you go!" Mr. Busby exclaimed. "You'll let me call you up again? After dinner, perhaps? Then I should know your name."

"Helen," she said promptly; "and yours?"

"Have you forgotten it so soon?"

"I don't think I quite got it."

"It is Roger."

"Very well, then Roger, you may call me up again after dinner. In two hours? Good-bye!"

"Good-bye!" said Mr. Busby, and he hung his receiver on the hook and put the instrument back on the bedside table. He was smiling pleasantly. It had been delightful to angle thus in the unknown and discover a kindred soul, and it had been especially delightful to trifle thus over ages and hair. It was good amusement to build up a human being—especially a woman—bit by bit in this way and to find her responsive. He was still smiling when Miss Loring entered with his tray.

"Well, nurse," he said cheerfully, "this has been a beautiful day."

"Yes," she said, "on days like this it is hard to keep the temperature just right in the rooms. Days like this are very tiring for us. Everyone wants attention."

"Stirrings of Spring in the blood," said Mr. Busby.

"Something, anyway," said the nurse. "Is your tray all right?"

"Very satisfactory," said Mr. Busby, and he set to work.

He smiled as Miss Loring left the room. There was, he said to himself, a vast difference in women. Here was Miss Loring, absolutely matter of fact, and there was "Helen," with a mind. To the little nurse Spring meant only a difficulty in temperatures and peevishness on the part of patients; to Helen it meant the same adventurous stirring of the blood that had attacked Mr. Busby. When Miss Loring entered again Mr. Busby looked at her quizzically.

"Nurse," he asked, "what do you think of Life—of Life with a capital L?"

Miss Loring stopped at the foot of the bed and looked at him.

"Do you mean the magazine — the funny paper?" she asked.

"No, life—the life we live. What do you think of it?"

"If you mean a nurse's life I think it is pretty long hours and hard work," said Miss Loring. "I'm going through with it now that I've begun, but I'd never take it up again if I had it to do."

Mr. Busby chuckled—you have noticed it was a habit with him, perhaps. He was vastly amused by the contrasting answers given by Miss Loring and Helen. He knew just such contrasts in his own town of Riverbank. He cleaned his tray and settled back for a comfortable hour and a half. In his mind he arranged the conversation he would have with Helen, and he rearranged it. He imagined her answers to some of the questions he would ask.

Mr. Busby had two propositions he enjoyed proving to his satisfaction over and over again. The first was that all human beings were so unlike at the top that all were interesting; the second was that all human beings were so alike at the bottom that their likeness was interesting. He felt he was a connoisseur of human beings. With the ancient philosophers he laughed at them all, and at himself most of all. He could chuckle over a millionaire's lady who thought herself of other clay than her washerwoman, but he could chuckle quite as freely over the washerwoman for thinking she was made of poorer clay than the millionaire's lady. In his final analysis all women were food-eating, child-bearing animals and all else connected with them were various manifestations of their desire to get food and bear children and nothing else. Some went about it one way, decking their bodies, and some went about it another, decking their minds. At the home dances he divided his attentions about equally between the two, dancing one half the dances with the well-decked in recognition of their worthy efforts and one half with the bright witted for a similar reason. He had not yet decided which kind he would marry when he did marry a little later. He was inclined to believe the self-decking female nearer the norm and therefore the truer to type and the more desirable, but he had to admit that the brighter minds held a remarkable attraction for him. He was reasonably sure that the bright mindedness would come to nothing much after marriage—it would sparkle for other men rather than for him after a few months—but it attracted him none the less. This but convinced him the more that it was a lure, like the garments chosen by other women, but more subtle.

His telephone affinity (as he already called her to himself), Helen, had one advantage over Miss Loring, for instance. Miss Loring, at the end of a telephone wire, would have been quite tiresome. She was attractive to the eye, especially in her nurse's costume. She was sweet-faced and gentle, young and well formed, but all this would be lost at the end of a wire while Helen might be rather homely—although Mr. Busby could not quite believe it—and she still remained attractive, even though many miles of telephone wire intervened. Mr. Busby held Miss Loring in conversation as long as he could and she seemed to enjoy talking with him. For his part he had to admit to himself that he enjoyed looking at her. She left at last, a little rosy in the cheeks and with her eyes sparkling rather more than usual. At first she had been rather afraid of Mr. Busby; now she admitted to herself that he was rather "nice." She stopped at the first mirror to see whether her cap had been at quite the most becoming angle.

MR. BUSBY hardly waited until she was gone before he put out his hand for the telephone instrument. He balanced it on his uninjured thigh and placed the receiver to his ear.

"Hello!" he called.

"Number, please," answered the operator.

"Give me——" Mr. Busby began and paused. He had forgotten the number!

On the bed and on the floor lay the scattered slips of paper, inextricably shuffled, and he had forgotten the number.

"Never mind, it is a mistake," he said, and hung up the receiver. For a philosopher his face was distressingly blank. He looked at the telephone instrument stupidly.

"Well!"

He pushed the instrument onto the bedside table and sat in thought with his hand resting on the bulky telephone book. He drew the book toward him and opened it.

"It was Mil—— or Mel—— or ——. Huh!" He turned over the pages, scanning the names of the exchange stations. He found Melrose and wondered if it had been Melrose. He found Midwood and wondered if it had been Midwood. He found Midvale and wondered if it had been Midvale. There seemed to be no other exchange name that approximated what he seemed to remember and he began at the front of the telephone directory, running his finger down the columns. There were eleven Melrose numbers on the first page. The first was the A. O. U. W. Grand Lodge. The next was a pharmacy. The next said "dresses." One was a stationer and another a butcher. Mr. Busby called the residences.

"I beg pardon," was his formula;" this is Mr. Roger Busby. Is there a lady there named Helen?"

The lady named Helen was, it seemed, invariably not there. Several pages over, and about nine in the evening he discovered a Helen.

"Yes," said the voice, "we have a Helen. She is our cook."

"May I speak to her a moment?"

"I suppose so," was the ungracious response, and after a wait Helen the cook came to the telephone.

"Well, what is it?" this Helen asked crossly.

"I'm Mr. Roger Busby and this afternoon I was speaking to some lady named Helen, and——"

"Well, you wasn't talkin' to me," said Helen the cook and she ended the conversation.

Later than nine Mr. Busby hesitated to call numbers. Even before nine the answers, which earlier had been polite enough as a rule, began to show irritation. One man, who informed Mr. Busby he had got out of bed to answer the telephone spoke most unkindly. He said Mr. Busby was some kind of a fool. Mr. Busby said he knew it.

Sometime the next day the hospital telephone operator, who had to relay the numbers to the central, spoke to the Superintendent of the hospital and he spoke to the Head Nurse, who spoke to Miss Loring. The query was, in effect, whether Mr. Busby, in Room 31, was in his right mind.

"He's callin' all the Melroses in the book, one after another," the operator told the Superintendent, "and he's askin' them is there a Helen there. Honest, if he stays very long I'll have my fingers wore off pushin' plugs. What's he here for?"

"Broken leg. He'll be here at least two weeks more."

"My Lord!" exclaimed

RED BLOOD

THE SEASON BEING late Fall, with gallery exhibits inspiring emulation, Miss Norma Croxton Norby, of Park Avenue, Palm Beach and Lake Placid, took to palette and camel's hair with the determination of doing something really worth while. Her subject was, curiously enough, "At Bay!", the full-length portrait of an harassed Indian chief.

Of course, the model was Mr. Robin Gale, her Iroquois-Algonquin protégé. Born Ta-ron-a-mo, or "Storm Bird," and a chieftain's son, he had, in his fifteenth year, rescued that charming young heiress from the black terror of being lost from her Adirondack camp all night in the great North Woods, and he had been rewarded with a Carlisle schooling. Combining tribal eloquence with pale-face education, he had become a lawyer in the metropolis, and his success was such that at twenty-six, the towering, dark-eyed aborigine promised to become a noted figure in metropolitan legal and political circles.

And an impressive model he made, bared to the waist and crowned with eagle feathers; cheeks, brow and breast ochre-striped, and in his upraised right hand a warrior's tomahawk. Critics say that the fair artist imbued the inert canvas with a flaming aspect; but it betrayed more of the ardor of Love, than the ire of War!

There came a sunny Saturday too seductive for studio or office work, when dusky Robin called for blue-eyed Norma, and carried her out Long-Islandway in his six-cylindered runabout. Nassau County turnpikes, free of motorcycle police, were yielding a pungent, hazy incense to the modern gods of Gasoline, Petroleum and Caoutchouc. At an average gait of thirty-five miles an hour, the twain whirled along, forging up to a roaring, rocking seventy on clear stretches.

MAKING a megaphone of her gauntleted hands, to defeat the thunder of the motor exhaust, the artist leaned toward her broad-shouldered escort.

"Storm Bird!" she cried. "There's a town ahead, and that sign said: 'Slow down to ten miles an hour,' not one hundred. . .

"Now, we can converse without strangling. Is not this a day of days? And never a speed-maniac overtook us; you jockeyed that foreign racing car in the narrow road like a professional. And can I prevail upon you to bring out father's closed car for me tonight at eight-thirty?"

"Charmed, Miss Norby."

"Thanks! And I hope some of today's swiftness will linger in your veins. You see, our family chauffeur will drive me no faster than a foxtrot. So, this evening while the placid Henri is grinding jiggers, fitting thingumbobs and adjusting whirligigs in the garage, you will have to be my unpaid pilot."

"Delighted! To where, please?"

"Madison Square Garden. And, remember, if a single taxicab catches up to us on Broadway I shall go back to a coach-and-pair!"

"Never fear! Since the last Tammany triumph, I almost could do murder on the Island of Manhattan! The traffic squad calls me 'Big Chief' to my face!"

"Fine! Wear evening clothes under your auto coat. The occasion is the Florida Show, you know; and I wish to compare the Seminole Indian display with the Adirondack camps of the Ong-we-hon-we (Superior Men of the Six Nations)—which we both love!"

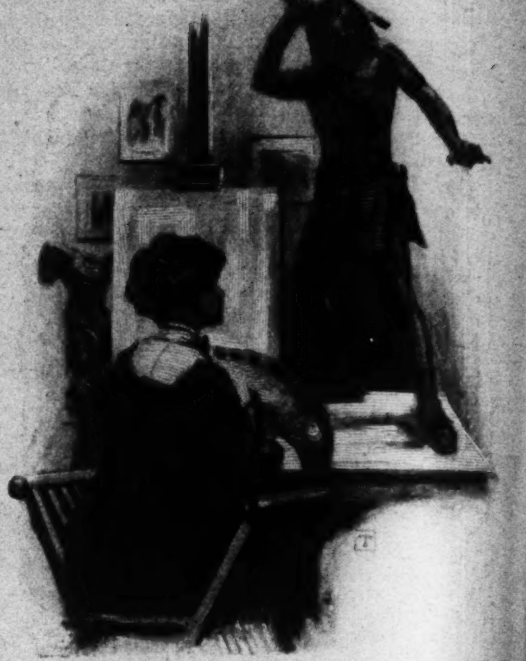
"You are the soul of kindness to say that, Miss—Norma."

Miss Norby blushed becomingly, like a school-girl, to the base of her yellow crown. It was the first time she had ever heard her given name from his guarded lips. Providentially, an open road loomed before them. Mr. Gale judiciously fed more and more gas and spark to the hungry cylinders, and in another half minute further conversation became unnecessary, if not impossible. His blonde passenger was devoutly thankful for this, as never before had her clever tongue been so tied.

MISS Norma Croxton Norby approached a thirty-fifth birthday with its pitiless self-appraisal. An only and motherless child, she had been a dilettante from her girlhood days, traveling when die wanderlust urged, devoting herself to Schubert or Chopin, and even to Beethoven or Liszt, when the taste of music lured her accomplished fingers; and again, reveling in oil at the alluring feel of color. Possessed of all these emotional outlets, she was another example of the many attractive women in this uncloistered world who remain unkissed by choice.

Norma's copper-colored gallant becoming pointedly attentive, it would be necessary for her to consider carefully the mesalliance that impended. She was not one, as has been shown, to accept blindly the attentions of any man, much less those of a Red American Indian—veneered though he be like unto that Society pawn and Fifth Avenue fashion pattern, Wadsworth Nicholas Schuyler, her second cousin, who had consistently proposed marriage to Norma as a birthday gift each year since her eighteenth.

Robin Gale had not only adopted white ways, but he "belonged." Daily, he immersed his stalwart form in cold water, brushed glistening teeth thrice every twenty-four hours and made of manicuring a religious rite. Of a beardless tribe, his firm features bore the clean glint of beaten copper, and he kept a thick shock of straight, blue-black hair severely pompadoured.



The model was Mr. Robin Gale

That Saturday evening the Norby limousine was outrageously hustled down-town through a heavy before-the-theatre traffic. Nothing vehicular, except a Fire Chief's red devil, could have overtaken them! Escaping collision and avoiding arrest by miracles, they arrived safely at the Garden. There, the gracious little lady and her bronzed escort attracted almost as much attention as the exhibits. She was radiant in blue broadcloth and white marabou. He, despite conventional evening clothes and correct top hat, conveyed the impression of a magnificent out-of-doors animal, caged.

HONORING the presence of a favorite Wigwam orator, the Garden band blared forth into "Tammany," followed by "Ogalalla," "My Little Kickapoo" and other popular aboriginal airs. Miss Norby, conscientious musician that she was, found the tunes reminiscent, but smiled with Mr. Gale at this not unpleasing public recognition.

And then, at the Seminole display, the loop of Kismet coiled for the cast. Behind the souvenir counter stood a strikingly handsome brunette girl. Tall and grave, an imperious nose and a scornful mouth gave her that intrinsic stamp of virtue which is a lofty pride beyond the air of wealth or breeding. Alas! Herself honest to the uttermost, dressed in real buckskin garments and with an enormous string of natural claws and teeth about her perfect neck, she was calmly selling imitation wampum and impossible moccasins to the gullible.

Miss Norby imagined the splendid young creature to be a white masquerader, say the booth owner's daughter—so seldom are commercial entities what they seem in adulterated Greater New York. Mr. Gale, instantly recognizing femininity of his own blood, said aloud, with all a chief's haughtiness, and disdaining to bare a sable poll:

"Young woman, kindly show this lady some Indian bead-work, if you have it!"

The Seminole maid looked him up and down deliberately. Then, she beckoned to another clerk and stepped away, remarking over her shoulder in precise English: "Tame Beaver!"

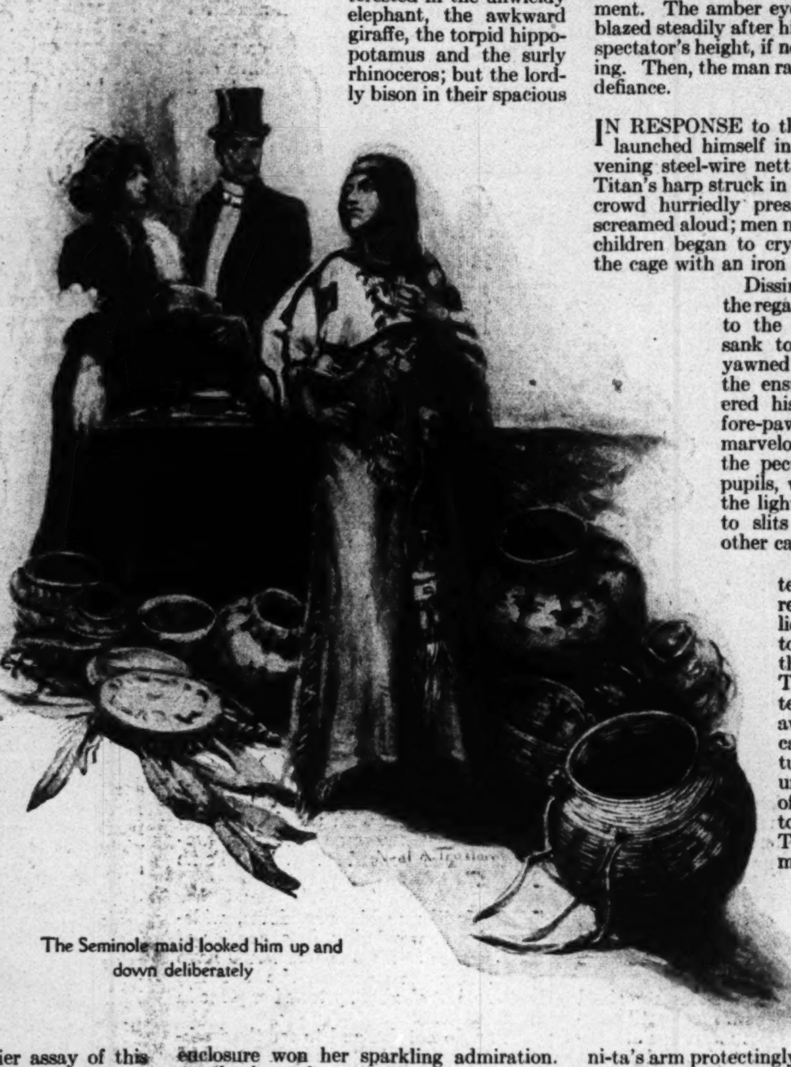
Norma Norby, sensing in the scene a scorn more than Caucasian, laughed nervously. Robin Gale flushed a fiery bronze. He did not mind the slight implied in her turning him over to a subordinate; but the Seminole's two cryptic words cut him to the quick.

Of all the North American wild animals, even the wary mink, the bristling porcupine and the voracious wolverine may be tamed in some degree; but never the solitude-loving beaver. He shuns the white man's settlements, avoids the very streams profaned by lumber-jacks, and makes his lodge in some remote fastness where falls only the foot of the hunter. So, the young squaw meant, derisively, that here was a redskin brave pretending to be that which his birthright forbade, and pandering to pale-face practices.

"Oh, Robin!" whispered Miss Norby, contritely; "speak to the girl in her own language and explain that we did not know she was Indian!"



The Seminole maid looked him up and down deliberately

THE Iroquois-Algonquin, masking the righteous ire of an arrogant buck, removed the offending top-hat and bowed with a humility that might have won over the austere Supreme Court of the United States. Then, he launched into a pigeon-patois picked up at Carlisle, since his Iroquois dialect would have been unintelligible to the Floridan girl. He spoke with directness, as might have spoken his raw brothers of the tepee. . . .

. . . The white lady with him was not his wife, but a very kind patroness. He had been much advanced in knowledge and wealth by her assistance, and was accordingly grateful. Nevertheless, he was still a red man and would uncommonly prize the acquaintance of this high-spirited maid of his own race and belief.

. . . Would she, waiving all conventions red or white, meet him on the morrow, a Sabbath morning, to go a-walking and a-talking, say in the Bronx Zoological Park. There one could get at least within hailing distance of Mother Nature, whose loyal children they both were? . . .

Having made a friendlier assay of this imposing brave, Le-wa-ni-ta gave him a straightforward gaze from her midnight eyes and replied without hesitation that she would go.

. . . Where should he call for her? . . .

Now, the tawny beauty flushed and stammered before answering. She, a guest of the Hotel Martha Washington, was not sure—even though her tepee stood many trees high—but that some shame dwelt in revealing its location. Down upon the banks of the Kissimmee River she would have perished before an Everglade brave could wring from her this casual information. It is the racial view-point.

Mr. Gale gave Miss Norby a translation of that conversation, as they strolled away from the Seminole display, that assuredly was not verbatim. The white woman, keenly appreciating the necessity of proving any lapse in her gallant's pre-marital devotions, laughingly suggested that he take the attractive Indian maid for a joy-ride in his high-powered car. This so fell in with Storm Bird's intention that he was nonplussed for a moment. Norma, noting his constrained air, quietly determined to put a tracer, bright and early the following Monday morning, on Robin's out-goings and in-comings. If her sudden fear proved groundless, he should be granted a tete-a-tete in the dim conservatory; or, better yet, somewhere out under the glorious Fall moon, a chance to declare himself.

At nine in the morning of that intervening Sunday, Mr. Gale guided the runabout to East Twenty-ninth street and took on his pretty, dark-eyed guest. She manifested no surprise at the up-to-date conveyance, and did not comment upon Ta-ron-a-mo's evident skill in manipulating it. He swathed her in a fur great-coat and, both goggled to the verge of anonymity, drove northward in a cautious zigzag of the more unfrequented streets. For this was the hour when the Norby town-car usually joined the motor throng along upper Fifth avenue or Riverside Drive; and it was well to take no chances of meeting it, should the French Snail diverge into some side street, to investigate the imaginary ills of magneto or carburetor where no traffic cop could complain.

On their arrival at the Zoological Park, Le-wani-ta was not greatly interested in the unwieldy elephant, the awkward giraffe, the torpid hippopotamus and the surly rhinoceros; but the lordly bison in their spacious enclosure won her sparkling admiration. At the bear dens, she became eloquent, which was a revelation to Mr. Gale, himself a professional orator of Tammany training.

"When 'Boy-Afraid-of-Darkness' was as yet an untried brave," quoth the Seminole maid, "he one day went deep into the tangled Everglades to court the young squaw, 'Magnolia Bud.' On the way, a black bear—larger than any here, and fierce of temper—barred his path.

"Proven warriors might honorably have turned aside from a dispute so uneven. Armed only with a tomahawk for trail-cutting, since his mission was one of love, the youth suddenly ran forward, and with one terrific blow brained the huge beast.

"For that deed, the war chieftains of all the Okechobee country met in council and renamed him, 'Chief-Without-Fear!' "

Storm Bird gazed speculatively upon the furry monsters caged before them, noted the armored skulls of the grizzlies, remembered that most American tribes have some such tradition of a legendary hunter's prowess—and smiled to himself.

Le-wa-ni-ta read his thought.

"Last night," she said, calmly, "I wore the black bear's teeth and claws about my throat. That brave tomahawk man was my father, and I am called by my own people, 'Magnolia Bloom,' after my dear dead mother."

In the lion house, they viewed the King of Beasts, the leopards, the South American jaguar and the Northern puma, and then joined a gaping throng before The Mandarin's cage.

Jungle-bred and a circus cast-off because of his man-killing record, the giant Korean tiger was this day in a dangerous mood. Snarling a menacing sing-song, to and fro he strode, alternately taking three outside steps with each ponderous fore-leg. His mincing hind feet lifted his narrow hips with a dandified swing, that but emphasized a ten-foot length and five hundred pounds of carnivorous fury.

"See! I will conquer this savage beast with the unaided human eye!" whispered Mr. Gale, facetiously, to his companion. "I'll wager your father would give much to get his skinning knife under that magnificent pelt!"

"Nay, this is not a fur-bearer, but a devil! Ah, he is watching us! Walk aside from me, and note if his gaze follows you!"

Storm Bird smilingly made the experiment. The amber eyes of The Mandarin blazed steadily after him, attracted by this spectator's height, if not his Oriental coloring. Then, the man raised his arm in mock defiance.

IN RESPONSE to the motion, the tiger launched himself insanely at the intervening steel-wire netting. It sang like a Titan's harp struck in all the strings. The crowd hurriedly pressed back. Women screamed aloud; men muttered ashamedly; children began to cry. A keeper ran to the cage with an iron goad.

Dissimulating his rage, the regal beast dropped back to the center of the den, sank to his haunches and yawned prodigiously. In the ensuing hush, he lowered his chin between his fore-paws, as if to show that marvelous face-mask and the peculiarity of his eye-pupils, which contracted in the light to dots instead of to slits like those of the other cats.

Then a small white terrier nosed open the rear main-door of the lion house, and began to trot along close to the cages. Reaching The Mandarin's quarters, the dog edged away tensely in a careful detour, and returned unconcernedly under the very noses of the Barbary lions to the front door. The incident was more impressive than a certified shikari's lecture on the terrible tiger character.

Ta-ron-a-mo, clutching Le-wa-ni-ta's arm protectingly, left with a careful rearward glance. An eon ago, he—a pre-Adamite armed with a stone-hatchet—might have had to defend his cave-woman from such a beast, striped as now, but saber-toothed.

The beaver pond, as one and a half million visitors confirm annually, lies in about the geographical center of the Park. Here, the Indian girl, trembling with eagerness at the "sign" of felled trees, gnawed stumps and the ingenious dam, was the first to sight "game." All to be seen of the shy animal was its twitching snout and beady eyes showing between the interstices of the lodge. It is doubtful if Norma Croxton Norby, even if aided by her opera glasses, could have made out that unobtrusive living patch against the deadwood background.

"Look, Storm Bird!" cried Le-wa-ni-ta, "Wild Beaver!"

"Might be a tame one!" insinuated Robin Gale, meanly.

"Nay, a captive. Were it not for his iron bars, Shovel Tail quickly would make a portage to the Hudson, and travel ever northward until the coal smoke of the pale-faces no more vexed his nostrils, and he sniffed the pine fires of your people—and mine."

"—and he said, 'Rest alone isn't enough for you'"

WHEN overwork, worry or illness have sapped your strength, rest and quiet will help you—but you still feel you need something to rouse the appetite—and above all, something to strengthen the enfeebled nerves.

And it is then that many physicians will advise rest—and Sanatogen. For they know that Sanatogen, combining the nutritive qualities of a food with the invigorating properties of a tonic, will reconstruct the wasted tissues, RE-build and RE-vitalize and help the enfeebled system gather up new energy and a new fund of health.

Sanatogen
THE FOOD-TONIC

Sir Gilbert Parker, M. P., the eminent novelist-statesman, writes from London:
"Sanatogen is to my mind a true food-tonic, feeding the nerves, increasing the energy and giving fresh vigor to the overworked body and mind."

Col. Henry Watterson, the famous Editor writes:
"I feel I owe it to truth to state that I have made a thorough trial of Sanatogen and that I have found it most efficacious and beneficent. I do not think I could have recovered my vitality, as I have done, without this Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerve centers."

Such has been the grateful experience of scores upon scores of others whose very names must be convincing. And remembering that over 21,000 physicians have testified in signed letters to the medical profession's belief in Sanatogen, you surely can have no hesitancy in turning to Sanatogen for the help that your system needs.

Sanatogen is sold by good druggists everywhere, in three sizes from $1.00 up.

The Hundred Ways Which Don't End Corns

Perhaps you say—"I've tried and tried, but found nothing that ends a corn."

You might keep trying for years, Madam. There are a hundred ways which don't. Most of them are very much alike.

But remember this:

There is one way which has removed 70 million corns. It is now removing half the corns that grow.

It's a plaster which contains a bit of wondrous wax. It ends the corn pain in a jiffy. It ends the corn itself in two days. It gently loosens the corn until it comes out without any pain or soreness.

When you merely pare corns—

When you use some folderol—

Bear this in mind. There are folks all around you—users of Blue-jay—who never suffer corns. You are wronging yourself when you fail to do what they do.

Storm Bird risked a glance into the glowing, dark orbs; they returned it understandingly, and across his vision flashed the trails of two destinies. One led to a rich white woman, who would bring to him all the luxurious appointments of civilization and the cumulative interests of her thirty-five years. The other pointed toward this unendowed Seminole girl with the one warm claim of her twenty summers. And she would lead him to the Everglade crudities of the tepee, the half-cooked food, the harsh struggle for even that poor existence—and the companionship of bucks boasting a three hundred word vocabulary.

Howbeit, pending any vital decision, there was his vengeance to be sated against the maid for her insolence of the preceding evening. The way, considering his city guile, could be made as pleasant to him as it were perilous to her.

"Magnolia Bloom," the man remarked, suddenly; "has ever a man kissed you?"

"Nay, I am not pledged," she returned, simply; "and my lips shall be given to none but a free Indian of the open, a hunter or a trapper, I am a true daughter of my tribe, and not an imitator of—"

"Oho!" interrupted Storm Bird, craftily; "and what reward shall be given for one of these wild beavers; or, are your words mere pappoose chatter?"

"Aha, my wise friend of the crowded town!" the girl rejoined, and her next words showed that there can be in Floridan Everglades a sophistication almost equal to Broadway's. "Fetch me a fresh-caught pelt from Shovel Tail, and I shall pay for it so generously that you will sicken with dismay, when that pale-face squaw yields her chill lips!"

Mr. Gale safely returned the surprising damsel to her hotel, and begged another meeting for the next morning. "To-night," said he, serenely, "I shall capture the beaver, and tomorrow we two will go a-motoring out into the open country that you crave. There, that pouting mouth may, perhaps, learn some softer, sweeter language than the unkind sarcasms of your sex!"

Le-wa-ni-ta mocked him. "Oh, imitation Pale-Face!" she exclaimed, gaily; "you will come again on the morrow with more great words, that is all. You know this vast city's countless streets, that cross and curve upon each other like sunning snakes. Let that suffice! No men, red or white, can have full knowledge of both pave and wilderness. So, do not lose yourself on the vast shores of Beaver Pond, and break the icy heart of that yellow-haired foster-mother who adopted you when a boy! And, were this Florida, I would look for much rain before midnight, and after."

THE sky was clear; but Robin Gale dutifully went to his garage for the toy tonneau with top and side-curtains, and then drove downtown to the Bowery, that complaisant thoroughfare that even on the Sabbath tries to be all things to all men. There, in a curiosity shop, he found half a dozen otter traps of ample strength to hold Shovel Tail; a hunter's axe and a skinning knife.

These contraband articles remained concealed under the rear seats until nearly midnight, Mr. Gale meantime attending upon Miss Norby to, at, and from a sacred concert. Then, he arrayed himself in rougher clothes and a cap, and burned more gasoline Bronxward. At an inconspicuous spot on the Boston Post Road inside the Zoological Park confines, he turned out the front and rear lights, and drove his car under the shelter of a great tree. Rain already had begun to fall smartly.

Thereafter, the carrying out of the enterprise was largely a matter of caution, against the faint possibility that a night watchman might brave the downpour. Storm Bird, with a glad resurgence of his boyhood's cunning woodcraft, selected spot close to the beaver's lodge, and prepared a water set for the first trap.

Strictly by sense of touch in the dark he fashioned a mud platform. The chain was easily fastened to a fallen log close at hand. A stray stick, smeared with castor and stuck upright beside the open steel jaws, served for a lure. Smiling boyishly to himself at this congenial task, Ta-ron-a-mo stood up to stretch his unaccustomed muscles before placing the next trap.

Afar off, he heard the sharp, excited barking of a small dog, evidently headed in his direction. The animal seemed to be following some one or something that fled swiftly before it. Suddenly the dog's triumphant note changed to alarm, as if pursued had turned pursuer; and then an agonized canine yelp ended in the very middle.

The Algonquin knew. Casting the extra traps from him into the deeper water of Beaver Pond, where they fell with a great splash above the rain-patter, he rapidly stole back toward the concealed runabout. Utilizing the heavier shadows and carefully keeping the tree trunks between himself and the animal houses, his plan was to start the powerful motor, without stopping to ignite the signal lamps, slip in the clutch, open the muffler cut-out, and roar away to electric-lighted streets—and safety.

He reached his car, but not in time. Down the old Post Road came The Mandarin, head swinging low, whining his sing-song hunting tune and trotting mincingly on the wet macadam. He showed no surprise at sight of the intercepted man, merely slackening his pace to a determined walk. And this, suggesting a premeditation going back to the afternoon's incident, turned Storm Bird cold to the vitals.

Thirty feet away, the tiger crouched flat and motionless, gathering force and direction for his charge. Then should come the tragic capture of that two-legged, trembling thing, the tearing of flesh, breaking of bones and a horrible mouthing.

WITH the kaleidoscopic memory of the doomed, the Algonquin saw himself again a lad among the pineclad peaks and upon the crystal lakes of the Adirondacks, fishing, hunting, trapping.

Softly, caressingly, his fingers sought the handle of the hunter's axe, and where he had been ice, he turned to instant fire. Gathering himself, with an animal, raging grunt, he rushed to meet the oncoming brute.

Only the fraction of a second, less than the space of a foot did The Mandarin miscalculate through that unexpected attack. It was enough for the desperate Algonquin. Down, with vicious force, whipped his right arm; and the edged steel met its mark fairly, cleaving through hair and hide and skull to the tiger's brain. Rolling over and over, the great cat coughed and choked its life away at the flooded roadside. By main strength, Ta-ron-a-mo hoisted first the heavy forequarters of the beast, and then the lean rump into the toy tonneau, covering all completely with lap-robe and rubber-blanket.

And by two o'clock in the morning—the Hotel Martha Washington being, ordinarily, at that unseemly hour an impassable Eden—Mr. Gale used golden words and money with the doorman to get this cryptic message to Miss Le-wa-ni-ta: "The reward . . . Tame Beaver!"

THE Indian maid came down, wide-eyed and wondering, in a quarter of the time her civilized sisters would have taken. On the sidewalk, she did not hesitate, but obediently took her place in the front seat.

"You do not demand to see the fresh-caught beaver pelt?" the man remarked inquiringly.

"A chief's son," she answered, softly, "would not lie to gain his wish."

"I, who was an untried brave, am now a chief!" he said; and at his tone her heart leaped gladly, because no harm comes to a trusting maid from the tried warrior.

Soon the thoroughfare they traversed became quite narrow, mayhap owing to the fact that the buildings on either side towered into the clouds.

"This is not the road to the open country!" said Le-wa-ni-ta, shyly.

"Nay; lower Broadway! We go by ferry across the Great River."

And in a sleepy, residential Jersey City street, Robin Gale stopped his car under an arc light, a block or so from a destination selected by him.

"Magnolia Bloom," he said, gravely; "just a little way ahead is a pale-face, pastor to whom I telephoned before awakening you. He will make you my wife after the white man's custom. What is your answer?"

"If you have fetched me the beaver pelt, yes!"

"Nay, I did not get it!"

"Then my answer is no! Take me back to my tepee, Tame Beaver! I shall die before my lips shall be the reward of a false brave who speaks with a double tongue!"

Storm Bird did not wince at her scorn. Instead, proudly he reached into the tonneau, withdrew the coverings and lifted a side-curtain. Under the street light she saw the gaunt carcass of The Mandarin, with the hunter's axe blade still imbedded in the grisly skull.

Le-wa-ni-ta would have kneeled and kissed Ta-ron-a-mo's hands.

"Oh, Chief!" she cried, in utter humility; "no more are you 'Wings-that-flee-from-the-rain,' but 'Eagle-who-loves-the-lightning!' And I—I am only fit to be your slave!"

"Nay, but my wife, my sweetheart, my queen!" he replied, lifting her to his lips. . . . "And when we have been made man and wife, I shall caress your feet."

Never, since six fingered riders mounted two-toed horses to hunt the mastodon, was there so extraordinary a honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Robin Gale drove straightway, in the joyous rain, from their wedding ceremony to the drab Hackensack Meadows, and disposed of The Mandarin. His formidable teeth were knocked out with the axe, the huge claws chopped loose; and then, the skinning knife brought away that splendid pelt from whiskered muzzle to fawn-tipped tail. After the royal brute had been entirely shorn, the bridegroom carefully weighted the ruddy form and rolled it to a sink-hole in the swamp.

"And now, oh, wife of my heart!" said Lightning Eagle, "the Bronx Zoo shall be telephoned that, from our automobile, we saw a huge tiger leap into the Hudson River, swim but a few strokes and sink, never to reappear!"

"Ah, my one love! But what of the blonde squaw?"

"She? She is as the passing of a fleecy cloud on a sunny day! And for many moons no one may know of your elopement with me. I paid well the pale-face holy man to keep it secret. As for The Mandarin, this downpour will wash away all his crimson trail, so that naught shall seek us out for tonight's work but . . . Love!"

BUT, at daybreak, there were clues in the Bronx Park that the rain could not efface—a small dead terrier near the Lion House, and a broken-legged beaver squealing for dear life in an otter trap. An unctuously circulated official report averred that the giant Korean tiger, succumbing in the night to an infectious disease, had been hurriedly laid away. Thus, the Zoo management bettered Mr. Robin Gale's invention.

But, alas! the afternoon newspapers succeeded in doing that which Miss Norby's detectives could not. And when front pages erupted into scareheads and pictures of a jilted pale-face fianceé, redskin Cupids, Minnehaha and Hiawatha, tigers and beavers, Norma telephoned Mr. Wadsworth Nicholas Schuyler for reinforcement against the importunate reporters.

"I much dislike the doocid notoriety," he drawled; "but send the writer-fellows to me, and I'll deny everything for the honor of the family. Your father is an ancient crab for scuttling off to the Bermudas in this emergency.

"And by the way, speaking of Indians, how about a substitute for 'Rain-water-in-the-countenance'? Why not take me! Tell you what! I'm game to forego a church affair and, I'll do a Lochinvar with you into Jersey just to get hunk!"

And Miss Norma Croxton Norby, of Park Avenue, et cetera, yielded that "yes," which might as well have been said to the same patient cavalier seventeen years previously.

Making Men Over at Sing Sing

abnormal creatures that the law-abiding picture them to be and that, indeed, they were.

The League's delegates, who also serve as squad chiefs, take the prisoners out of their cells in the morning, marshal them to meals and to work, supervise them while at play, and at night return them to the cells. Naturally, they are unarmed; but their authority is respected because they are the personal representatives of the men and because the latter have given their word of honor to act in harmony for the good of all.

This team work has made it possible to allow unlimited conversation, the frequent writing of letters and receiving of visitors, reading of daily newspapers, the freedom of the yard whenever the shops are not busy and all day Sunday, baseball, smoking for ten minutes after meals (to minimize the danger from surreptitious smoking in the shops) and other human liberties denied under the old system. The immediate material results have been the improved health of the men and a marvelous increase in their efficiency. Some of the shops have an output 50 per cent per capita higher than ever before. The moral gain has been incalculable. Visitors during the past four months have seldom failed to comment that the men seemed clean-minded and happy, in marked contrast to the inmates of the ordinary State prison.

The court punishes offenders by suspending them from the privileges of the League, but some of the minor cases never go before the judges. As in the outside world, the leaders know how to suppress the trouble-maker.

In the past, the average number of attempts at escape from Sing Sing was one every three weeks. Since the birth of the League, not a single break has been made up to the present writing. Even the so-called hardened cases feel that they would be guilty of unforgivable treachery to those left behind if they were to jeopardize the League by an act that, if successful, could benefit only themselves.

NOT long ago, Warden Osborne had a conference with a committee of inmates that included several "long-termers" and former "bad men." When it grew late, he invited the entire body to adjourn to his residence, to continue the discussion over a cup of coffee. They followed him, leaving the prison behind them as naturally and simply as might a party of visitors, though some of them had not been outside the walls for years. It was a warm evening. The windows of the rooms were open. The leaves of the trees rustled invitingly, and the road to liberty could be seen winding like a white ribbon across the hills. If the warden thought of these details and the opportunity they afforded his guests, it was subconsciously. He had long since decided that if convicts were treated as human beings they could be trusted to play fair, and he was too wrapped up in the question under discussion to think of anything else. When the time came, however, to say good-night, he noticed that several of the men, absorbed and silent, were staring through the windows at the stars. A little startled, he tested them frankly.

"Men, has it occured to you this evening," he said, "that there has been nothing to prevent you from taking French leave? There are no keepers watching the warden's house."

They were moved beyond conventional expressions of loyalty. Some smiled and shook their heads meaningly. One young fellow stammered as he murmured: "Yes, Mr. Osborne, we was taking it all in. Looks pretty good, the open country, don't it?" Then one and all they rose and filed back in orderly fashion to the confinement that is the greatest hardship that can be inflicted on living creatures. They had been tempted—who would not have been in their circumstances?—but their solemn promises and their duty toward the League had become more important to them than physical liberty.

Perhaps some readers will think that the devotion of the convicts to the League, apart from what they get out of it as individuals, is exaggerated. But the authorities offer abundant evidence to justify their optimism. One of the men attached to the executive staff is an ex-pickpocket, whose prison record began with the House of Refuge, was continued in the State Reformatory, and has just been completed by a term in Sing Sing. Until the movement came into being, he had no idea of being anything but a thief. Out of prison he had been hounded as an outcast and in prison he had been brutalized by cruel punishments. The Mutual Welfare League had brought relief during only the last part of his last "bit." Yet so profound was the effect produced upon him by the revelation that society was actually willing to allow the convict to make good that he has vowed his life to reform work. Incidentally, his position in the warden's department involves a considerable financial sacrifice. Money, he feels, is no consideration to set against an honest career and the opportunity to serve a cause in which he believes.

An inmate officer of the League recently gave the prison authorities a new lease of faith and courage. He had joined in a spirit of skepticism, and had never concealed the opinion that there was no future for him but a return to a life of crime. His term was nearly up, and he went so far as to tell the warden that he had made all arrangements to join the old gang in New York as soon as he was released. Ten days later he stopped the warden and said:

"Mr. Osborne, I've just sent my friends a crooked letter (a "crooked" letter is one that has been smuggled out of the prison, thus escaping the official censorship). I wrote them that they needn't expect to have me with them. I'm going to quit that game, I see very clearly that the officers of the League have got to go straight."

Another convict, whose reputation was that of a desperate character, confessed that he had cherished a dream of revenge to the exclusion of everything else. Believing that two former pals had been responsible for sending him to Sing Sing (he was in for murder with extenuating circumstances), he had proposed when his term was up to arrange for the future of his sister, then find his enemies if it took years to do it, kill them both and commit suicide.

"Why do you tell me this, D——?" the warden asked.

"So's you might understand what sort of guy I was before the League came," he answered. "I'm not going to kill those men. Revenge is no good. The League has taught me that."

IT would take a hopeless pessimist to deny that the men whose cases have been cited are less dangerous than they would have been if society had bludgeoned them, morally as well as physically, to the bitter end. Under the old regime they could not have left prison other than criminals more hardened than when they entered, whereas now they promise to be desirable citizens. And—most hopeful point of all—this change has come from within. Virtue thrust upon men is like a coat of veneer that is apt to crack and peel off under stress. But self-redemption, such as the Mutual Welfare League encourages, is usually permanent.

Mr. Osborne believes that a question vitally important if prisons are to develop their full capacity as agencies of reform is the indeterminate sentence. He says: "The law as it stands does not content itself with punishing crime. It also attempts to fix the amount of guilt and administer the exact amount of revenge. It is humanly impossible to do this with justice. And if, as enlightened Twentieth Century beings, we repudiate the idea of revenge and accept the theory that offenders should be sent to prison in order to reform them, it remains impossible for a judge to decide by the facts of the crime how long reform will take. That is a problem for psychologists; they should approach it soberly and dispassionately, after they have long had the individual case under observation. Prison wardens and their associates should be tried experts in criminal psychology and it should be in their power to say when a

Beware of Imitations

Mr. Busby's Telephone Affinity

the operator feelingly. "Honest, you'd better find out about him. I think he's off his head."

The day after that, the House Physician having looked Mr. Busby over and having announced he was quite sane, the Superintendent posted a new rule in all the hospital rooms. It read:

> USE OF TELEPHONES
> Occupants of Private Rooms may have ordinary use of Telephones at the usual charge of $2.00 per week. A charge of 5 cents per message will be made for all messages over ten per day. If to Brooklyn or Queens, 5 cents extra per message will be charged.

Miss Loring read the new rule to Mr. Busby and he grinned.

"That's all right," he said. "I'll make a cash deposit if they want it."

Mr. Busby's progress through the telephone book was not rapid. Time and again he had to hear the reply "Line busy!" and frequently he was made to wait because the hospital operator was herself busy handling some other connection. He happened upon some apartment houses where he was made to wait while the operator called one flat after another to make sure whether there was or was not a Helen in the building. The hospital operator became listless in putting through Mr. Busby's Melrose calls. Before he reached the C's Mr. Busby was himself growing discouraged. When he called the first name beginning with C he ran his thumb along the edges of the uncalled pages. There were eight hundred and sixty two pages still to be done. Any other man would have faltered. Mr. Busby plunged into the C's with dogged persistence. The entire hospital was soon talking about him and his Melrose calls. When Miss Loring ventured into the corridors other nurses asked "Has your broken leg found his Helen yet?"

"He is still calling," said Miss Loring and blushed.

"Who is it he is trying to find?" they asked her. "Is it his wife? Funny if he don't know his wife's telephone number. It looks queer, don't it?"

"I don't think he is married," said Miss Loring and blushed again.

"Is little angel face jealous?" asked one of the older nurses.

"I am not!" scoffed Miss Loring, but she was in a mild way. Until he had begun calling Melrose Mr. Busby had been jestingly pleasant. Now it was "Melrose this," and "Melrose that" all day. He no longer teased her. He had no time but for "This is Mr. Roger Busby. Is there a lady there named Helen?"

MR. BUSBY, the longer he worked through the telephone directory, became more and more discouraged and in the same proportion keen to rediscover the mysterious Helen. It was evident she was a most exceptional woman. She was a woman of wit, of cleverness and a sense of humor. She was a woman with a keen knowledge of the world but unspoiled by it. Evening after evening, when nine o'clock came and Mr. Busby felt he should no longer bother the various Melrose subscribers he lay back comfortably on his pillows and thought of Helen. He thought over what she had said and what he had said and what he would say when he rediscovered her. He planned clever questions that should win from her facts about herself without any suspicion on her part that he was pumping her.

Mr. Busby was, in fact, falling more and more in love with Helen. From the material of their brief conversation he built up a picture of Helen. He fitted this Helen into his life at Riverbank. He saw her one of his "set" there, holding her own in grace and wit. He saw her in his home. He saw his friends warmly accepting Helen Busby, and Helen Busby forming the nucleus of every interesting group. He saw how she danced how she smiled, decided what she would doubtless read. He imagined what she would wear and how she would look in it.

His broken leg was knitting nicely and not giving him much pain at any time and the House Surgeon assured him he would be able to leave the hospital on schedule, if not a few days earlier than he had any right to expect. Mr. Busby therefore planned just what he would do. He would carry the telephone conversations along lightly, saying nothing about the time when he would leave the hospital, and when he did leave he would go straight to Helen: He would arrive with a smile, and he would send in his card, and Helen would come with a smile. Then, artfully, he would begin the real courtship and conduct it so delicately that it would be well along before Helen realized his intentions were anything but friendly.

But the Melrose calls yielded no Helen. Little Miss Loring could not, of course, be utterly ignored. Mr. Busby—as was his custom—made a joke of the serious task he had set himself. He would say, when Miss Loring came to remove his tray, 'And now we will,Helen awhile," or "Just hand me the telephone; I'll shoot a few more arrows in the air." Miss Loring made some suggestions, offering them timidly, as that he call at random rather than consecutively. She was a believer in chance. She offered, when not needed elsewhere, to hold the telephone book and call the numbers to him. She even offered to take a Melrose list and call the numbers from the nurses' home when she was off duty. Mr. Busby did not favor this, but it was not long before Miss Loring was, as it were, a conspirator with Mr. Busby in the hunt for the lost Helen. Mr. Busby loved to turn things over and over in his mind, considering them half humorously—which is the best way to discover truth—and he could do this best when he talked. He used Miss Loring as a screen against which to throw his thoughts so that he could get a better idea of their values. Her replies to what he said did not particularly interest him. Some of them were worth while, most of them were not, but her sympathy for his search for Helen rendered the endless calling of Melrose numbers less wearisome. Miss Loring was undoubtedly pretty—undoubtedly attractive, in a demure way, he ruminated.

FOR several days after he was permitted to get out of bed Mr. Busby shuffled about his room and up and down the corridor with a crutch. Then he had a short period when he discarded the crutch and used a cane. He walked because the surgeon advised it, but only enough to give his leg proper exercise. He returned to the telephone as soon as he could.

It was natural that as the time when he could leave the hospital approached Mr. Busby should grow impatient—more impatient—to discover Helen. It would be almost a catastrophe not to have found her by the time he was able to walk out of the hospital door, but Fate decided that. Mr. Busby at last found himself so fit that he had no remaining excuse for lingering. He was able to walk and to go up and down stairs without a cane, and he telephoned to a hotel and engaged a room—a room with a telephone, of course. He walked to the office and asked for his bill.

"All paid," said the bookkeeper promptly, when she learned his name.

"Paid? How can that be?"

It seemed that the owner of the skidding automobile that had knocked Mr. Busby down had arranged for all that. He had left money for all the expenses. He had also left his card, asking that it be given to Mr. Busby when he was discharged from the hospital. He wished Mr. Busby to call at his office and settle the matter of damages amicably.

"So it is all paid," said the bookkeeper, and then she hesitated. "Unless——" she said.

"Unless what?"

"Unless—I don't know whether he meant to include such things as telephone extras. The patients don't usually call quite as often as——"

"Quite right!" said Mr. Busby. "I'll pay the telephone bill myself."

He pursed his lips and whistled when he saw the footing of the long, itemized bill, but it was not as heavy as might have been expected. He paid and took the receipted bill. It covered three or four sheets of narrow ruled paper and he glanced at it again. The first call recorded at the top of the first sheet (for there had been no charge for the early Manhattan calls) was Midvale 0423!

Mr. Busby gasped. His hand trembled a little. He turned and hurried to his room with a reckless speed that gave no evidence he had ever had a broken leg. Miss Loring was standing by the window, looking out at the tree-tops, which were now in full leaf. She turned and smiled as he entered, and then looked out of the window again. Mr. Busby walked to the bedside table and picked up the telephone. He steadied the base of the iron instrument against his chest and placed his hand on the receiver. Against the light of the window Miss Loring's trim little figure was silhouetted neatly. Her uniform fitted snugly from neck to waist and outlined her well-developed proportions. Her little head, in the attractive cap, was very pretty indeed, seen thus from behind, with the light glowing through stray wisps of hair. Mr. Busby removed the receiver from the hook. He opened his mouth to call Helen's number.

"Hello!" he said, and then he paused.

What did he know about Helen, anyway? He had heard her voice, and once only. What did he know about her? She might be some withered old person. She might be some pert, forward, cross-eyed young thing. If he called Midvale 0423 he might be calling some wearisome incubus to cling about his neck—some bore that he could never in view of his forcing himself upon her in this way, get rid of. It was one thing to telephone to an unknown when bedfast and quite another to venture into such an affair when his legs were able to carry him to wherever Midvale 0423 might be and when his calling the number imposed upon him the necessity of following up the matter like a gentleman. Miss Loring moved slightly. It was hardly more than the shifting of her weight from one foot to the other.

"Hello! Hello!" called the hospital telephone operator. "Do you want a number?"

"Never mind now," said Mr. Busby.

He replaced the telephone on the table and hung up the receiver. He walked around the bed and to the window. He was so much taller than Miss Loring that he could look down upon the cap on her head. She bent her head forward a little so that he should not see there were tears in her eyes. Mr. Busby let his hand fall on her hand, where it lay on the window-sill, and the career of one trained nurse ended right there!

And never—no, never!—did Mrs. Roger Busby tell her husband that while he was so monotonously calling Melrose numbers she had known, all the while, that he could have learned the number he wanted bv merely asking the hospital office.

Country Town Sayings

By Ed. Howe, of Atchison

BOOKISHNESS is excused in a school teacher as part of her trade, but there are a lot of people who think bookishness is a polite name for shiftlessness.

Some women when they see a man, have a look in their faces indicating that they are commissioned to avenge the wrongs of their sex for a good many years back.

When Love spoils, it is about the worst mess imaginable.

A woman usually has enough to eat; but she rarely has enough clothes.

Considering that they never learn or voice anything new, the bird singers are mighty popular.

Man is still a savage to the extent that he has least respect for those things that can't hurt him.

It is always the next administration that will save the country.

Fortunately, those who tear down are not as numerous as those who build up. Ants never quarrel with bees. Both are too busy.

Mothers are most apt to be reminiscent of the days when they were young and pretty girls and everybody paid them attention, while fathers seem to run more to jokes. And between mother's reminiscenses and father's jokes, the children are usually worn out by the time they leave home.

In nearly every mail, a farmer gets a request in a one-cent envelope that he help some agricultural paper attain a million circulation.

People who are careful at the beginning of a transaction rarely get the worst of it.

No one seems to entirely agree with another. When the average man goes to heaven, he will say to St. Peter: "I don't, of course, agree with all you say, but some of your ideas are O. K."

You are a stranger to me, but I know one thing about you: you think you look young for your years.

Love is too generous: it gives worlds when it is as poor as a church mouse.

Making Men Over at Sing Sing

criminal can be dismissed as cured. The judge should merely sentence the wrongdoer to remain in exile from society until he has shown by his conduct that he is fit to return to it.

"There are many men serving life sentences who should have been released long ago. There are others, constitutional degenerates who by the nature of their offences cannot be committed for more than a year or two, but whose indefinite incarceration would give them a chance of salvation and protect society. The indeterminate sentence is the answer. I hope some day to see the principle accepted by every State in the Union."

It may be asked whether there is danger, after the first novelty of the Mutual Welfare League has worn off, of unprincipled convicts building up secret organizations that will enable them grossly to abuse their privileges. On the whole, the warden thinks that this cannot occur. The strong men among the prisoners see clearly where their interests lie, and the strong are guiding the weak in Sing Sing to a much greater degree than in any free commonwealth.

Mr. Osborne cites the following incident as illustrating both past and present, in relation to the jailer as well as to the convict.

"A prisoner, who I shall call Sing Sing No. 5,001, excited my special sympathy because of his shocking physical and mental condition. I did not need to be told that he was a cocaine fiend and that he was still getting the "dope." He had joined the League eagerly enough, but had failed to benefit by it.

"One day he showed me a gold watch, his last possession.

"'I'm afraid, Warden,' he said brokenly, 'I'm afraid the screw's going to get that.'

"He meant that he would be unable to resist the temptation to exchange it for cocaine, and as I had not located the subterranean channels through which the drug was being smuggled in, I could do nothing to prevent it. In time, he stopped me again to tell me that the watch was gone.

"'I'm sorry,' I answered, feeling with a certain sinking of the heart that the case was hopeless.

"He more or less passed out of my mind until I ran across him weeks later—a new man, forty pounds heavier, bright of eye and an enthusiastic worker in the League. I was astounded, but before I could ask a question, he declared, beaming. 'Warden, there isn't an ounce of dope in Sing Sing, and I've got my watch back.'

"'How did that happen?' I asked.

"'The screw just brought it back. He said that since every one else was square it was time for the keepers to be on the level, too!'"

Make Your KODAK Autographic

The biggest new thing, the most important photographic development in film photography in two decades, is the Autographic Kodak. It makes the record authentic; answers the questions: When did I make this? Where was this taken? Every negative that is worth taking is worth such date and title, and with the Autographic Kodak you make the record, almost instantly, on the film.

It's all very simple. Open the door in the back of Kodak, write the desired data on the red paper with pencil or stylus, expose for a second or so, close door. When the film is developed, the records will appear on the intersection between the films.

This autographic feature having been incorporated in all of the most important Kodak models, we have now arranged to take care of our old customers by supplying Autographic Backs for all Kodaks of these models.

The old camera can be brought up to date at small cost, and there is no extra charge for autographic film. Make your Kodak Autographic.
